Now let us read the confidential memorandum of March, 1915, which was presented to the German Chancellor, von Bethmann Hollweg. The report says:

> The manufacture of shells has required quantities of iron and steel of which no one could have had an idea before. * * * If the production of pig iron and steel had not been doubled since the month of August, the continuance of the war would have been impossible.
> As raw material for the manufacture of these quantities of pig iron and steel the "minette" (Lorraine ore) takes a place of greater and greater importance, because this ore can alone be extracted in our country in rapidly augmenting quantities. The "minette" covers at this moment 60 to 80 per cent. of the manufacture of pig iron and steel.
> If the production of "minette" had been disturbed the war would be as good as lost. (Translated from the French.)

The report goes on to say with much force that if French troops had been able to advance into Lorraine five to ten miles beyond the frontier, or had even held the frontier, the war would have ended from Germany's lack of iron. Verdun is referred to as the "bridgehead" of the iron region, and the following conclusion is arrived at:

> The security of the German Empire in a future war necessitates therefore imperatively the possession of all the mines of "minette," and comprises the fortresses of Longwy and Verdun, without which this region cannot be defended.

It was shortly after the submission of this memorandum to the German Chancellor that the great drive on Verdun was begun. This gives special significance to the recently published statement of M. Pichon, the then French Minister of Foreign Affairs, since verified by the ex-Chancellor, von Bethmann Hollweg, that Baron von Schoen, the German Ambassador at Paris, had instructions to demand of France the handing over to Germany of the fortresses of Verdun and Toul for the period of the war in case France should agree to remain neutral. As Verdun is the "bridgehead" of the main "minette" area, Toul serves a like purpose with regard to the small outlying section of "minette," situated a short distance to the northward of Nancy, an area which has continued to remain in French hands.

In the minette iron district is therefore the Achilles heel of the German monster. Once driven from this area, Germany would be forced to an unconditional surrender, as she has herself admitted. Development of the iron in Ukraine, with which a "peace" has recently been concluded, is not possible on a scale commensurate with Germany's needs without several years of development, and the question of transportation across the 1,200 miles which separate the district from the industrial section of Westphalia and Rhenish Prussia would have to be solved. Should the attempt be made to bring the ore in sufficient quantity from the equally distant Kiruna mines of Swedish Lapland, means would have to be found by the Allies, as they have been found before, to interrupt the Baltic traffic.

It is hoped, therefore, that the specious argument which will soon be put forward in the interests of a "German peace" will be met by a knowledge of the facts.

NO SOCIALIST CONFERENCE.

The View That the Kaiser Cannot Be Beaten by More Talk.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read the letter to the National Socialist Party of Great Britain, dated Jan. 11, 1918, and signed by John Spargo as Chairman and J. G. Phelps Stokes as Secretary of the Social Democratic League of America. This letter appeared in Justice of London on Feb. 23. It is a reply to a letter from the former body proposing the creation of a new international Socialist organization. It suggests, as a counterproposal, the formation of a group of allied Socialists as a "sort of left wing" within the international, and further suggests an international conference of allied Socialists either at the conclusion of peace or earlier, and "immediately prior to the holding of the regular International Socialist Congress."

The writers explicitly say that they "have expressed their own views upon their individual responsibility." Nevertheless, from the fact that the letter twice affirms their official designations—once in the text and again with the signature—a representative character is necessarily given to the expression. As it does not represent my own views, nor those of any other former Socialist Party member with whom I am acquainted, I feel obliged to record publicly my strong dissent.

There is no international now in existence. The old international was broken to pieces when the German Army (composed largely of professed Socialists) invaded and pillaged Belgium. The Socialist Party of Germany has never denounced this act, but has, instead, enthusiastically supported the Government which perpetrated it. There may be a new international formed after the war, but it is unthinkable that for many years thereafter there can be any fraternization between the working class of the allied countries and that of the Central Powers. Any proposal which assumes the old international to be still in existence is self-condemned.

The proposal of an "international conference of Socialists from the allied countries, and if possible those from every country who share our views," is equally objectionable. Conceding the entire good faith of Messrs. Spargo and Stokes in this matter, I must yet say that this proposal is fraught with vast mischief. Would this conference include the party Socialists of this country who have so assiduously made themselves the tools of Prussianism? Would it include the minority groups of Germany, who, though opposing the German Government, stand for what would be essentially a German peace? Would it include the "defeatist" element of Italy or the minority groups of Norway and Sweden, whose doctrinaire pacifism plays directly into the hands of the Kaiser? Would it include the precious Lenine and Trotzky, whose betrayal of the cause of democracy has given new victories to German arms on the Italian and French fronts?

There is no need of any conference of any kind except among those elements who are sincerely and determinedly bent on the defeat of the German military power. Whatever adds unity and strength to the carrying out of that purpose is to be supported, and whatever tends to delay its accomplishment is to be unsparingly condemned. The notion that talk, and more talk, and still more talk, can interpose a barrier against Prussian bayonets and Prussian cannon is a delusion that dies hard, even after what has happened in Russia. With the world on fire, and with democracy threatened with extinction by the triumph of German military force, the one defensive need is action. The proposal for fresh palavers, however sincerely meant, tends only to further triumphs for Kaiserism.

WILSON'S SPEECH SOBERS GERMANS

Vorwaerts Says It Is Victory in the West or National Defeat.

SEES GREAT TASKS AHEAD

The President Has Made Impossible Any "Peace by Understanding," It Declares.

By GEORGE RENWICK.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, April 9.—"No other solution of the world struggle is to be seen than the hoped-for complete German victory in the west," says the Berlin Vorwärts in a mournful article on President Wilson's Baltimore speech. The tone of the speech, the same journal says, "leaves us in no doubt as to where we stand. Either the war must at an early period be finished in the west by military means or else our future will lie dark before us. Indeed, our future will not be bright, even if a successful conclusion is reached, but will be much less so if that decision is not achieved."

The semi-official comment on Wilson's speech is vastly different from that of which we have unfortunately read too often in the press. It shows what a lost war would mean for Germany. These are unusually serious words. In January, 1917, we were accustomed to read in the German papers that England would lay down her arms on account of the U-boat war in a few months. The American war menace was said to be only a bluff and in no way to be taken seriously, because before America could even make the attempt to help the Entente, the war would be over. Had those prophecies been fulfilled the bloody struggle on the west front would not have taken place.

The Vörwarts, however, is thankful in a way to the President for his speech, for it reminds the Germans of what, under the influence of their newspapers, they had been too apt to forget: namely, that 'war is not like plucking cherries. It warns its readers that stupendous tasks still lie ahead and that though the German people have less reason to despair of the outcome than others engaged in war, there is no reason for them to regard the coming events with lightheartedness or presumption. It points to the great force, moral and material, with which America can support the Entente, and then goes on to say:

"President Wilson's speech leaves us in no doubt that the bridges to peace by understanding have for the present been broken by the Brest-Litovsk treaty. Wilson, the undisputed political leader of the Entente, will not recognise that peace and sets before Germany the choice either to retreat before his threats of force or accept the combat of force with him. Thus the war has been forced to development in which only the means of material forces count."

Cite Holland Against Wilson.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 9.—As President Wilson's speech at Baltimore has not yet been published in full in Germany, the newspapers refrain from extensive comment.

The Lokal Anzeiger says that the whole world knows that the present battle in the west is the result of the Entente's desire to fight, and that Wilson could have influenced the Entente, had he really desired peace, but he did nothing to prevent the Versailles decisions. It adds that he belied all his tirades about right and humanity by his course toward Holland. It goes on:

"He now calls openly for the utmost force and so finally clearly defines America's and the Allies' policy. Germany will not allow the yoke of force to be applied to her. For this reason she fights her heroic war. Wilson's speech was at best propaganda for the war loan, and it shows what defeat would signify for Germany."

The German press is not losing an opportunity of using the requisitioning of Dutch ships as propaganda against the Entente. This and the fact that Holland is obliged to feed many foreigners are favorite topics.

The Weser Zeitung asserts that the Dutch Government has informed the British Government that it must send supplies of foodstuffs for the French, Belgian, American, and Russian subjects in Holland, but that no answer has been received yet.

The newspaper states that Germany is ready to comply with such a demand, and that steps have already been taken by Berlin.

Up to the present nothing is known of these reported demands by officials of allied circles with the exception of the feeding of prisoners of war.

SAYS AMERICA DISSEMBLES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 9.—The Frankfurter Zeitung devotes two columns to a review of America's first war year. Beginning with the alleged reasons for America's intervention in the war, the paper asserts that this was largely due to fear of Germany and German world supremacy.

Although America loves to cloak her policy in rhetorical phrases such as "making the world safe for democracy," the paper says, "this phrase envelops two ideas—one being imperialistic with a fear of Germany in Central and South America, East Asia, and the Pacific, and the other being the fear of German militarism. The Zeitung says that America was opposed to the German policy even before the war. The paper admits that the German foreign policy may have had its faults, but says that it is exaggeration to assert that it menaced democracy, and it alleges that the most ardent democrats in America were opposed to the war.

GOVERNMENT ACTS TO STOP MUNITIONS FIRES

Fire Protection Bureau Established to Inspect Plants Having War Work.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—To minimize the possibilities of fires in munitions plants and all factories engaged on war work, the War Industries Board today created a fire protection section which will maintain a close inspection of all plants engaged on Government work. It will be assisted by the Intelligence Bureaus of the army and navy and all local and district fire inspection services in the country, and where circumstances warrant, it will enlist the aid of the Fire Marshals of the various States and ask the co-operation of insurance underwriters.

There have been many disastrous fires in war factories and grain elevators both before and since the United States entered the war. In the three millions of dollars' worth of munitions and grains needed by the Government and the Allies were destroyed.

According to a statement issued here yesterday, the Fire Prevention Section is not intended to disturb existing agencies that are performing satisfactory inspection service; the first efforts will be directed to the improvement of conditions in the large number of improvised factories that have been started because of war work. The aid of municipal and State Fire Marshals will be enlisted. An earnest effort will be made to prevent duplication of inspection on the part of either Government or insurance agencies, and also to coordinate all activities of the Government so far as they relate to this work.

GIVES HIS BLOOD TO PEARY.

Doctor's Sacrifice Starts Admiral on New Lease of Health.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, the noted arctic explorer, after undergoing last Saturday the operation of transfusion of blood, is tonight at his home, greatly increased in strength and rapidly on the way to a full recovery.

The malady which required the operation was pernicious anaemia, which the Admiral's physicians said would steadily reduce his physical strength and lead to death. After experiments with the blood of other subjects, which failed of success, Dr. Frank B. Hartman of the Naval Medical School offered to place himself at the service of the surgeons, and last Saturday a pint of his blood was transfused into the veins of Admiral Peary. The operation was performed at the Georgetown University Hospital by Lieutenant Commander H. F. Strine of the Naval Hospital.

Today the patient was removed to his home, 1,831 Wyoming Avenue, and tonight his attendants said he was resting well and felt vastly improved. He is required to remain in bed to gain rest and strength, but declares he feels well enough to be up and about.

LEAGUE TO CEMENT FRANCE TO AMERICA

Artistic, Literary, and Idealistic Achievements to be Made Common Property.

GROWS OUT OF WAR UNITY

Will Publish Journal in Two Languages and Foster Good-Will and Understanding.

The French League in America, whose officers, founders, and patrons include men high in the political, artistic, social, and financial life of the United States and of France, was launched last night at the home of Otto H. Kahn, 1,100 Fifth Avenue.

The meeting was attended by a large group of men and women interested in strengthening cordial relations between France and the United States. Speeches were made by C. H. Outland, manager of the league; Baronese Francis Wilson Huard, and Lieutenant Adrien de Pachmann, a member of the French High Commission; Robert Casa, a well-known French singer, recently connected with the French Theatre in this city, sang songs of the trenches and of the Latin Quarter.

In all essentials the league, according to Mr. Outland, who explained its objects and purposes, is to partake of a popular movement with active membership placed at $3 a year. It is nonpartisan, nonsectarian and nonpolitical, and is to be national in scope. Branches are to be established all over the country so that every community of persons interested in its objects shall have opportunity to keep in touch with the manifold aspects of French-American activity.

The league will publish a monthly review, whose text will be about two-thirds English and one-third French. The review will record the progress of the French nation in science, literature, and the arts, the movements and tendencies in finance, commerce, and industry and the achievements in education. At the same time the publication will serve as the organ of some of the French-American groups which have been organized for various purposes. It will also be the means of facilitating among Americans, it was said, the study of the French language. Each issue will contain a supplement, dealing wholly with the French language, and suited to the needs of both beginners and of advanced students.

A New Relationship.

After referring to the act of General Pershing in placing the American forces at the disposal of France as "the symbol of a great common effort between the United States and France," Mr. Outland said that the United States and France had entered upon a new relationship.

"Today with the French, on French soil, we are fighting for the same ideals," he added. "We are struggling, together with France, to remove the ulcer which is festering at the heart of the world.

"This new partnership has made imperative an agency which will enable these two nations to know each other well. While we are sending to France our men, our money, our supplies to be pooled by them in the great struggle, we must have some agency which will permit a fullness of knowledge and a free interchange of ideas between us. These two great peoples are separated by the barrier of language. Among the numerous French-American organizations which have been created, before and since the war, the means for this reciprocal exchange on a large scale has been lacking. It is this great need which the French League in America proposes to fill and what America is doing is of consequence to France and what France is doing is of significance to us, and these things we must know and know increasingly as time goes on.

"Not only are there international problems between us as a result of this immense collaboration, there are also national problems arising in each country whose solution can be aided by the experience of the other. The ideal and practical bonds are becoming innumerable. They are meeting our life at every point. There is not a person here who has not a stake in France. The French League in America is the instrument which will effect this close ideal and practical collaboration.

"As its name implies, the league is not a society whose membership is restricted. It is incorporated as a New York State membership corporation with these objects:

"To promote a thorough comprehension by the people of France and the United States of America of their respective civilizations; to strengthen the bonds of intellectual and moral sympathy, based on their historic traditions and present collaboration; to encourage between these two great democracies a free interchange of ideas, information, and methods in solving their national and international affairs and in furthering their national ideals; to reveal the practical and artistic genius of these two nations to each other; to encourage the development of closer economic relations between France and the United States, and for these purposes to publish a periodical review as the organ of this corporation, and of other French-American groups, and in general to bring the United States of America and France to a full and sympathetic understanding of one another."

Three Grades of Membership.

The headquarters of the league are at 53 Washington Square. Application for membership may be made in one of the following classes:

Life members, who make a contribution of not less than $1,000 to the objects of the league; active members, who pay an entrance fee of $1 and annual dues of $3, and sustaining members, who make a contribution of not less than $100. Every member will receive the league's monthly review.

The officers are: President—Myron T. Herrick; Vice Presidents—Alexander J. Hemphill, Edmund L. Baylies, and Barrett Wendell; Treasurer—August Belmont; Secretary and General Manager—C. H. Outland; Honorary President—Charles W. Eliot; Honorary Vice President—John H. Finley; Directors—Frederick H. Allen, Edmund H. Baylies, August Belmont, William P. Bonbright, Paul D. Cravath, Samuel W. Fairchild, Alexander J. Hemphill, Myron T. Herrick, Otto H. Kahn, L. F. Loree, C. H. Outland, Morton Prince, William Roscoe Thayer, and George T. Wilson.

KING AND QUEEN HOBNOB WITH OUR OFFICERS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 9.—The King and Queen, who are making a tour of industrial works, spent yesterday at Lincoln.

At one factory they visited the guard of honor, composed of American troops. The King and Queen were evidently much pleased to see them, and two of their officers, Lieutenant P. E. Davant and Lieutenant W. G. T. Poulson of Philadelphia, had quite a long conversation with the visitors.

"I am very glad, indeed, to see American soldiers in England," said His Majesty, "and a fine stamp of men they are. When I was in France not very long ago I had an opportunity of seeing troops from the United States. They impressed me very much, indeed, with their excellent bearing, and I was told that they were becoming efficient very rapidly.

At another factory Captain Mack of the American Army Insurance Commission was introduced to their Majesties. Captain Mack, after informing their Majesties that already the members of the United States forces had been insured up to $12,000,000,000, asked the Queen for her autograph. The Queen laughingly responded, and the Captain handed her a fountain pen and a little square of paper.

The Captain's Sergeant offered his back as a writing pad and the Queen, as the centre of a laughing throng, wrote, "Mary, R., 1918." Then the King was asked for his autograph, and immediately above the Queen's signature he wrote, "George, R. I."

In a place where a tank was practicing the King expressed a desire to have a joy ride.

"This is my fourth adventure in a tank," said the King to the naval officer in charge, "and I want you to take me over the most awkward places."

MEN OF 27TH TO GIVE SHOW.

Nearly one hundred soldiers, members of the 27th Division at Spartanburg, which is composed mostly of former New York National Guard Regiments, arrived here yesterday to take part in the musical comedy which the theatrical troupe of the division is staging at the Lexington Avenue Theatre. The soldier actors were under command of Captain Fruchot, Aide de Camp to Major Gen. O'Ryan, and Lieutenant William A. Halloran, Jr., director and producer of the show.

The performance, which is to open tomorrow night, is called "You Know Me, Al." It was written, words and music, by men of the division, played by them, staged and managed by them. The writers were Stanislaw Stenge of the Headquarters Troop, and A. J. Hallahan of the 107th Infantry, formerly the 7th Regiment. The cast of forty-five contains fourteen men who take women's parts. The entire cast, in fact, is made up of professional actors, at present serving the Government as members of the 27th Division.

The performance here is to serve two purposes, one to aid recruiting, and the other to raise $15,000, which is to be used to buy a portable theatre which the 27th wants to take to France. "You Know Me, Al," will run for ten days in New York, and will play one matinee in Washington, D. C.

$230,272 GIFT TO ITALY.

Authority to purchase surgical instruments and surgical supplies to the amount of $230,272 for shipment to the Red Cross Commission for Italy has been given by the War Council of the American Red Cross, according to an announcement yesterday. This authorization is made at the request of Robert Perkins, Commissioner to Italy.

The following letter from Signor Alfieri, Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, to the Emergency Commission that was dispatched to France last Fall has just been received here. It reads:

"Now that the permanent commission for Italy of the American Red Cross, completely organized, is showing its great value and splendid material and moral effect in aid of the war which Italy is fighting for common justice, it is very agreeable to me to send my thanks to those who contributed to the laying of the foundation for the work.

"To you who were directors of the emergency commission for Italy I am glad to express these sentiments in the name of the army which has had and still receives so much material and moral assistance from the American Red Cross."

ZIONIST UNIT PREPARES.

Medical Organization of 40 Members to Go to Palestine.

The American Zionist Medical Unit, with a personnel of forty members, is making ready to leave New York shortly for Palestine. The unit will co-operate with the Jewish Administrative Commission which is laying the foundations for the future Jewish State. The unit is being equipped by the Women's Branch of the Zionist movement at a cost of $250,000 to cover its first year's operations.

Besides a general director and a medical director, the membership of the unit will be made up of fifteen physicians, fifteen nurses, a sanitarium, two mechanics, two pharmacists, and a dental staff. The physicians include specialists in surgery, eye, ear, nose and throat diseases. A hospital in Jerusalem has already been placed at the disposal of the unit, and the staff will be amplified from among the physicians living in Palestine.

In addition to the hospital in Jerusalem, the unit plans to open a dispensary, a school of nursing and several floating hospitals. It is carrying with it $40,000 worth of medical supplies and a complete equipment of surgical, dental and radiograph instruments.

Dr. Colin Luke Begg Marries.

Dr. Colin Luke Begg, a professor at the Post-Graduate Hospital, of 121 East Seventeenth Street, and Miss Susanne Confero of New Orleans and New York, a miniature painter, were married yesterday afternoon in the chapel of the University Place Presbyterian Church by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. George Alexander. Alexander L. W. Begg, a brother, was his best man and Miss Christina Begg, a sister of the bridegroom, was the maid of honor. Dr. Begg belongs to various medical societies and was graduated from the University of Toronto in 1898.

Armed River Pirates Capture Tug.

The tug Meta did not get up steam yesterday morning, and when her owner, Captain Daniel McCarron of 31 South Street, went aboard at the foot of Essex Street, Jersey City, he found Michael O'Donnell, the engineer, locked in the bunk room. O'Donnell said that at 10 o'clock Monday evening six men with caps drawn over their faces entered the cabin with drawn revolvers, hustled him into the bunk room and in a few minutes started the Meta upstream. They had the tug away until 3 o'clock and made four stops. Acting Chief of Police Richard Battersby of Jersey City says the boat was in the hands of a gang of river pirates who had undoubtedly made stops to steal and had got away with their booty.

AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION GAINS, OFFICIALS SAY

Mistakes Conceded, But War Department Sees No Reason for Discouragement.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—There is no reason for discouragement over the American aviation program, according to officials responsible for the completion of the aircraft and the training of flyers needed by General Pershing. This, it was learned today authoritatively, is the feeling of War Department heads, notwithstanding the fact that they apparently are contemplating an early reorganization of the Government's aircraft production machinery.

Failures and mistakes are conceded, but disregarding overoptimism in estimates of a few months ago officials are not discouraged over the vital question of whether planes sufficient for the needs of the forces in France are to be forthcoming. There were intimations today that a recasting of estimates, together with the actual output of the factories within the last few days, had shown that a part of the delay in the program has been made up.

Rumors have been current for some time that a general shakeup of the aviation organization was in prospect. It was said authoritatively today, however, that no steps would be taken until the preliminary report of the special investigating committee, headed by H. Snowden Marshall of New York, was in hand. This report was called for by Acting Secretary Crowell in advance of the full report of the committee and will deal with organization questions almost entirely.

COLLECTOR EDWARDS HOST.

Collector of Internal Revenue Edwards of the Second, or Wall Street, District announced yesterday that he would be the host at a patriotic rally, reception, and dance to be tendered to the several hundred young men and women employes of his office. The affair, which will take place Friday evening in the assembly room of the Hotel Ansonia, is given by the Collector in appreciation of the work just completed of collecting income tax returns which are expected to net the Government $500,000,000. Mr. Edwards announced that Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, Daniel C. Roper, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and many other Treasury Department officials would be present. Patrick Francis Murphy, who is to be one of the speakers, is relied upon by the Collector to make the employes laugh. "When Mr. Murphy talks," the Collector said last night, "the Government employe will have a chance to have a real laugh, for they have not had one in weeks, because they have been working night and day on income tax returns."

Yesterday Collector Edwards completed his first year as head of the Second District, the most important in point of revenue collections in the entire country. During the administrations of Mayors McClellan and Gaynor, Mr. Edwards was Commissioner of Street Cleaning. Many floral tributes from employes and friends adorned the Collector's office yesterday. Later in the day they were sent to the city's hospitals.

CHARLES F. SISE DEAD.

MONTREAL, April 9.—Charles Fleetwood Sise, President of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, who served as an officer on a Confederate privateer, the Alabama, during the civil war, died at his home here today from pneumonia.

Mr. Sise, one of Canada's foremost business men, was brought up in the South near the estate of Jefferson Davis, later President of the Southern Confederacy. During the American civil war he was sent to England by Davis as a special messenger with funds for the construction of the Confederate commerce destroyer on which he later served as an officer.

The Union ship Kearsarge sank the Alabama off Cherbourg, France, on June 19, 1864. Captain Ralph Summer, Mr. Sise, and others were taken prisoners, and after the war made their way home.

Obituary Notes.

MONROE AND McGRAW PITCH

Despite the Frigid Weather, Young Twirlers Hold Boston in Check Throughout Game.

Special to The New York Times.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 9.—The Yankees and Braves encountered another brand of disagreeable weather today, when they performed before 3,000 soldiers from Camp Greene, the temperature hovering not far above the freezing point. Despite the handicap of playing in sweaters, the game was well pitched and fielded, and the Yankees won by a score of 1 to 0 by getting the better breaks.

The Braves should have captured this contest by a one-sided score, as they combed Monroe and McGraw for three doubles and four singles, while Orum and Murray held the American Leaguers to three widely scattered singles. The one and only run of the game was not shooed across the plate until the last half of the eighth inning, and it was in the nature of a gift. Bodie scored it after drawing a base on balls.

The Braves had ten runners left on base, and one man caught at the plate. They messed up an opportunity to score in the fifth when Wickland doubled with Massey on second base. Massey for some unknown reason stopped at third base. Wickland overran second base, and the play finally ended with Pratt throwing Massey out at the plate.

The Braves made six of their hits off Monroe in the first five innings. An infield hit by Henry in the ninth was the only safe drive off McGraw.

Murray, a right-hander who had not previously appeared in the series, twirled the last two innings for Boston. After Baker fouled out in the eighth Bodie walked and stole. Smith partly stopped Peckinpaugh's hard drive, but Massey was unable to retrieve the ball in time to cut off the run. Peck then stole second and Hannah also walked and stole, but both were left on base.

SETTLE SUIT FOR $5,400.

Pratt and Lavan Got 10 Per Cent. of Claim Against Ball.

ST. LOUIS, April 9.—Derrill Pratt and John Lavan, former members of the St. Louis Americans, who compromised their $50,000 damage suits against Phil Ball, President of the St. Louis club, received $5,400 in settlement, according to information obtained here today.

Ball today said that the settlement did not cost him a cent, and sporting men concluded from this statement that the American League had footed the bill.

PROTEST BY TORONTO CLUB

Charges That Kansas City Has Signed Two of Its Players.

TORONTO, April 9.—Tampering with players of the Toronto team of the old International League is alleged in a formal protest which J. J. McCaffery, President of the Toronto Club, has filed with the National Baseball Commission against the Kansas City team of the American Association. McCaffery contends that Manager Gansel of Kansas City made overtures to J. Schultz, outfielder, and Louis LaLonge, catcher, Toronto players, several weeks before the International League was reconstructed. The two players are reported to have been signed by Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, April 9.—Officials of the Kansas City Club of the American Association expressed surprise today when informed of the protest of President J. J. McCaffery, and declared that their understanding was all international League players had been bulletined as "free agents" two weeks ago.

ROBINS WIN THIRD IN ROW.

Coombs Helps Bewilder Red Sox by 3 to 1 Score.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 9.—The Robins won their third straight game from the Red Sox today when they took a seven-inning affair by the score of 3 to 1. Jack Coombs and Dick McCabe were the pitchers. The weather was very unfavorable. A cold raw wind swept over the diamond. The game was played in thirty-five minutes.

Coombs allowed only three hits, while the Brooklyns secured six. Hobbie's men scored their first run in the opening inning on a double by Olson, a sacrifice and an out. The Red Sox tied the score in the fourth, but Brooklyn took the lead again in their turn at bat in the same inning, when Ill Myers hit to deep right for a home run. The National Leaguers scored again in the fifth on Krueger's triple and a sacrifice fly.

The teams play the last game of the series tomorrow at Chattanooga. After the game the two clubs start for their respective homes. Brooklyn will join New York Friday morning and the Red Sox will arrive at Boston the same afternoon.

ALL SMILES TAKES PURSE.

Wins First Liberty Loan Race Over Bowie Course.

BOWIE, Md., April 9.—E. T. Zoltcoffar's veteran campaigner, All Smiles, took the first Liberty Loan event of the Bowie season here today, when he distanced his field in the fourth race on the card. Running in the heavy going seemed just to the liking of All Smiles, for he opened up a big gap after half the distance had been covered, and won as he pleased from such good performers as Graphic, Woodward, Obulus, and Irregular. The latter two, somewhat favored by past performances, seemed unusually backward in the going.

T. Clyde's Dunedin surprised the talent in the first race for the babies of the track by defeating both Sid C. Keener and John Powers, two fancied to have it their own way.

As a general rule the popular favorites responded, the only other exception being Genevieve B. in the second race, which was more than 12 to 1.

SADDLE HORSES ARE SOLD.

A consignment of thirteen saddle horses belonging to Robert Moreland of Lexington, Ky., brought $5,745 at auction last night in the show ring at Durland's Riding Academy. This sum was realized chiefly through the spirited bidding which marked the early part of the auction. The first three horses offered on the block brought $2,275, but thereafter no other top-notch sales were recorded.

Katherine Clifford, a chestnut mare of 15½ hands, foaled in 1912 and bred in the purple, was the first offering under the hammer, and after a spirited bidding bee she was knocked down to Mrs. J. Reynolds for $1,050. Next came Julian Eltinge, a bay gelding, 16 hands, 5 years old, catalogued as a weight carrying show prospect. The highest price of the sale was paid for the gelding, which was finally sold to Miss Clara S. Peck for $1,500. Louise Huff, a bay mare of 15 hands, 5 years old, was the third offering, and was purchased by Martin Beck for $725.

Some of the other horses sold and their prices were: Fagan, bay gelding, 15½ hands, 7 years old, $380, to A. Hatter; Charming Prince, bay gelding, 15½ hands, 5 years old, $375, to George L. Shearer, and Fairfield, 15½ hands, 7 years old, $450, to Charles E. Butler.

GIANTS EARN A TIE IN ABRIDGED GAME

Score Is 7 to 7 in Five-Inning Contest with Cleveland—Demaree Has Bad Day.

Special to The New York Times.

HATTIESBURG, Miss., April 9.—The Giants and Cleveland Americans played to a 7 to 7, five-inning tie game at Camp Shelby today. It was rather a farcical affair, as the Giants were late in arriving, and cut the contest short to catch an early train.

Ground conditions also were very bad, as the outfield was in a hollow. In addition a heavy wind blew volumes of dust into the players' eyes, and at times the outfielders were scarcely visible.

McGraw did not make the trip, but left the team in the care of Captain Fletcher, who got a tie game out of what appeared to be another rout. After Cleveland knocked out six-runs in the second inning, it looked like another walkover, but New York recovered and drove in a like number.

Al Demaree pitched the full five innings and did poorly, but no pitcher could show much under such adverse conditions. Coumbe, Cleveland's lone left-hander, steadied, following New York's big inning, and only one man reached base thereafter. Having gone through the first three games of the series without a hit, Heinie Zimmerman got a double in the second inning, which drove in two runs. Tris Speaker was the real batting star today with two doubles and a single. Benny Kauff again hurt his right heel, running out an infield grounder, and was obliged to limp out of the game in the second inning.

COCHRAN INCREASES LEAD OVER YAMADA

A series of ups and downs was provided yesterday in the billiard match which Koji Yamada and Welker Cochran are playing at Maurice Daly's Academy, but withall, Cochran succeeded in increasing his advantage of the first day until he is now leading by a total score of 1,200 to 903. There was an equal division of honors in the two games played. Yamada recovered some of his cunning and defeated Cochran in the afternoon struggle by 421 to 300. This advantage, however, was only temporary, for Cochran came forth with a bit of play in the evening game that sent him far ahead of the Nipponese, the score being 300 to 138 in his favor.

In the afternoon game yesterday Cochran slipped back to mediocre billiards. He could not get in stroke, and the counts were for the most part in small figures. It seemed that Cochran was a trifle careless in his work, and this may account for some of the mishaps which beset his path during the game. Repeatedly he slipped up on easy shots which were almost beyond the possibility of being missed. It was not that he was playing them too softly, but rather that he was not taking the care that is always necessary to insure a continuation of a run to high figures.

The evening game found Cochran in better stroke and he gave a touch of interesting balkline play in which there was nestled a count of 138, the highest run that the match has yet brought forth. Several other big clusters contributed to Cochran's victory and Yamada's discouragement. The Japanese secured only 108 points in all and his success in the afternoon was more than nullified. Cochran averaged an even 25, while Yamada fell slightly below 10.

TO HOLD INTERCITY BOUTS.

Boston and New York Boxers Will Compete in Crescent Tourney.

The Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn will close its amateur boxing season on April 25 with an intercity tournament between boxers of this city and Boston. Four classes have been listed for competition, and the officials expect that a team of New England Association champions will oppose the title holders of the Metropolitan Association. The weights will be 118, 125, 135, and 145 pounds.

The club's season point trophy, which is awarded annually to the club whose representatives score the greatest number of points in the Crescent A. C. events, will be awarded at the close of the tournament.

A. A. B. A. Tourney Starts.

Play in the first tournament held under the auspices of the newly formed American Amateur Billiard Association began last night, when two matches were contested in the three-cushion event for the Metropolitan championship. In a match at Thum's Academy, N. W. White of Daly's defeated Harry Pelsch of Thum's by a score of 40 to 31. Henry Frantzen, representing Doyle's, was the second victor. He defeated J. Cosgrove of the Jefferson Billiard Academy by 40 to 35 in a match at the Jefferson room.

Wilde-Astey Bout Postponed.

Following the receipt of a cablegram from A. H. Taylor, director of the Liverpool Stadium, Liverpool, England, Joe Jacobs, manager of Dave Astey, announced last night that the proposed boxing exhibition between Astey and Jimmy Wilde, the sensational little English flyweight, had been postponed. In the cablegram Director Taylor announced that Wilde's regiment had been summoned to France because of the big drive. This necessitated a postponement until Sept. 2, when Wilde will receive a furlough.

Good Waist Trade.

High-collared and brilliantly colored washable waists in printed organdies are reported to be selling in very substantial quantities. Buyers from many parts of the country are said to be in town just now looking for late Spring and Summer merchandise, and they all seem to be well inclined toward waists of the sort mentioned. White organdie in very simplified and neat-looking effects is reported to be coming back strong, and most of the local manufacturers are feeling optimistic over the prospects for a very general trade during the next month or six weeks.

Silks Selling at Retail.

The retail trade in this city reports that silks in the popular weaves and colorings have been moving over the counter during the last week or two in very good volume. Any bargains that are offered at reduced prices to stimulate trade do not go without takers very long. And the regular trade is not lagging any, but in many cases is reported to be going ahead of last year's record of sales. Both light and dark foulards in more or less conventional designs are popular, and georgettes, chiffons, satins, taffetas and various wash silks are well sought.

Gray Goods Prices Still Higher.

Gray goods prices went still higher in the local market yesterday, accompanied by some active buying. One of the features was the selling, for May delivery, of 40-inch 2.85-yard sheetings at 31 cents. This is a full cent higher than these goods sold on Monday for shipment through the second half of this year. For shipments running from May to January 38½-inch 64-60s were sold at 18½ cents. For April-May 64-50s in the same width 17½ cents was paid and 18 cents is now asked. Bids of 10 cents for April-May lots of 28½-inch 60-48s brought out few, if any, goods, as the mills were asking a quarter more than that for those positions. Thirty-nine-inch 80 squares sold for delivery through this month and next at 24¼ cents, and May-November 39-inch 68-72s brought 20 cents. This is the way print-cloth prices closed:

Very Slight Distinction.

The dividing line between semi-formal and formal evening gowns seems to be growing constantly less and less distinguishable. Many very beautiful and elaborate creations, which, nevertheless, go under the head of semi-formal evening apparel, are being made up with metal trimmings and fabrics, all of which are very much in vogue in the full formal evening attire. Tulle also is extensively used for drapery and trimming on these semi-formal frocks. There is said to be a very considerable demand for this type of garment, which also serves very nicely as a dinner gown.

Better Grades of Neckwear Sell.

The neckwear trade in this city is reported to be showing a very keen demand for the better grades of merchandise. In some quarters it is held that the market for the very cheap lines has almost entirely disappeared. Sleeveless guimpes in fine net or in the sheerer silk weaves are very much in demand, and it is said that high collars on these are preferred. In line with the tendency toward stand up collars, stocks, and jabots of the better sort seem to be well sought.

Ribbons in Separate Skirts.

One of the outstanding features of the latest creations in separate skirts for street and semi-formal wear is the extensive use of ribbons for trimmings and for draped effects. Ribbons are also being employed for girdles, and it is reported that buyers generally are very well impressed with the new offerings. Orders during the early part of the week, it is said, have been particularly plentiful. Pleated skirts, which give a narrow effect while still allowing ample freedom of movement, seem to be very popular in many sections.

Hard Coal Production Larger.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that anthracite production, having recovered from the slump incidental to the Easter holidays, is again on a heavy basis. Receipts at tidewater, which last week reflected the lessened mining activity, are getting back where they were during the second half of March, when the local piers were handling hard coal at the rate of 7,000 cars a week. In the bituminous trade there has been no noticeable improvement, either from the standpoint of the operators or the wholesale distributers.

BUSINESS NOTES.

S. Steinfeld & Co., 43 West Twenty-third Street, have added another floor to their present quarters, making six floors in all now occupied by them in this building.

The J. M. Smyth Merchandise Company of Chicago has discontinued its New York office, formerly at 141 Fifth Avenue.

Invest in 4¼% Liberty Bonds

YOUR Government guarantees 4¼% on every dollar you invest in Liberty Bonds and gives you the whole United States as security for the return of your money, 100 cents on the dollar.

Did you ever hear of a better and surer investment plan?

Furthermore, the dollars you invest in Liberty Bonds are used to help our boys to fight; to supply them with guns, ammunition, airplanes and other supplies necessary to win this war.

Look at it this way: You have to pay a premium to have your house and life insured. In Liberty Bonds, Uncle Sam pays you 4¼% interest on the money you lend to insure your country—your safety—your liberty. Is that fair enough?

You would fight to the hilt if you could; then buy to the hilt and let your money fight for you and yours. Be a soldier at home—help win the war—sacrifice something—everything—all. Our boys over there are sacrificing even their lives for you. Will you do your share at home? Don't stop a minute—act at once—an hour's delay has lost many a life.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Price changes were again irregular on the New York Stock Exchange and the total sales so small as to indicate almost complete indifference on the part of the public. Here and there the list has been enlivened a little by pool operations, but it is difficult to get customers interested while the outcome of the battle in Picardy remains in doubt. On a turnover of more than 15,000 shares United States Steel moved through a range of ⅝, which about measures the day's net price changes.

The selling of Liberty 4s continues on a scale that can hardly be explained by any of the reasons so far brought forward. Early in yesterday's session the price got down to 95.90, more than two full points under the best price made this year, and within one-fifth of a point of the low record made a few weeks ago. In part the selling of this issue has come from well meaning individuals with a mistaken idea that they are helping the new campaign by releasing funds for use in subscribing to the 4¼s. Selling of this nature has come to light where corporations, unable to increase their indebtedness in order to buy the new issue, have mistakenly thought to help the new campaign by converting bonds on hand into cash.

That such selling, despite the creditable motive back of it, is clearly detrimental to the success of the new offering is plain. For the most part the 4¼s must be taken by those who already hold bonds of the previous issues; in many instances the owners are still making payments on earlier subscriptions. They cannot understand the weakness in the 4s and naturally hesitate to obligate themselves to the full limit of their ability in subscribing for the next issue. As between holding intact an original investment in the 4s and selling to free funds for the 4¼s the greatest service is performed by the investor who clings to the bonds he has.

There were also signs yesterday of liquidation of standard corporation bonds, noticeably those of some of the older railroad issues, for the purpose of accumulating balances to be used in buying the new Government issue. The rise in interest rates on the Government loans has worked a downward readjustment in the securities placed prior to the war.

The Stock Exchange authorities have taken wise precautions with a view to discovering to what extent, if any, Government bonds have been depressed by short selling, and will soon be in possession of information on the strength of which they can act to end such an abuse if it has played a part in the recent decline. It is almost apparent, however, that selling from discreditable motives has not been much of a factor in the situation.

LONDON MARKET IS FIRM.

Fear That Man-Power Scheme Will Further Cut Depleted Staffs.

LONDON, April 9.—The stock market maintained a firm undertone today, but fears were expressed that the man-power scheme will further cut down the already depleted staffs in the financial district. British funds were good, especially colonials, while Japanese bonds were firm and some Spanish issues reached record figures on the decline in exchange.

Interest in the other sections was confined to tin mines, in which there was a large business at rising prices.

Money was plentiful and discount rates were easy.

TO OPEN MEXICAN SMELTER.

American Smelting & Refining Co. Will Enlarge Output.

The American Smelting and Refining Company has reopened its smelter at Chihuahua, Mexico, after a suspension of several months, due to the activities of bandits. The management is planning to expand the smelting capacity of the plant substantially, including the erection of a new copper smelter and lead plant.

It was reported yesterday that the company had arranged with the local Government of the State of Aguascalientes to contribute $1,600 gold monthly to further the restoration of stable conditions in the State. At the American Smelting and Refining offices it was said that no official information in respect to the payment had been received, although negotiations had been on for some time to effect an agreement with the Mexican authorities in respect to a tax law recently passed. The law provided that a production levy of $9,000 gold monthly be made on the company. When the law was enacted, the smelter was closed down pending the result of a suit brought in the Mexican Supreme Court to test the constitutionality of the measure.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Conversion of Liberty Bonds.

Statements in a paragraph headed "Value of Liberty 4s" published in this column yesterday were in part erroneous. The twenty-five-year 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan, which are converted into bonds bearing 4 per cent. interest, will not have a maturity of ten years, as is the case with the 4¼s of the Third Liberty Loan, but will retain their original date of payment, namely, Nov. 15, 1942. Likewise the thirty-year 3½ per cent. of the First Loan, if converted into the 4¼s, will mature on the date fixed for that issue, namely, June 15, 1947. The 3½ per cent. bonds, which have already been converted into 4s and which will be exchanged for bonds bearing 4¼ per cent. interest, will mature on June 15, 1947. The 3½ per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan may be converted into any subsequent loan bearing a higher rate of interest, while the 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Loan and the so-called "conversion 4s" are convertible only into the next subsequent loan bearing a higher rate of interest, namely, into 4¼ per cent. bonds.

Response to Certificate Offerings.

Since Secretary McAdoo issued on Feb. 6 a statement requesting banks and trust companies to set aside 1 per cent. of their resources each week for investment in Treasury certificates of indebtedness a much wider distribution of these short-term Government obligations has been obtained. While for the issue of Jan. 22 the total number of subscribers was 6,364, for the issue of Feb. 8 applications were received from nearly double that number, or 12,550. The offering of Feb. 27 brought responses from a still larger number, namely, 14,472 institutions. Figures for the issue of March 22 are not yet available. Payments on the latest offering of 4½ per cent. certificates are due today.

Railroad Funds and Private Banks.

The intimation in Washington dispatches that Director General McAdoo will not permit railroad companies to keep their funds in future on deposit with private banking firms, but will compel them to transfer their accounts to national banks or trust companies, where they will be more directly under control, apparently did not surprise the people most interested in Wall Street. It was generally conceded that only one big banking house will be hard hit by such an order, in respect of loss of deposits, as most of the other big private banking firms interested in railroads do not keep the funds of the lines whose financial agents they are in their own banks, but in national banks or trust companies in whose management they are interested.

How It Was Received.

The idea that railroad funds should not be kept by private banking firms apparently originated with Samuel Untermyer, who in his report of his investigation into the "money power" gave some elaborate statistics of the amount of these funds and the power thereby wielded by a small coterie of bankers. Mr. Untermyer himself is not in town, but several bankers suggested that Mr. McAdoo might have obtained the idea from him. On the other hand, the head of one famous private banking house, who has played a very prominent part in reorganizing and financing numerous railroads in the last twenty years, declared that in the existing circumstances the order was an eminently proper one. "The Government does not deposit its own funds with private banks," he declared. "It keeps them with national banks and trust companies, members of the Federal Reserve System. Now that the railroads are under Government control, railroad funds are virtually in the same position. It is only proper that they also should be kept only in Government depositaries."

The Unfavorable View.

Another very big man in the railroad banking world declared that not only was it obvious that Mr. McAdoo's intention was to deprive the big banking houses of their position and influence in railroad affairs, but to leave them none of the functions they had formerly exercised, in financing or reorganizing roads especially. "The day for private bankers to go railroading is over," he declared, "at least for the time. We don't expect to have anything more to do in that line. Beginning with the Denver & Rio Grande, Mr. McAdoo is apparently going to look after all reorganizations and everything else."

Another Aspect of Railroad Financing.

The Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company recently defaulted the interest on the Rio Grande Western bonds, for no reason save that all its current earnings belong to the Government, its free cash is under attachment, and the Government has paid it nothing on account of rental. Yesterday another result of the slowness of Government action in this respect was apparently revealed, according to general opinion, when the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, it was announced, would soon put on the market equipment trust certificates, probably up to $10,000,000, to obtain new cars badly needed. It is understood this action was made necessary for the same reason as embarrasses the Denver—lack of ready cash until the Government begins to pay its rental.

Premiums and Acceptances.

In response to an inquiry the Federal Reserve Board has written a letter saying that a draft drawn by a casualty company against a policy holder for premiums could hardly be said to be a draft by the seller on the purchaser of goods sold and would not, in the opinion of the board, come within the board's present definition of a trade acceptance. "It is, of course," says the letter, "within the power of the board to extend this definition so as to include drafts drawn for insurance, services rendered, &c., if it determines this to be advisable. It would, however, require rather a forced construction to treat a draft drawn for an insurance premium as a trade acceptance under the present definition of the board."

Worth Fighting For!

SHALL this little girl grow up in the sort of American home we know, healthy and happy? Shall she have the advantage of living and learning in a free land, under free institutions? Shall such children develop into the Liberty-loving citizens that a free America may be proud of?

The question which today confronts America as a nation, and you as an individual, is whether or not a FREE AMERICA is worth fighting for!

Are American children in this and all future generations to receive unimpaired the legacy of freedom of which we are now the custodians, or shall their country be turned over bodily to the brutal, rapacious, power-mad enemy which has forced us into this war? This question cannot be answered by word of mouth, but by deeds alone.

Control Your Costs

American Credit Insurance shows you in advance what costs are due to bad debts. Thus, the exact cost of doing business is more easily ascertained, and you can compute your profits with certainty.

The American's Unlimited Policy not only insures against abnormal credit losses, but serves to prevent losses. It also provides for the collection of all covered accounts not over 45 days past due, or the loss is provable under the bond.

This broad service is for manufacturers and jobbers only. Write today for the details.

The Well-to-do and the P. P. P.

Secretary McAdoo says: "The wealthy classes should be encouraged to take subscriptions of $5,000, $10,000, $25,000, and to pay for them out of their incomes."

SALES OF COPPER INCREASE

The Phelps Dodge Corporation, which succeeded the metals producing firm of Phelps, Dodge & Co. last May, reports net earnings of $23,554,338 in 1917, a decline of $576,567 from the aggregate total of the various subsidiary concerns in 1916. After writing off for depreciation and depletion a sum of $4,500,000 greater than in the preceding year, the corporation had a balance of $16,940,379 for dividends, a decline of $4,033,884. The balance was equal to $37.64 a share of stock, compared with $48.83 in 1916.

The annual statement issued yesterday showed the effect of higher costs than in 1916, a factor which was aggravated by labor troubles which reduced production heavily for several months. The corporation sold 290,522,560 pounds of copper, an increase of 43,200,000 pounds over 1916, and the selling price of 26.67 cents, delivered at New York, was 2.19 cents higher than the average of the year before. The copper produced by the company's own mines amounted to 153,974,602 pounds, an increase of 1,711,-037 pounds. The difference between production and sales was accounted for by copper bought from other concerns, or sold on commission, while the corporation drew upon its accumulated stocks, apparently, to a total of more than 2,000,000 pounds in order to meet the unusual demand.

The output for the first six months, the report said, reached the record figure of 80,497,835 pounds for the period.

"In June and July, labor troubles, fomented at Bisbee by the I. W. W., and at Morenci by the local Mexican union," the statement continued, "served in the case of the Copper Queen branch seriously to affect the ore production, and in the case of the Morenci branch to cause complete suspension of operations for the period of four months. In September the United States Government fixed an arbitrary market price for copper at 23½ cents per pound, which obtained throughout the balance of the year. Owing to the greatly increased production costs, due to the high cost of labor and supplies, and the seriously decreased efficiency of labor, this price caused a certain reduction of output because of the inability to work profitably low-grade ore which previously had allowed a small margin of profit.

"Throughout the year the demand for copper greatly exceeded the supply, and the fluctuations in the price between the maximum of 33⅝ cents per pound in the early part of the year and 23½ cents during the last third are indicative of the market conditions and the uncertainty of trade."

The principal features of the income account are set forth in this table, the large increase in mine valuation being made necessary by Government regulations:

Depletion, deprec.	6,613,959	2,056,642
Balance for dividend.	16,940,379	21,974,263
Dividends	10,800,000	14,625,000
Surplus	6,140,379	7,349,263
Increase in mine value.	10,009,541	....

The corporation produced 8,186,356 pounds of lead, 1,524,682 ounces of silver, and 24,423 ounces of gold, compared with 10,404,341 pounds of lead, 1,642,065 ounces of silver, and 28,873 ounces of gold in 1916. During the year the 32 per cent. in dividends paid were made up of 24 per cent. from profits and 8 per cent. distributed from the reserve for depletion. In 1916 the dividends amounted to 32½ per cent. on the 450,000 shares of stock.

The balance sheet noted that accounts and wages payable and taxes accrued at the end of the year amounted to $9,523,-198, compared with $5,826,777 in the preceding year. The Government's and State's taxes, including the Federal excess profits tax, was $5,857,595, as listed in the expense account of the income statement. Because of the consolidation of properties, the balance sheet showed mines and mining claims valued at $179,-630,650, compared with $14,360,059 at the end of the previous fiscal period. The aggregate of fixed assets on Dec. 31, 1917, was $198,534,873, against $39,268,-538 before consolidation. Current assets of $33,832,865 were $9,350,000 larger than the year before.

The annual statement was signed by Walter Douglas, President. He succeeded James Douglas during the year, the latter becoming Chairman.

THE COTTON MARKET

Situation Improves, Though Somewhat Unsteady Because of Lack of Trade Support.

In comparison with Monday's market, the local cotton market looked much better yesterday, and, although still somewhat unsteady because of the absence of any noticeable trade support, actually closed with a net gain in the old crop months, the range being from 16 points net higher to 1 point lower, with new crop positions easier. The close was firm, with the tone better than at any time during the day.

It was very largely a speculative market, with feelers put out on both sides, and no one, apparently, venturing any very definite opinion as to what developments would be. As a result prices, opening steady, up from 6 to 15 points, and going up 10 points or so higher, broke about 40 points, going in some months 20 points below Monday's low level. Here they firmed up again, and the market continued to look strong until the close. It is possible that a certain amount of trade buying at bargain levels may have contributed a little toward the final turn, but the impression was general that no trade orders need be expected until the result of today's conference in Washington is known.

The fluctuations, consequently, reflected the reaction of speculative dealers to the combination of reassuring reports on price fixing, the stubborn insistence of Southern holders on their price for the rest of this year's crop, and the outlook for a much better crop next Fall.

No exports were reported yesterday. Southern spot markets were generally unchanged or with only slight price fluctuations.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Marvin Hughitt today resigned as Chairman of the board of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad. Stockholders in annual session filled the vacancies on the board caused by the deaths of James Stillman and Zenoe Crane by electing E. D. Hulbert, Chicago, and Henry C. McEldowney, Pittsburgh. ORDERS ICE PLANTS CLOSED Controller Odell Will Permit Only Six Here to Operate.

After a conference with wholesale and retail dealers in his office yesterday, ex-Governor Benjamin B. Odell, State Ice Controller, announced that as a measure of conservation all but six artificial ice plants would have to shut down. The order will be effective beginning next Monday, and the places must remain closed until June 1 or later, if that is deemed necessary.

The Ice Administrator also announced the prices at which ice shall be sold wholesale and retail. He pointed out that the closing of the ice plants was a matter of conservation of ammonia and coal. The plants which will be allowed to operate are the Knickerbocker Ice Company plants at Flatbush Avenue and Powell Street, Brooklyn; Glendale Consumers Ice Company, Glendale, N. Y.; Richmond Hill Coal and Ice Company, Richmond Hill; Jamaica Consumers Ice Company, Jamaica; Bronx Consumers Ice Company, West Farms Road, and the Knickerbocker Ice Company plant at 184th Street and Amsterdam Avenue.

"The 1,500,000 tons of surplus ice under the control of the State," said Mr. Odell, "is to be apportioned among the artificial ice dealers and the Hoover Committee, so that if this plan is effected all of the ice which the State has contracted for will be absorbed by the artificial manufacturers and the natural ice dealers."

These ice prices were given out by Mr. Odell: To wholesale dealers, $4.40 a ton. This price is about 40 cents above the gross price for last year. The retail price runs from 50 cents a hundredweight for families down to 30 cents for cellar trade to resell. By this action, Mr. Odell said, the family trade will be under no heavier a burden than they were last year, while the wholesalers have taken on an additional cost, and this additional cost will be absorbed by the larger consumers of ice.

The Commissioner of Markets, upon whom is placed the responsibility of free distribution of ice, was given the price of $3 a ton at the barge, which is the lowest price quoted, and it is $1 below the barge price last year.

The conference was held in Mr. Odell's office, 120 Broadway. As Ice Administrator Mr. Odell holds an appointment from Washington as well as one from Governor Whitman. He also holds the power to enforce his orders.

Need Autos for Upton Service.

William Guggenheim, Chairman of the Army and Navy Committee of the American Defense Society, announced yesterday that his committee had received $50 for the fund to be used to supply automobile omnibuses to the American Automobile Association for their free Sunday automobile service to Camp Upton. The committee last Sunday supplied a forty-passenger omnibus, which was used to convey soldiers' relatives to Camp Upton. Mr. Guggenheim's committee appeals to automobile owners to donate the use of their cars and to citizens to contribute to the American Defense Society's funds, which will be used to supply buses for camp auto service.

NEW HAVEN SUIT STANDS.

Judge Refuses to Dismiss $165,000,-000 Restitution Action.

A motion to dismiss the suit against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company and certain of its Directors for the restitution of $165,-000,000, which it is alleged was dissipated, was denied yesterday by Judge Hough of the Federal District Court. The plaintiffs are five minority stockholders, and besides the company the defendants are J. Pierpont Morgan, Herbert L. Satterlee, William P. Hamilton, and Lewis Cass Ledyard, as executors of the will of the late J. Pierpont Morgan; William Rockefeller, Charles M. Pratt, and Mr. Ledyard.

The motion to dismiss was made in behalf of the individual defendants on the ground that as the railroad was a defendant, diversity of citizenship did not figure in the proceedings, and that the suit should have been instituted in the Massachusetts district where the company was incorporated.

MOTOR TRUCK BILL AMENDED

Maximum Weight Is Raised from 5 to 12 1-2 Tons.

Word was received from Albany yesterday at the office of the Motor Truck Club of America, 1,790 Broadway, that the Hewitt bill, regulating motor truck weights for highway use, had been amended to permit a maximum weight of 25,000 pounds, equivalent to twelve and a half tons. Theodore D. Pratt, Executive Secretary of the club, who is in Albany with other representatives, sent word that after conferences with the State Highway and other officials an agreement was reached to amend the bill.

The original bill stipulated that loads over 10,000 pounds would be prohibited, which would have prevented the use of the standard five-ton trucks. Massachusetts allows truck weights up to fourteen tons, and New Jersey fifteen tons.

To the 100,000,000 People and the 10,000,000 Bond Holders in America

THERE are now more than 10,000,000 bond holders in the United States, as against only 300,000 a year ago. The sale of the three Liberty Loans has made this a nation of bond buyers—most of them lacking experience in investment and without facilities for safekeeping their securities.

We offer to all investors the following invaluable service:

1. We solicit orders for Liberty Bonds in all denominations (without profit or commission.)
2. We will store Liberty Bonds in our vaults without charge, clipping the coupons, if desired, and remitting to bond holders.
3. We will exchange your 3½ or 4% Liberty Bonds for the 4¼% bonds of the Third Loan.
4. We advise all investors to hold Liberty Bonds until maturity. However, should an emergency make it necessary to turn bonds into cash, we will sell them for the owners at the market price at a nominal charge.
5. Our statistical department is ready at any time to furnish full and accurate information on the various Liberty Loans, their conversion privileges, market, and the like, for the guidance of investors.

We invite all investors to make subscriptions for Liberty Bonds through us and to call at our office at Broadway and Liberty Street and let us explain our Liberty Bond service in further detail. If unable to call, write us today for particulars.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Advices from the Northwest said that weather conditions were favorable for the seeding of Spring wheat which is rapidly approaching completion. The Food Administration is highly elated over the very favorable crop prospects at the present time, and has ventured the prediction that if the crop gets through the season with its present indication there will be enough wheat to take care of home requirements and feed the Allies.

RYE.

The local market was dull and neglected and prices were nominal.

CORN.

The corn market has assumed a waiting position and operations were largely in the form of evening up of contracts. Trading in the new contract in the West will be inaugurated on Thursday. The trade believes that the price for the July position will conform with the present price of the cash article and that a broader hedging market will result. Cash prices in the West were firm, and in some cases 5 points higher, with the low grades in better demand. In the local cash market kiln dried No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.90½; No. 4 yellow, $1.83½; No. 3 white, $2.20½, cost and freight, New York.

OATS.

The oats market was unsettled, and, after showing early firmness, prices eased off and closed ⅛@¼c not lower. Chicago announced that the new contract will be adopted by the board on Thursday and voted upon by the members next Tuesday. The export demand was less active, and it was said that offers at reduced premiums were not accepted. The local cash market was easy. Natural quoted at $1.03½@$1.04½, clipped white, $1.04½@$1.07, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

There was a very quiet trade in the market for hog products, but prices were steadier owing to less pressure to sell and prompted by a somewhat firmer tone to the hog position, where prices were practically unchanged from the previous day. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 27,000, estimated for Wednesday, 30,000. Kansas City received 10,000 and Omaha 18,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Business in the market for cottonseed oil consisted of sales of 300 barrels for May delivery at 20 cents and exchanges of 3,000 barrels from May to July on an even basis. Otherwise the market was entirely nominal.

COFFEE.

Weakness developed at the opening of the coffee market yesterday with first prices showing declines of 8 to 15 points under liquidation which was inspired by reports that the Government had furnished the first steamer in its plan for replenishing supplies of coffee by larger importations from Brazil. This first flurry of selling was followed by quick reactions, however, and much of the early loss was regained, the close being steady at a net decline of only 4 to 7 points on a fair volume of business. The local spot market declined ⅛c due to the lower futures prices, but the market was quiet and prices more or less nominal.

The Brazil cable to the exchange reported the Rio spot market unchanged, while there was an advance of 100 reis in Santos. Santos futures were unchanged. Receipts at the two ports were 29,000 bags against 17,000 bags a year ago. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The fact that shipments of raw sugar from Cuba have been disappointingly small and not up to expectations has been due to the limitation of transportation. The weekly Cuban figures now show a slight increase in exports from the island the last week, being 67,967 tons, the bulk of which will reach United States Atlantic ports. Sailing vessels as well as additional steamers have been added to the sugar carrying trade and it is now believed that arrivals will be more regular and that local refining interests will be able to work their plants at full capacity in the very near future. In the meantime distribution continues moderate from day to day; but a slight improvement is noticeable. The International Sugar Committee made no purchases of Cuban sugars, but reported sales of 75,000 bags Porto Rico April shipment, at 6.005c, cost, insurance, and freight.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 9,399 packages. A stronger feeling developed toward the close Monday and yesterday morning an advance of ½c was established on most grades of fresh creamery. Trade is not quite so active at the higher rates, but there is a generally firm feeling. Renovated is still dragging. Ladles dull. Packing stock weak. Creamery, higher than extras, pound, 42@42½c; extras, (92 score,) 41½c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 40@41c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 38@39½c; thirds, 36½@37½c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 43@43½c; extras, 42@42½c; firsts, 40@41½c; seconds, 38½@39½c; creamery, held, as to quality, 34@40c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 41@41½c; good to prime, 38@40c; common to fair, 34@37½c; renovated, extras, 38½@39c; firsts, 37@38c; lower grades, 34@36c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35½@36½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 34@35c; seconds, 33c; lower grades, 31@32½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33@33½c; No. 2, 32@32½c; lower grades, 29@31c.

EGGS.—45,008 cases. Arrivals continue very large, but are showing a considerable decrease as compared with last week. The tone of the market is steadier, with rather more active trading. Most dealers report ability to supply their needs within ranges quoted, but some exceptionally fine marks of Northern regular packings are selling a little above our quotation for firsts which might not pass an official inspection above that grade, although they must be of unusually good size and cleanness. Some sales of storage packed eggs reported in the range quoted; many of the finest marks of Northern goods could not be obtained at our top quotation, but it would be difficult to find buyers for them at any higher price. Nearby white eggs show no material change; much of the business is in good size lots of mixed colors at 35@38c, only selections of fancy stocks reaching top quotations. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 37@38c; storage packed firsts, 35½@36½c; regular packed extra firsts, 34½@35½c; regular packed firsts, 32½@34c; seconds and poorer, 30@32c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 30½@31½c; No. 2, 29@30c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 29@30c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 38@40c; ordinary to prime, 37@38c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 36@38c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 36@38c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 37@38c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 33@35½c; duck eggs, 45@55c; goose eggs, per dozen, 60@70c.

Income Tax Exemption as Head of Family Not Permitted, Roper Rules.

MAKES SOME EXCEPTIONS

Where Man or Wife Is Absent Temporarily, as on a Visit, Exemption Will Be Accorded.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Another knotty question coming up under the income tax law was disposed of today by Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper. It was whether a husband and wife who live apart can claim the statutory exemptions of the head of a family or the joint exemption of a man and wife. The decision is that the man who does not maintain a household and live with his wife is in the status of a single man, and not entitled to the exemption. Where man or wife is absent temporarily, either traveling or visiting, or where one or the other is in a sanitarium, the exemptions provided by law will be recognized. The ruling follows:

"Section 7 of the Income Tax act of Sept. 8, 1916, as amended by the act of Oct. 3, 1917, provides that there shall be allowed as an exemption in the nature of a deduction from the amount of the net income of each citizen or resident of the United States the sum of $3,000, plus $1,000 additional if the person making the return be a head of a family or a married man or woman with a wife or husband living with him or her, except that only one deduction of $4,000 shall be made from the aggregate income of both husband and wife when living together, and plus $200 additional for each child dependent upon such person if under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective. Section 3 of the War Income Tax act of October 3, 1917, provides that in the case of the tax imposed by the later act the exemptione of $3,000 and $4,000 provided in Section 7 of the former act shall be, respectively, $1,000 and $2,000.

"Applying only to citizens and residents of the United States, there is accordingly an individual exemption of $3,000, except that if husband and wife live together a joint exemption of $4,000 under the earlier act and $2,000 under the later act is substituted for the several exemptions of $3,000 each under the earlier act and $1,000 each under the later act, and that if the taxpayer be a head of a family, consisting of a person or persons other than a wife or husband alone, his exemption is $4,000 under the earlier act and $2,000 under the later act, plus $200 for each dependent child.

"In the case of a married man or married woman the joint exemption replaces the individual exemptions only if his wife lives with him or her husband lives with her. In the absence of continuous actual residence together, whether or not a man or woman has a wife or husband living with him or her within the meaning of the statute must depend on the character of the separation. If merely occasionally and temporarily a wife is away on a visit or a husband is away on business, the joint home being maintained, the additional exemption applies. The unavoidable absence of a wife or a husband at a sanitarium or asylum on account of illness does not preclude claiming the exemption. If, however, the husband voluntarily and continuously makes his home at one place and the wife hers at another, they are not living together for the purpose of the statute, irrespective of their personal relations.

"A head of a family is a person who actually supports and maintains one or more of the individuals described in Paragraph 153 of the regulations in one household. In the absence of continuous actual residence together, whether or not a person with dependents is a head of a family within the meaning of the statute must depend on the character of the separation. If a child or other dependent is away only temporarily at school or on a visit, the common home being still maintained, the additional exemption applies. If, however, the dependent continuously makes his home elsewhere his benefactor is not the head of a family, irrespective of the question of support.

"Resident aliens claiming exemption because of families or wives residing abroad are not heads of families or married men or women with wives or husbands living with them within the meaning of the statute, and they are in no case entitled to more than their individual exemptions of $3,000 under the earlier act and $1,000 under the later act."

MUST PROVE EXEMPTION.

Income Tax Ruling Issued for Religious and Public Institutions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Religious, charitable and scientific societies that may be exempt from the income tax and not required to file tax returns nevertheless will be asked to file proof of the nature of the organization, so as to establish its exemption. Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper today issued the following ruling:

"The exemption from filing returns and paying income tax of corporations or associations organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific or educational purposes, business leagues, Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Trade, civic leagues, cemetery companies, and pleasure and recreation clubs is conditional.

"In order to establish exemption and thus be relieved of the duty of filing returns and paying income tax, it is necessary that such organizations as are specified hereinbefore file an affidavit with the Collector of Internal Revenue of the district in which they are located which will show the character of the organization, purpose for which organized, source of income, and its disposition, and whether or not any of its income is credited to surplus or inures or may inure to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual.

"Upon receipt of the affidavit the Collector will advise the organization whether or not it is exempt. If the Collector is in doubt he will refer the papers to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

"If it is held that the corporation itself is exempt from the income and excess profits taxes, it is not, however, exempt from the withholding requirements nor from furnishing information in accordance with the provisions of the act of Oct. 3, 1917."

SAYS ERIE FINANCES ARE IN GOOD CONDITION

President Underwood Tells Shareholders Stock Is More Valuable Than Ever Before.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Erie Railroad Company, held yesterday, retiring Directors were re-elected. President Underwood, in his address, took a very optimistic view both of Government control and of the prospects of the Erie. A resolution was unanimously adopted by the stockholders, declaring that the operating revenue of the Erie for the last three years had been more than sufficient to pay the first preferred dividends, and calling on the Directors to apply for permission from the Director General to pay them.

"After watching the Erie for fifteen years," said Mr. Underwood, "and comparing what it had in the way of business and plant then, with what it has in business and plant today, I am convinced that the stock has greater intrinsic value than ever before.

"For twenty years we have had bad laws, multiplicity of commissions, repression of railroads, and investigations, which have all interfered with the progress of the railroads. The country paid no attention to James J. Hill when he said that its transportation system was breaking down, and that billions of dollars would be needed to build it up again to the nation's requirements. The transportation system did break down, and when the Government took over the railroads it was high time.

"The railroads will come out from under Government control better off than ever before. Baiting of the railroads has heretofore been an entertaining pastime, but it was a very costly one to railroad stockholders, and to the country at large. Under Government control we shall have, instead of baiting, intelligent supervision and sound improvement in their physical condition. Competition will be done away with, and the evils that it brought in its train so far as operating efficiency was concerned. Many inequitable customs that have grown up in railroad operation will be eliminated.

"The railroad air will be purified all around. For the first time, indeed, today railroad affairs are being entirely administered by railroad men—our three Regional Directors are all trained railroad men, not political hacks."

N., C. & St. L. Road's Year.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 9.—The annual report of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railroad submitted to stockholders today, showed operating revenues of $15,194,755, an excess of $1,500,000 over those of 1916. Operating expenses for 1917 were $11,550,031, as against $9,749,810 for the previous year. The net income for the year was $2,839,816, as against $3,056,935 for the previous year.

ELLIOTT ON N. P. BOARD.

Former New Haven President Chosen Director, with George T. Slade.

At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, held yesterday, retiring Directors were re-elected, and the election of Howard Elliott and George T. Slade as Directors to succeed, respectively, William S. Tod, resigned, and Grant B. Schley, deceased, was ratified. Mr. Elliott was President of the Northern Pacific before he became President, and later Chairman of the Board of Directors, of the New Haven. The meeting was adjourned until April 30, in order to lay before the stockholders the contract entered into with the Railroad Administration for Government control of the road, which, it is hoped, will be complete by that time. The annual report of the company will also probably be ready for submittal to the stockholders on that date.

President Hannaford said that, on the whole, conditions as affecting the Northern Pacific and in its territory were such as to give confidence for the future. The company had suffered, like others, from uncertain labor conditions, the lure of higher wages in war factories, the call to the colors, and the draft, but had, he believed, been more successful than some other roads in coping with this situation. Mr. Hannaford was particularly optimistic regarding the crop outlook in the Northwest, which was far better than that of last season, while the weather so far had been excellent.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Fractional net losses in stocks marked the close of the market yesterday on the Exchange. The dullness which was notable during the greater part of the session gave way to activity in the final hour. In this period there were slight price recessions, but all issues showed improvement over the weak opening quotations.

Today's Obligation

It is to help the men "over there" win the war. To this everything is now secondary. Our future security and freedom are at stake.

The most effective way to help, for those who are not contributing their service in the field, is to lend the Government the money needed for the war—to buy Liberty Bonds.

It is an easy way to help in an hour of urgent need. The purchase of Liberty Bonds is a safe, profitable, prudent investment.

This Company's facilities and services are at the disposal of any intending subscriber to the Third Liberty Loan, or anyone desiring information regarding it—without charge or commission.

To Holders of

UNITED RAILWAYS 4s OF ST. LOUIS

If the ordinance passed by the Board of Aldermen March 26th is accepted by the Company, the bond and stock capitalization of the Company must be reduced to $60,000,000 to make the ordinance effective; therefore in order that the holders of General 4s may be in a position to protect themselves against any possible default of any of the underlying bonds ($3,500,000 of which fall due on June 1st, next), and against any plan of reorganization that might be proposed which would be prejudicial to the 4s, we again urge the holders of the 4s to deposit their bonds immediately, with any of the depositories named below.

We invite inquiries from bondholders who may desire further details regarding the ordinance, or the affairs of the Company.

A Deposit Agreement will be forwarded on application.

Yours very truly,

M'INTYRE ELECTED, IS JURY'S VERDICT

Members Decide Ballots Produced for Recount Had Been Changed.

NEW TRIAL IS ASKED FOR

Ex-Judge Delehanty, Failing in This Move, Will Take Case to Court of Appeals.

The jury before Supreme Court Justice Sawyer that for two months has been hearing the suit by James A. Delehanty to oust John F. McIntyre from his seat on the General Sessions bench, in the course of which a recount of the ballots showed that Delehanty received 826 votes more than McIntyre, yesterday returned a verdict upholding Judge McIntyre's election, after an hour's deliberation. The original canvass of the vote by the Board of Canvassers showed McIntyre's election by 816 votes.

The jury's verdict was based on its belief that the ballots when produced in court for the recount were not in the same condition as when counted by the election officials. Justice Sawyer said in his charge: "The vital question is, what was the true count of the ballots on election night? If they were tampered with or contaminated, then you are the judges of the fact."

Counsel for ex-Judge Delehanty moved to set aside the verdict of the jury as against the weight of the evidence, and the court will hear argument on the application this morning. The members of the jury thanked Justice Sawyer for his courtesy and presented a small clock to the court. It was stated yesterday the jury was composed of six Republicans, three Democrats, and three independents. The foreman was Charles J. Henher, Jr., of 130 West Fifty-second Street, and one of the members was Adolph Zukor, film producer.

Several of Judge McIntyre's friends gathered in his chambers at the Criminal Court Building to congratulate him. He said: "I have no statement to make except that I am very much gratified at the verdict of the jury. I feel that justice has been done. I never had any doubt of the outcome because I knew from the beginning that I had won."

Whether or not Justice Sawyer grants the application to set aside the verdict and directs a new trial, the case will be appealed, but is not likely to be decided by the Court of Appeals before the end of the year.

NURSES' CAMP AT VASSAR.

Red Cross and National Defense Council to Supervise Training.

Four scholarships, each for $350, have been given to the Vassar Training Camp for Nurses, to be held at the college this Summer, by the class of '13 of Vassar, in memory of their classmate Miss Anabel Roberts, who was the first American girl to lose her life in active service at the front. The scholarships are to cover the expenses of the three months' course at Vassar and the personal expenses of the student for the subsequent two years in hospital training. Miss Roberts died last January while on duty at a British base hospital near Etretat, France. She was a graduate of the Training School for Nurses of the Presbyterian Hospital.

The camp to be held at Vassar this Summer will be a Plattsburg for nurses, under the auspices of the Red Cross and the Council for National Defense. It will also prepare educated women to fill administrative and executive positions made vacant by the abnormal demands upon the nursing profession, both at home and abroad. The Trustees of Vassar have offered the use of the grounds, buildings, and equipment for the Summer for this training, and the Red Cross has given $75,000 to cover the operating expenses from June 24 to Sept. 13.

Foremost specialists in medicine and nursing will make up the Faculty of the camp, and in its equipment and facilities for instruction it will be on a par with the highest standards of the best professional schools. Applications to enter are received from graduates of all approved colleges, beginning with the class of '18 and going back ten years. The age must be from 21 to 30 and the health sound. The fee is $95, which covers cost of tuition and maintenance, pupils furnishing their own uniforms.

REFINED OIL SHORTAGE THREATENED IN EAST

Mark L. Requa, Government Oil Director, held a conference yesterday with the Petroleum War Service Committee at the offices of the Standard Oil Company, 26 Broadway, to consider more efficient distribution of the country's stock of fuel oil. It was said that a few refiners were experiencing difficulty in getting supplies of oil to their plants, due to poor transportation facilities. Adequate storage facilities for consumers was another matter up for consideration. On this point Mr. Requa said:

"We are getting up a list of consumers of fuel oil and want them to provide adequate storage facilities. We want them to provide storage facilities to meet sixty-day requirements. Some of these consumers are using tank cars in their yards for storage purposes, drawing upon the cars for the oil as required. This practice ties up cars urgently needed for quick transportation movement. With proper storage facilities, consumers would not be under the necessity of tying up the rolling stock wanted to carry oil."

The Oil Director said a shortage of refined oil products was threatened this year on the Eastern seaboard. Illustrating this, he said the Presidential Refinery, at Baltimore, was out of oil. Mr. Requa expects to meet the President of this concern here today and see if it is possible to obtain a supply. Mr. Requa will continue his conference with the oil men here today and return to Washington tonight.

Mr. Requa also held a conference at the New York office of the Oil Division of the Federal Fuel Administration, 42 Broadway, with representatives of the wire rope manufacturing industry from every part of the country. It was decided that a general speeding up of production in the domestic wire rope industry would be necessary if the new oil and gas wells now in course of development for naval and other war purposes were to be properly equipped.

The wire rope representatives told Mr. Requa that the scarcity in wire rope at this time was due to the abnormally large contracts placed by the Government for the navy and army. The conference developed the fact that between 20,000 and 25,000 tons of wire rope would be required to equip the projected enlargements in oil and gas production in the United States. This tonnage the manufacturers present promised to furnish.

Mr. Requa had a word of warning to say to the ropemakers against profiteering. "I find," he said, "that there has been considerable profiteering in wire rope, not by the manufacturers, but by jobbers. This profiteering has amounted to as high as 300 per cent. That practice we will stop wherever found. The provisions of the Lever law under which the Fuel Administration is working will be applied to correct this abuse."

AT THE FUR AUCTION.

Active Bidding for Silver Fox Was the Feature Yesterday.

Active bidding for silver fox, especially the medium grades, featured the second day of the annual Spring sale of raw furs that is now going on in the Masonic Temple here. The competition for these pelts was said by experienced fur men to be the most active ever seen at a local sale, and, when some of the most desirable medium grade skins were under the hammer, the "spotters" and the auctioneer had difficulty in keeping up with the bids.

The highest-priced silver fox sold went to Louis Gassner of San Francisco for $490. Largely due to the farm breeding of these animals, the demand for blacks is not as active as it was some years ago, and black skins that sold here yesterday at $100 to $125 would then have brought several times those amounts. As one buyer put it, "The farm fox has robbed the wild fox of his glory." In addition to Mr. Gassner, silver fox was bought by C. G. Gunther's Sons, Halle Brothers of Cleveland, A. Fisher, H. Jaeckel & Sons, Kaufmann & Oberleder, and Konvalinka & Weise.

The prices obtained for these skins were good generally, and played no small part in raising the total for the two days' selling to about $1,250,000. Because of the slowness with which these furs are sold, the entire collection could not be disposed of yesterday. About 175 skins, therefore, have been put over until today, when selling will begin at 9:30 A. M., commencing with lot No. 3,602.

Red fox, which had been held over from Monday, were the first skins put up yesterday. About 600 buyers were present when Auctioneer Noakes took up his hammer, and there was plenty of snap to bidding. The best price paid for a pelt of this kind was $45.50, and the buyer was H. Jaeckel & Sons. Others who bought red fox included Milton Schreiber & Co., N. Sobel, Kohn & Rappaport and Goldman & Bernstein.

White fox also came in for some active bidding, the top price in this case—$44—being paid by John Hallam of Toronto. Eisenbach Brothers & Co., Gross, Engel & Co., Otto Erler, A. Basee and H. Haimovicz were among the other white fox buyers. Other offerings during the day consisted of mole and leopard. The best price for the former was 62 cents, and was paid by H. Sameth. Prices on mole were good generally, as this fur is in demand for several types of Summer garments. The Newchwang Trading Company bought the best leopard for $23.

Additional Liberty Loan subscriptions obtained during the day up to 4 P. M. swelled the total to $1,796,000. One subscription of $25,000 was received from Maynard Miller & Co., Inc., and subscriptions of $10,000 each came from M. Groh's Sons and H. D. Fertel. Revillon Frères, who were incorrectly reported yesterday as having subscribed $10,000, really bought bonds to the value of $100,000. The same amount was purchased by Joseph Ullmann, Inc., who had been credited only with a $50,000 subscription.

These percentage advances were shown by the furs sold yesterday over the corresponding prices obtained at the January sale: Red fox, 35; white fox, 20; mole, 20; leopard, 25, and silver fox, 30. Following the finishing of silver fox selling today the following will be offered: 66,297 mink, 11,008 badger and 82,687 ermine.

WANTS STATUE LEVELED.

Senator Owen Would Drop Frederick II. into Potomac River.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—In the course of a bitter denunciation of the Hohenzollerns Senator Owen, addressing the Conference of American Lecturers today, declared that the War College statue of "that venerable Prussian scoundrel, Frederick II., ought to be dragged down and dropped into the Potomac."

The Kaiser has fallen down miserably in his vainglorious promises to his people, said Representative Simeon D. Fess of Ohio. The Potsdam assurance of August, 1914, that the German troops would return to their homes victorious in less than three months, he said, can be classed with his promises to bring England to her knees and to relieve the German people from payment of the enormous war expenses.

Buyer for Residence on East Seventy-sixth Street—Mercer Street Sale.

Robert F. Adams sold his residence at 3 East Seventy-sixth Street yesterday to a client of William B. May & Co., who will occupy after extensive alterations are made. It is a modern five-story American basement house, which was built several years ago by C. I. Hudson, from plans by Hess & Weeks, and measures 30 by 90 feet, with side windows on the west, overlooking Fifth Avenue. The holding price has been $225,000.

At the Fifth Avenue corner is the residence of Mrs. J. J. Wysong. The dwelling at No. 7, east of the property just sold, was purchased by Herbert Parsons through the same brokers about two years ago.

Sale on Mercer Street.

The Bond and Mortgage Company sold 153 Mercer Street, a five-story building, on a lot 25 by 100, to a client of Stoddard & Mark, attorneys. The property consists of more than 100 acres of rolling land, with a two-story frame Colonial house, barns, and other outbuildings. The property was held at $1,000 an acre, and brought close to the holding price.

Fifty-seventh Street Leases.

High-class retail development in West Fifty-seventh Street continues to absorb desirable business locations between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. A millinery concern leased from Ensign F. Hamilton Davis, a United States Navy aviator, his four-story residence at 52 West Fifty-seventh Street, for a long term. The property will be altered to meet the requirements of the lessee.

James Kyle & Sons rented the large store and basement at 748 Lexington Avenue, for a term of years, to Solomon Starr for a restaurant.

Real Estate Men Buying Bonds.

Real estate men comprising various committees of the Real Estate Board are engaged in an active campaign for subscriptions to the third Liberty Loan. Although the new drive has just begun, brokers, agents, and operators have shown their earnestness by heavy purchases of bonds.

Unlike many of the committees working among the various trades, the Real Estate Board Liberty Loan Committee has not set a total for subscriptions it will obtain. With approximately 8,000 persons and estates for possible subscribers, the real estate brokers say they will be satisfied only with an amount that will equal the utmost ability of the subscribers.

The team working in the neighborhood of Forty-second Street brought in more than $30,000 yesterday. Downtown workers south of Fulton Street signed up $89,000. Others reported big subscriptions promised, but not yet ready to be announced. Nine captains still were to be heard from when the books were closed for the day.

Clinic for Wounded Soldiers.

Plans have been filed for making alterations in the three, four, six, and seven story hospital building at 321 East Fifteenth Street, at an estimated cost of $12,000. Butler & Rodman, architects, filed the plans, which call in part for altering the northerly portion of the building to permit the installation of a clinic where treatment can be given to wounded soldiers. The New York Infirmary for Women and Children is the owner of record.

Realty Notes.

Nathan Hirsch, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Taxation, will make an address on Friday evening, April 12, at the meeting of the Real Estate Owners' Association of the Twelfth and Nineteenth Wards.

The 148-150 West Twenty-fourth Street Corporation, formed at Albany with a capital of $80,000, will acquire the twelve-story loft structure, 50 by 98.9, at that address. Title to the property is now held by the Security Mortgage Company. Harry F. Spellman, Florence G. Leary, and Florence H. Merrill are the Directors of the new company.

The White Fireproof Construction Company has received the general contract for the erection of a seven-story reinforced concrete factory, 63 by 85, and a two-story addition, 145 by 85, for Julius Kayser & Co. at Taffe Place and De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn. The estimated cost has been placed at $300,000.

A meeting of the Harlem Property Owners' Association has been called for Thursday evening, April 11, at 147 East 125th Street.

ALDERMEN URGE SUPPORT

Socialist Members Join in Passing Resolution Calling for Prompt and Generous Response.

The Treasury Department's order forbidding the Federal Reserve Bank of New York to make public subscription totals has removed the most effective means of gauging the progress of the third Liberty Loan campaign in this district, but if the reports of a limited number of subscriptions is an indication of how the loan is going, yesterday's announcements were encouraging. Aonmg the few applications that were made public were one for $35,000,000 by the United States Steel Corporation, and another of $10,000,000 by the Prudential Insurance Company of America. The holding back of subscriptions totals has excited a great deal of curiosity as to what the figures will show when once the Treasury Department decides to permit the publication of returns made to the Reserve Bank.

E. H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, in announcing the $35,000,000 subscription, said that $10,000,000 of that amount was to be offered to employes of the corporation and subsidiary companies on an installment plan. For the First Liberty Loan the Steel Corporation subscribed $50,000,000, and its allotment was in the neighborhood of $30,000,000, while its subscription to the Second Liberty Loan amounted to $35,000,000. Besides these bond purchases the corporation has made large investments in Treasury certificates of indebtedness, especially in the issue maturing June 25, which is acceptable in payment of Federal income and excess profits taxes due June 15.

Aldermen Take Action.

The Board of Aldermen at its meeting yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution offered by Vice Chairman Moran urging upon the people of New York City the importance of responding promptly and generously to the call of the Government for subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan. The Committee on Rules was authorized to give the Aldermanic Chamber for any meeting that the Liberty Loan Committee might desire to hold. The seven Socialists in the board voted in favor of the resolution, Alderman Lee, the leader of the party in the board, advocating its passage.

The resolution reads:

Resolved, That the Board of Aldermen of the City of New York earnestly urges upon the people of the city the paramount importance of responding promptly and generously to the call of the Government for subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan.

The founders of our nation made untold sacrifices to establish what they solemnly declared to be the unalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. If we are to be worthy of the name of free men every energy that we possess must be exerted to preserve unimpaired the precious heritage of liberty and freedom descending to us.

The country's heart is in this righteous struggle for humanity and justice. This is the people's war, in which the glorious ideals of democracy are arrayed against the ruthless dictates of autocracy and militarism.

Our heroic soldiers are now shedding their blood on the battlefields of France. They may engage at any moment in the critical battle now raging, the outcome of which we are awaiting with mingled hope and anxiety.

To carry on the war successfully the Government asks for a loan of our money, for which the best security in the world will be given. Let the response of the people of this city be so prompt and substantial as to carry conviction to the world of the unwavering determination of a united people to support the policies of the Government in this just war, to the end that it may be prosecuted with such vigor as to compel an early, victorious and righteous peace.

Every man and woman in the City of New York should feel an individual sense of responsibility for the success of this loan. We call upon them all to subscribe to it most liberally and to participate therein as fully as may be in their power. Any sacrifice that this may entail should not only be a solemn duty, but a privilege of which we should be proud to avail ourselves. This should be in every sense a popular loan, overwhelming not only in amount, but in the number of those who subscribe to it.

Let us strengthen the hands of the President, who has so eloquently urged the employment of a righteous and triumphant force which shall make right the law of the world and cast every selfish dominion down in the dust.

Silver Cup for Best Record.

The Defense Committee of the Manhattan Club, of which Morgan J. O'Brien is Chairman, voted yesterday to give a silver cup to the town in the New York District which makes the best showing in the drive for the Third Liberty Loan. The award will be made by the Liberty Loan Committee to the town which oversubscribes its quota by the largest amount, the contest to be conducted on a percentage basis.

About 2,000 towns will compete for the prize. The Club Committee will remain closely in touch with the Liberty Loan Committee during the course of the contest, and will keep a careful record of the returns. The plan has received the approval of the Treasury Department and the Liberty Loan Committee.

Liberty bonds, it was announced yesterday, would be on sale during the drive at the French Exposition, 677 Fifth Avenue.

New York's theatrical managers have subscribed $1,130,000 to date to the Third Liberty Loan, according to an announcement made yesterday by E. F. Albee, Chairman of the Theatrical Allied Interests Committee. The list is headed by Klaw and Erlanger, with $150,000, and includes a $100,000 subscription from Martin Beck, the vaudeville manager.

Conversion Privileges Explained.

Because of the many inquiries that have been received by the Liberty Loan Committee in reference to the conversion privileges of the outstanding bond issues, Arthur M. Anderson, Director of Distribution, issued the following statement:

The conversion privilege of the outstanding Liberty bonds should be clearly understood. No outstanding bond carries the right of conversion into a 4¼ per cent. bond running for ten years, which is the length of the issue now being sold.

Holders of the 3½s (or of the 4s issued on conversion of the 3½s) may convert into a 30-year 4¼ per cent. bond redeemable, at the option of the Secretary of the Treasury, after fifteen years from the date of the bonds. Holders of the second loan 4s may convert into a 25-year 4¼ per cent. bond, redeemable, at the option of the Secretary of the Treasury, after ten years. None of the 4¼ per cent. bonds so issued on conversion of outstanding bonds will in turn carry a conversion privilege.

The 3½ per cent. bonds, if not converted within the period set by the Secretary of the Treasury, will still retain the right to convert into subsequent issues bearing a higher rate of interest than 3½ per cent. ent issued during the period of the war, (except short term issues.) The 4 per cent. bonds, both those issued through conversion of 3½s and those of the second loan, will not again have any right of subsequent conversion. If the holder desires to exercise his right he must do so during the next few months and within the period set by the Secretary of the Treasury. After the period set by the Secretary of the Treasury, the only issue now outstanding and carrying a conversion privilege will be the unconverted 3½s.

Such of the 3½ per cent. bonds as are converted into the thirty-year 4¼ per cent. bonds will become identical with regard to tax features with the new 4¼s and will cease to have the tax features originally specified in the 3½ per cent. bonds.

The new bonds now being sold are repayable absolutely at the end of ten years, and are not subject to prior redemption, nor are they convertible. Buyers should understand clearly that the only way the ten-year 4¼ per cent. bonds may be secured is through subscriptions to the new issue which the Secretary of the Treasury is offering. The ten-year 4¼ per cent. bonds cannot be secured through conversion of any outstanding issue.

The committee also issued a statement regarding Liberty bond "scalpers" who trade in installment receipts and pay only a small part of their cash value. The committee pointed out that under the new partial payment plan arrangement, which has already been set on foot in this city, there are more than 600 stations where the subscriber may make his payments. There is also a bureau where he can report any complaints and through which he can make arrangements for the sale of his bonds if his financial circumstances are such that he must dispose of his holdings.

The Irving National Bank, through its London representative, is making a special appeal for subscriptions to the Liberty Loan to the leading banks in the Netherlands, Scandinavia, and Spain, agreeing to subscribe in their behalf and to hold the bonds without charge.

Clergymen of New York City churches, at a meeting held yesterday, approved the plan to hold a women's service flag parade on Saturday, April 27. Major William Tutherly outlined the scope of the project and Bishop Charles S. Burch was chosen Chairman of a central committee, which will have charge of the parade. Bishop Burch named as his coworkers on the committee Dr. Walter Laidlaw, Secretary; Rabbi Silverman, Rabbi Mendes, Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, Dr. Rexford Raymond, Dr. J. W. Maynard, Dr. Fred W. Adams, Bishop Luther Wilson, Dr. Charles A. Albertson, Dr. Howard Duffield, Dr. Gaylord White, Dr. Cornelius Woifkin, Dr. Frank Oliver Hall, Dr. William Sullivan, Dr. Finis Idleman, Dr. G. W. Werner, and Dr. George B. Remsensnyder. It was stated that Mgr. Lavelle had expressed the opinion that the parade would have Cardinal Farley's hearty co-operation. The women will march from Washington Square up Fifth Avenue to Fifty-ninth Street.

Colonel's Sister Talks to Crowd.

Despite the rain, large crowds attended the open-air meetings held yesterday. At the Sub-Treasury addresses were delivered by American and Canadian army officers and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, sister of Colonel Roosevelt. There were loud cheers when Mrs. Robinson said: "I want to quote a favorite paragraph of the Colonel's to you now. It is, 'Don't shout, but shoot,' and to that I will add a sentence of my own, 'If you can't put the "I" in "Fight," you can at least put the "Pay" in "Patriotism."'"

Colonel R. De Salabarry of the First Canadian Contingent, who has seen three years' service on the western front, told the audience that American soldiers were coming into the fight just in the nick of time.

"We are counting on you to help us finish the job of whipping Germany," he said. "Every man cannot give his blood for his country, but every man, woman, and child can do his and her bit by buying these Liberty bonds, which will help end the war.

"Give us food, give us guns, so that our men and your men may not be wanting in strength. Remember that flesh and blood alone cannot crash through the great German war machine. We shall win, but we shall win only by work, sacrifice, and gritting our teeth. Put your shoulders to the wheel!"

Rear Admiral Nathaniel R. Usher spoke at the Liberty Theatre, erected on the terrace of the Public Library.

"Not only must we step in and take part in this war by sending our men to the front," he said, "but we must build ships, manufacture guns and munitions with which those men are to fight. If you are not fighting you can provide the means for others to go and fight. We must destroy the Hun. The war will only be dragged out endlessly if you do not make up your minds to get into the battle with your whole heart and soul."

Thomas W. Lamont Speaks.

Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co. spoke at a Liberty Loan meeting held on the floor of the Produce Exchange, where subscriptions to the amount of $2,204,700 were collected. Applications ranged from $50 bonds to that of the Corn Products Refining Company for $1,000,000. Among the subscriptions were the following for $100,000 each: Power, Son & Co.; Hassler Bros. Company, Kuh & Valk, Battery Park National Bank, Barber Steamship Company, Limited. In announcing the last-mentioned company R. A. Claybrook, President of the Exchange, stated that this was an initial subscription. Those who subscribed for $50,000 each were E. W. Timmons and George A. Zabriskie. Mr. Lamont entered a subscription of $5,000 for his eight-year-old daughter. Miss Louise Homer sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" at the opening of the meeting and "The Star-Spangled Banner" at the close.

"As yet the even current of our lives here is not greatly disturbed by the war. I say that advisedly, in the face of the fact that hundreds of our young men are on their way to the front, or are already there, that each one of you is, as I know, deeply engaged in some useful form of war activity. But over on the other side, in France and in England, whence I came not so long ago, war is the affair of every hour and of every minute of the day. Its tragedy and its demands are ever present. We shall gain some real inkling of it only when the tragedy of losses begins to come home to us, only when we see real suffering among our people; only when the war comes so close to our doors that, perforce, we are obliged to change completely the habits of our daily lives, and give up willingly and gladly, as they have done on the other side, so many of the things that we have hitherto thought vital.

"Some one has asked me whether France was not bled white. Bled white? I tell you France was never more heroic, never more valorous, never more steadfast than today. Why, after she has lost 1,000,000 men in killed alone, she has in the field a larger army by hundreds of thousands than she had on Jan. 1, 1915, when her full quota of men were at the front. No, France will never yield!"

Elephants Parade Today.

Today's events include a Liberty Loan parade of the Barnum & Bailey elephants and the appearance of Mary Pickford at various places. Led by Albert, said to be the biggest elephant in the world, bearing between his tusks a banner reading "Buy a Liberty Bond," the circus animals will leave Madison Square Garden at 10 o'clock and move through Twenty-seventh Street to Fifth Avenue, then north to Fifty-eighth Street, east to Madison Avenue, and then back to the Garden.

Miss Pickford is scheduled to appear on the steps of the Sub-Treasury in Wall Street at noon, and at 1:30 o'clock she will be in City Hall Park and make a speech at the Liberty Bell. At 3 o'clock she will speak at the Liberty Theatre, Forty-second Street and Fifth Avenue.

English Prelate to Speak.

The Archbishop of York will make his last public speech in this country at a Liberty Loan mass meeting to be held at Carnegie Hall tomorrow evening. Other speakers will be Mrs. August Belmont and George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia. Tickets for the meeting may be procured by applying to the Liberty Loan Bureau of Speakers and Meetings, 120 Broadway.

The school children of New York have been enlisted in the work of drumming up subscriptions to the loan. Those of the public schools have been joined by those attending the parochial schools. School rallies will be held and mothers' meetings will be arranged for. Plans have also been made for the distribution of prizes to the school making the best showing and to the individual collecting the largest amount of subscriptions.

Brooks Leavitt of the Liberty Loan Committee is planning to form a choir of 3,000 male and female voices. The chorus is to meet thrice weekly—Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings—in the High School of Commerce, 155 West Sixty-fifth Street. After the People's Chorus is organized it will give a public concert at which the new Liberty Anthem will be sung.

Monday night's parade of the New York State Guard, reinforced by 300 speakers, resulted in bond subscriptions amounting to $3,600,000, according to an announcement made by the committee yesterday.

HUGE LOAN SURPLUS IS URGED BY M'ADOO

10,000 SPEAKERS AT WORK

Treasury Has to Declare Contest for the Honor Flag a Tie Among Forty-Five Claimants.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—A plea for a subscription to the Third Liberty Loan of three or four times the minimum quota of $3,000,000,000 is being sounded by Secretary McAdoo on his Southern tour, according to telegraphic advices received today from Raleigh, N. C., by the Treasury Department. Such a response, he declared, would carry inestimable discouragement to the enemies of America.

After warning against overconfidence because the loan has started with every indication of great success, the Secretary said:

"Let us not stop when we have reached our quota. Let us go forward and make the quota three or four times as great, if it is possible to do it, and let us at the same time make the number of subscribers to these bonds three times as great as it was before. There is no answer that will carry such discouragement to the enemies of America and of civilization as that 20,000,000 American citizens have subscribed this time for Liberty bonds. We can get the 20,000,000 if we slay in the fight and make up our minds to do it.

"If we do this it will mean that the loan will be widely distributed, that it will not strain the resources of the country, and it will mean in addition that we shall not have three billion dollars, but four billion or five billion, to help our gallant men in this supreme test of all time for the liberties of the world."

Treasury Department officials in charge of the conduct of the Liberty Loan campaign said today that the present force of speakers was the largest yet employed in support of a war loan. There are now more than 10,000 speakers working under the direction of the Liberty Loan Speakers' Bureau. Of this great number, fully 500 are persons of national reputation. Even Presidential campaigns are not to be compared with the bond exploitation now in progress.

10,000 Meetings in a Day.

The reports and records of Charles F. Horner, Manager of the Speakers' Bureau, show that last Saturday, the opening day of this campaign, there were more than 10,000 public meetings to promote the sale of the bonds. Treasury officials stand behind the broad statement that not a single speaker is getting a cent for his efforts in support of the loan and many are paying their own expenses of travel and hotel entertainment.

William Jennings Bryan will hold Liberty Loan meetings at Birmingham, Ala., on the morning of April 16; at Miami, Fla., the evening of April 18; at Savannah, Ga., the evening of April 20, and at Asheville, N. C., April 29.

The theatrical profession has been mobilized this time as never before. Leading men and women in hundreds of theatrical companies are making Liberty Loan curtain speeches. Many of the best known moving picture stars are touring the country speaking in behalf of the Liberty Loan.

San Francisco wired the Treasury Department today that sixty-five communities had claimed honor flags. New York reported the claim of about twenty-five honor flags. From Chicago came word that twenty-four townships in Will County, Illinois, had gone over the top, and that the city of Joliet raised its entire quota in eight hours without the assistance of a single corporation or bank. Burlington, Vt., also was an early claimant of an honor flag.

Every part of the country is reporting that no committee is going to be satisfied with merely obtaining its quota.

Multiple Tie for First Place.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — National recognition for the first place in the race for the third Liberty Loan honor flag will have to be divided among probably a hundred communities which subscribed their full quota within a few minutes after 9 o'clock last Saturday morning and reported in such close order that it is impossible to give each an individual rank.

Consequently the Treasury has declared the contest result a multiple tie and tonight gave out the names of forty-five communities in five Federal Reserve districts which are to share honors. Reports from other districts later are expected to swell this list to more than one hundred.

The forty-five already tied at the top of the nation's honor roll are:

NEW YORK DISTRICT—Athens, Cedarhurst, College Point, Far Rockaway, Hewlett, Interlaken, Inwood, Larchmont, Lawrence, Lodi, McGraw, Marathon, New Baltimore, Pearl River, Richfield Springs, Spring Valley, Woodmere, N. Y.; Barnardsville, Cranford, Englishtown, Far Hills, Mendeham, Pompton Lakes, Woodbridge, N. J.; Newton, Conn.

PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT — Pitman, Penns Grove, N. J.; Ambler, Wayne, (Delaware County); Catasauqua, Hamburg, Woolrich, (Clinton County); Jenkintown, Everett, Mann, Monroe, East Providence, West Providence, Snake Spring, Southampton, Penn.; Elmer, N. J.

BOSTON DISTRICT—Southborough, Mass.

CLEVELAND DISTRICT—Ironton, Ohio.

ATLANTA DISTRICT—La Grange, Ga.

In addition to the race for the honor of reporting a full subscription first, there remain a number of contests for the ranking by population classes. For instance, Lynn, Mass., appears to be the first city in the class between 50,000 and 100,000 population (1910 census figures) to reach its quota, and Sioux City seems the first between 25,000 and 50,000. Joliet, Ill., with a 1910 population of 35,000, and Burlington, Vt., with 20,000, also are among the first to report in their class.

NINE HONOR FLAGS AWARDED.

Many Other New England Towns Clamor for Similar Distinction.

BOSTON, April 9.—Honor flags were awarded today to nine New England communities whose reports of oversubscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan had been officially confirmed by the New England Committee. Meanwhile, the claims of thirty-six other municipalities were being investigated, and it was expected that many of them would receive their banners tomorrow.

The first to be entitled to unfurl these flags are Southboro, Weston, and West Tisbury, Mass.; Stratford and Stewartstown, N. H.; Canaan, Winooski and Burlington, Vt., and Haddam, Conn. Reports received today indicated that Lynn, Mass.; Plymouth, N. H., and Higganum and Pomfret, Conn., were well over their allotment.

LIBERTY 4S DECLINE AGAIN.

New Low Record on Current Movement for Bonds of Second Loan.

The Liberty 4 per cent. bonds of the second loan, which began to decline last week, moved downward again yesterday morning to a low record on the current movement at 95.90. Afterward large buying orders appeared, bringing a recovery to 96.28 by midafternoon, but later the bonds were pressed for sale again, and closed at 96, compared with a final quotation of 95.98 the day before. The turnover was $2,775,000, a total $680,000 greater than on Monday.

Various theories to account for the selling pressure against the second 4s since the campaign for the third loan began have been advanced in the financial district. It is said in same well-informed quarters that wealthy persons have been selling their holdings in order to raise funds to subscribe for the new issue. Another is that a substantial output has come from corporations which desire money for the same purpose, and a third has hinted at selling for account of persons favoring the Central Powers as a factor in the decline.

The Stock Exchange is checking up the sales made by its members, with particular reference to dealings on April 2, 3, 4, and 5. The brokers have been asked to supply the Committee on Business Conduct with data covering the date of transactions, amount, price, and the customer's name and address. The procedure is similar to that followed last Winter when persistent selling of Liberty bonds caused the Stock Exchange authorities to check up sales under the suspicion that part of the output was of enemy origin or from German sympathizers. Rumors were heard in Wall Street yesterday that the trace of extensive short selling had been uncovered, but Exchange Governors asserted that the inquiry had not disclosed any unnatural features to the market.

The second 4s have sold lower than they did yesterday. On Feb. 13 the quotation touched 94.70, from which a recovery to 97.98 occurred, this record high price for the year being established on the enormous buying on March 28, the day following the announcement of the third loan terms. In that session a total of $26,000,000 of the bonds changed hands, $10,000,000 being taken by a single Stock Exchange house, presumably for certain wealthy investors.

Largely because of the heavy transactions in Liberty bonds, the Stock Exchange is planning to send out bond quotations over a ticker service separate from the ticker carrying stock prices. The program has been under discussion for some months and is expected to go into operation before midsummer. Under the present system bond quotations are frequently delayed when the stock market is active. With two tickers the prices will go out simultaneously.

INVESTIGATE HEALTH MEN.

Civil Service Board Asks Bureau Heads as to Methods.

The Civil Service Commission, acting with the Commissioner of Accounts, began its inquiry yesterday regarding the methods of the Health Department, as requested by Health Commissioner Amster. Among those examined were Dr. Frank Krause, Sanitary Superintendent; L. P. Brown, head of the Bureau of Foods and Drugs; Dr. William F. Guilfoy, Registrar of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, and Dr. L. Harris, Director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases. Dr. Harris explained that it had been the custom of the department for many years to furnish the Charity Organization Society with the record of every person who had applied to the Health Department for treatment.

President MacBride of the commission said that this system was manifestly improper, and he will recommend that it be discontinued. It was said yesterday that the main reason for the inquiry was that the Mayor had sent Commissioner Amster a letter directing him to remove certain bureau heads, and that Dr. Amster, in reply, had suggested that the Mayor have the Civil Service Commission and the Commissioner of Accounts investigate the legality of the appointment of the bureau heads and report their findings to the Corporation Counsel for an opinion upon which the Health Commissioner said he would act.

Come and see the Type of Motor that is Helping the Allies Win

To transport troops overland was a desperately urgent and tremendously difficult task. The fate of nations hung upon the results!

London omnibuses, with "Knight" motors, were largely used. Why?

When the British Tank was adopted the "Knight" was again chosen. Why?

Twenty-five thousand owners of Willys-Knight cars in America can readily and enthusiastically tell you why.

And because—

The sleeve-valve motor holds every world's record for length of run, power produced, absence of wear and lack of carbon deposit.

Against all the arguments for all other types of motors is this out-weighing advantage of the Willys-Knight—the Knight is the only type of motor that improves with use.

Additional reasons for preferring the Willys-Knight are its noiseless body construction and its moderate cost.

Our volume enables us to market this more efficient and self-preserving motor at a remarkably moderate cost.

SENATORS DEMAND ONE-MAN CONTROL OF AIR PROGRAM

POINTS TO MANY FAILURES

Procrastination and Lack of Decision Declared to be the Chief Causes of Delays.

CALL ON PRESIDENT TO ACT

Senators Sheppard, Myers, and Kirby File Minority Report, Praising Department's Efforts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Two reports on the Government's aviation program came from the Senate Military Affairs Committee today, presenting widely differing aspects of the situation.

The majority report contains pointed criticism of the Government for what is characterized as its "disappointing failure" in the airplane program. Procrastination, neglect to arrive at quick decisions, and an "aloofness in dealing with persons having information" as to airplanes are pointed to in the majority report as underlying reasons for the Government's failure to supply its army with aircraft.

The Government is criticised in the majority report for having "misrepresented the progress of the aviation program." This, the report says, has misled the public. The report states that the Government has no "broad plan looking to the future development" of war planes. It urges "constant expansion" and unceasing effort, and recommends that the aircraft program be taken out of the hands of the Signal Corps, where it has been since last Summer, and that an executive officer, to be appointed by the President, be put in control.

The majority report was signed by Senators Chamberlain, Chairman of the committee; Hitchcock, Reed, and Thomas, Democrats, and Weeks, Wadsworth, New, Frelinghuysen, and Sutherland, Republicans.

Senators Sheppard of Texas, Myers of Montana, and Kirby of Arkansas, all Democrats, put in the minority report defending the Administration and insisting that it has faced extraordinary difficulties that were not easily overcome.

Senators Fletcher, McKellar, and Beckman signed neither report.

Only Fifteen Combat Planes Built.

The majority report reveals that only fifteen combat planes have been completed, and that only one of them has been shipped to France. The Government had before it, the report says, five types of machines, two having been dropped, after great delay in determining what character of machine was wanted. Of the three types, the most powerful, the Handley Page, a heavy bombing machine, was adopted about Jan. 1 last, after what the committee calls "remarkable procrastination and indecision." Witnesses, the report says, testified that the first set of parts of this machine are not expected to be ready before June.

Another combat machine, the De Havilland, carrying two men, is being turned out slowly. Fifteen of these have been completed. The Bristol machine—the third type—was decided upon last November, the report says, and the manufacturers completed the first one about March 30 last.

Equal delay, the report sets forth, occurred in constructing the Liberty motor. Of 22,500 ordered, 384 have been completed and 4 shipped overseas. The failure to rush the manufacture of the Liberty motor is called "gravely disappointing."

Here is the report in full:

"The Committee on Military Affairs, being engaged under authority of the Senate in an investigation of the War Department, and having taken much testimony, herewith submits the following report in the matter of aircraft production, together with certain recommendations:

TRAINING SCHOOLS.

"The Signal Corps has established and is now conducting twenty aviation training schools in the United States. Four additional schools are in process of

Lenine Asks Germany's Leave to Keep Army to Face Japan

LONDON, April 10.—The Bolshevist Government has asked Germany for permission to postpone the demobilization of the Russian Army in consequence of the Japanese landing at Vladivostok, according to reports in circulation in Petrograd and forwarded by Reuter's correspondent.

In a speech at Moscow on Monday, Premier Lenine said that possibly Russia would have to declare war on Japan, and also hinted at grave complications with Great Britain and France, because of their alleged help to the Japanese.

COMMONS PUSHES IRISH DRAFT ACT

Cabinet's Man Power Bill Passes Second Reading by a Vote of 323 to 100.

ASQUITH ATTACKS MEASURE

Dillon Suggests County Option —Nationalists Refuse to Let Geddes Speak.

LONDON, April 10.—The House of Commons tonight passed the second reading of the Government's man-power bill, which extends conscription to Ireland. The vote was 323 to 100.

In moving the second reading of the bill, Sir George Cave, Unionist Member for Surrey, said that it was the duty of the country to do everything it could do, and then only should it be entitled to use to the fullest extent the help given by its allies. Germany had made Europe an armed camp, he added, and the necessity of taking every man who could be spared was overwhelming.

Sir George said that he had been advised that the application of the man-power bill to Ireland would yield a large number of men, but if only five divisions could be got from Ireland it would be worth while. He did not believe that the army would be needed to force the operation of the measure. Sir George added that even if there were an Irish Parliament today the question of conscription in Ireland still would rest with the Imperial Parliament.

Many Irish Interruptions.

Being continually interrupted by Nationalist members, Sir George said he doubted whether the voice of Ireland had yet been heard in the matter. The speaker of the House appealed to the Irish members to give him a fair hearing.

Sir Charles Hobhouse, former Postmaster General, and Sir Donald MacLean criticised the bill, expressing the opinion that the number of men over 40 who were fit for service did not justify raising the age limit.

John Dillon, the Nationalist leader, said that, apart altogether from Ireland, no case had been made out for the bill itself. As to the Irish proposals, he asserted, they would destroy the hope of an Irish settlement during the war. He challenged the Government to take a plebiscite in Ireland, and said that Antrim would vote with Clare against conscription. This farmers of Ulster, he said, were against conscription.

Sir Edward Carson, interrupting, said: "No more than the farmers of England."

Dillon Predicts "New War Freat."

The estimate of 400,000 men from Ireland, continued Mr. Dillon, was nonsense. Two years ago the figures were put at 120,000, and since that time 20,000 had volunteered. He believed that no more than 80,000 could be obtained without doing infinitely more injury by destroying the food supply.

The real purpose of the bill, Mr. Dillon said, was to divert public attention and inquiry from the true causes of the failure on the western front. The attempt to extend the bill to Ireland, he predicted, would open up another war front in Ireland, all the more formidable because it would be a moral front, in which Britain would be wrong; it would be a front which, whatever form the conflict took, would spread to America and Australia and to all the corners of the earth where the Irish race was scattered. The prospect before the Government, Mr. Dillon asserted, was that for the remainder of the war it must hold Ireland under strict military law, with ever-increasing bitterness.

In committee the Nationalists, Mr. Dillon said, would propose to have county option, and if the Government would concede that, perhaps they would cry quits and not oppose the bill further. He had no hope that a home rule bill acceptable to Ireland could be passed.

Ex-Premier Asquith said that he much doubted whether the raising of the mili-

157 MILLION TOTAL OF LIBERTY LOAN IN THIS DISTRICT

FORMER FIGURES BEATEN

CITY'S SHARE $135,950,400

Farmers Loan and Trust Company Takes $7,223,000 and du Pont Corporation $4,000,000.

Subscriptions to the third Liberty Loan officially listed by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, total $157,097,350, according to an announcement made last night by the Publicity Department of the Liberty Loan Committee, following the receipt of advices from Washington that the Treasury Department had decided to lift the ban against the publication of subscription figures.

The total of $157,097,350 compares with $65,874,000 for a similar period in the campaign for the second Liberty Loan last October. Although it was not definitely so stated, it is understood that the total given out last night represents the aggregate of subscriptions concerning which the Bond Division of the Reserve Bank has been officially informed in accordance with the post-card system of daily reports, an arrangement under which the bank figures must necessarily be one day late. The reports received by the bank yesterday recorded subscriptions in the hands of the 1,275 reporting banks and trust companies of the district on Tuesday night, excepting perhaps some reports of local institutions which might have been forwarded by messenger.

Of the $157,097,350 in subscriptions listed by the Reserve Bank, the five boroughs of New York City are credited with $135,950,400, while the remainder of the district, which includes all of New York State, twelve northern counties of New Jersey and Fairfield County, Conn., have supplied $21,146,950.

City Takes 20 Per Cent. of Allotment.

Comparison with the quotas fixed for various portions of the district shows that New York City has thus far subscribed to about 20 per cent. of its allotment of $667,125,300, based on a total of $900,000,000 for the whole district, while the other communities have to date furnished approximately 9 per cent. of their $222,874,700 allotment.

The Borough of Brooklyn, which has a quota of $93,616,000, has already sent in subscriptions for more than 25 per cent. of that amount.

Following are the detailed figures of subscriptions credited to New York City and to the eight sub-districts which together form the Second or New York Federal Reserve District:

New York City—
Manhattan	$125,253,500
Brooklyn	10,257,050
Queens	319,050
Bronx	78,000
Richmond	42,200
		$135,950,400
Sub-district—
No. 1, (Buffalo)	$309,200
No. 2, (Rochester)	1,268,750
No. 3, (Syracuse and Utica)	773,000
No. 4, (Binghamton)	618,300
No. 5, (Albany)	4,182,350
No. 6, (Long Island and Richmond)	2,116,200

Total for district		$157,097,350

Minimum Average Exceeded.

Despite the fact that the Treasury Department has fixed $900,000,000 as the quota for the New York District, the Liberty Loan Committee is striving to obtain subscriptions totaling $1,500,000,000, or one-half of the nation's $3,000,000,000 loan. Counting last Saturday, the four weeks' campaign runs for twenty-five business days, and consequently the daily average of subscriptions must be $60,000,000 on the basis of $1,500,000,000, and $36,000,000 if figured on $900,000,000. The former figure has not been attained, although the latter has been exceeded.

Besides the usual meetings at City Hall, Madison Square Park, the Public Library, &c., today's chief event in the Liberty Loan campaign will be a mass meeting at Carnegie Hall, where the Archbishop of York, who has made an extended tour of the United States, will deliver his farewell address. Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank, will preside, and the other

British Sinkings Fall to Six; Week's Loss Next to Lowest

LONDON, April 10.—The sinkings of British merchantmen by mines or submarines reported in the last week reached the next to lowest level of any week since Germany began her intensive submarine campaign early in 1917. Four vessels of more than 1,600 tons, two of less than 1,600 tons, and two fishing boats were sunk.

The Admiralty statement adds:

"Vessels unsuccessfully attacked, eleven, including two previously. Arrivals, 2,534; sailings, 2,495.

"Both fishermen reported today were sunk during the week ended March 30."

According to a dispatch from Paris, only two French merchantmen, both over 1,600 tons, were sunk by mines or submarines during the week ended April 6.

A Rome dispatch says that one Italian steamer of more than 1,500 tons was sunk by an enemy submarine in the last week. Three small sailing vessels were also sunk.

The lowest number of British ships reported sunk in one week by submarine or mine since Feb. 1, 1917, was five, in the week of Jan. 12. Last week's total of six was equaled in the week of Nov. 11.

From a Staff Correspondent.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 10.—To the newcomer from Paris to the French Army the first impression is the extraordinary absence of what is called public opinion about the war. There are no fluctuations of attitude according as the news is good or bad, no doubt or hesitation. The army has its work to do and does it unquestioningly.

In the best sense of the word the soldiers of France are a professional army. The first thing asked of a new arrival is, "Well, how is Paris taking it?" One never thinks of the reply, "How is the army taking it?" because from the outset it is evident that the army is taking it (no matter what that implies) as part of the day's work. Forain hit the right nail when he drew his famous cartoon of a poilu saying, "We will hold, but what about the civilians?"

Throughout this battle the French Army has been perfectly calm. Men have confidence in their chiefs and in themselves. They have had difficult moments, when whole divisions have had to fight to the death, but those who are left of them are as confident as ever—supremely confident. They know that they are better than the Germans.

Before this drive there had been three great German offensives—from Charleroi to the Marne, on the Yser, and at Verdun.

In the first this French were outnumbered and outgunned, and in the second also. At Verdun the enemy, by a momentary concentration, broke down smaller forces. In all three the French bore the brunt of battle, yet they were victorious. Now they have the support of the British and the gigantic promise of America behind them, and in addition an equality of guns, materials and transport. Their one weakness, as compared with the Germans, the lack of a united command, has been repaired. They know that the end is now sure. However great Germany's effort is, it is only the "death flurry" of the harpooned leviathan.

The TIMES correspondent talked yesterday with the staff officers of a division which was thrown into the line at a moment's notice north of Nesle at the time of the heaviest German attack.

Through lack of the co-ordination, now insured by Foch's appointment they were left without supports on the right and left. For six long days and nights without sleep and worn out by the terrible fighting they stood off the attack of ten German divisions which were constantly replaced by new units, brought up to the front line by automobiles.

Thanks to the skilful use of cavalry and armored automobiles, since thirty-six of the latter held the roads until the enemy was near enough to attack with grenades without losing a single

ARMENTIERES IN DANGER

Gen. Maurice Says Its Loss, However, Would Not Be "a Vital Matter."

BERLIN, April 10, (via London.)—Six thousand prisoners and 100 guns were captured by the Germans between Armentières and La Bassée Canal, General Headquarters announced this afternoon.

The Germans have crossed the Lys River at several points between Armentières and Estaires, according to the evening statement from General Headquarters.

The statment says:

North of Armentières we penetrated the English lines on both sides of Waasten-Waronton.

Following is the text of the earlier statement:

Between Armentières and La Bassée Canal, after strong preparation by our artillery and mine throwers, we attacked the English and Portuguese positions. We took the first enemy lines and captured about 6,000 prisoners and 100 guns.

On the battlefield on both sides of the Somme violent artillery duels and successful infantry engagements developed.

On the southern bank of the Oise we also threw back the enemy across the Oise-Aisne Canal between Folembray and Brancourt.

ARMENTIERES SALIENT IS GREATLY MENACED

But Germans Have Gained No High Ground in Northern Attacks, Says Maurice.

LONDON, April 10.—"In the morning's attack the enemy entered the British first line trenches between the Rivers Lys and Doube," says Major Gen. F. B. Maurice, Chief Director of Military Operations, at the War Office today. "The attack extended from Armentières to Messines.

"The German gains today, in conjunction with the results of his attack yesterday, have placed Armentières in an awkward salient. Armentières is now little more than a heap of ruins, and its loss would not be a vital matter. It is not lost yet, and we hope it will not be, but it may be.

"On the Messines front the enemy's attack today was repulsed. The enemy has obtained no footing on the high ground anywhere.

"In yesterday's fighting the enemy transferred the scene of his operations to the front between Armentières and Bethune. The ground of the main attack was held in the centre by a Portuguese division, with a British division on each flank. The main blow fell on the Portuguese.

"The terrain is an absolutely flat alluvial plain, with no feature of any technical advantage, but an awkward salient has been made into our line whence the enemy may attack either Bethune in the south or Armentières in the north.

"Great importance attaches to the fighting around Givenchy, because this is one of the few rises and is an important gateway on the road to Bethune. Its recovery by the British is therefore highly important."

The Germans captured a considerable part of Ploegsteert Wood, [two miles and a half north of Armentières,] General Maurice said.

"In the fighting yesterday the enemy advanced in the centre to a depth of 3,500 yards," said General Maurice. "It is quite certain we lost some guns. In an advance to such a depth considerable Portuguese artillery must have been lost, and probably a number of prisoners."

In the retirement of the French to the line of the Allette River two French battalions were cut off, and the Germans took about 2,000 prisoners, said General Maurice. The withdrawal of the French was made on account of an awkward corner in the line.

"The latest fighting," the General went on, "shows that the enemy in merely carrying out another chapter in his effort to exhaust the British Army. His first scheme was to cut off the British from the French. That failed. Now he is attacking wherever he sees a favorable chance, with the idea of bleeding us white if he can."

Americans Are Greeted With Intense Enthusiasm As They Reach British Lines After 4-Day March

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 10, (Associated Press.)—The first of the American fighting troops have arrived on the British front, and have been greeted with intense enthusiasm.

The overseas pioneers were a battalion of infantry, which came swinging along the road into a certain sector after an all-night march that began on the anniversary of America's declaration of war.

The dusty uniforms and unshaven faces of the Americans showed that they had been long on the road.

American Aviator Brought Down

AMSTERDAM, April 10.—The Germans have made their first capture of an American aviator, a semi-official Berlin dispatch reports. He is said to have been shot down on the western front on Sunday. The American aviator is described as an engineer by profession, who since September has served with the French forces.

Full Weight of Kaiser's Armies Hurled Against British Front

How the Lancashires Held the Flank and Retook Givenchy—"They Said 'Kamerad!' Just Like the Picture Papers, and I Took Ten, Though I'm Only 19"—Tragedy of the Portuguese.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, April 10.—In my message yesterday I told as much as was known of the attack against the British and Portuguese troops between Armentières and Givenchy, the strength and purpose of it being then uncertain. It is now clear that this battle, which is still in progress today, is a new and formidable offensive, with large objectives, and not merely a demonstration to withdraw the British troops from the area of the Somme.

It also is made certain by this new thrust that the German high command have decided to throw the full weight of their armies against the British in an endeavor to destroy their forces in Northern France instead of dividing their efforts by striking also at the French. I believe their plan is to edge off as much as possible from the French armies, holding them in check by defensive fighting and counterattacks in order to concentrate their masses of men and guns opposite the British lines and hurl them in a series of blows now on the right and now on the left, following up each success as far as its possibilities admit. It is a menace which calls for a supreme effort of the armies of Great Britain and her allies.

Yesterday the enemy struck north on the British left, beginning, as I have said, in the flat grounds opposite Neuve Chapelle as the centre of the thrust with Fleurbaix to the north and Givenchy to the south, and extending this morning further north still above Armentières, and including the ridge of Messines. As yesterday, so today. They succeeded in pressing back parts of the first defensive systems, and their threat this morning was most vehement in the neighborhood of Messines, although British counterattacks have since driven the enemy back part of the way.

Night of Tremendous Gun Fire.

An enormous gun fire was directed against the British positions along all this line last night again after yesterday morning's bombardment, and continued without pause through a very unquiet night, when all through the hours this tumult of great guns beat upon one's ears with continued drumfire, and all the sky was full of flame and light.

This morning again when I went up into French Flanders and through the villages which the enemy had been shelling regardless of the women and children there, this frightful, unceasing thunder was as loud as ever and told one without further news that the battle was still going on and that the Germans were extending its zone.

The great achievement of the day on the part of the British troops engaged was the magnificent stand of the 55th Division, all Lancashire troops, who held the flank firm against fierce repeated attacks by troops four times stronger than themselves in numbers, and who when the men on their left were pressed back formed a flank on their left and so withstood the enemy's hammer blows that at the end of the day and this morning the line was still unbroken there. Givenchy was still British and the enemy's waves of men lay shattered in front of them and 750 prisoners had been taken.

Portuguese Target of Great Gunfire.

It was a tragedy for the Portuguese that the heaviest bombardment in the storm of gunfire, as terrible in its fury as anything of the kind since March 21, was directed against the centre, which they held. It was annihilating to their outposts and smashed their front line defenses, which were stoutly held. It beat backwards and forwards in waves of high explosives from the trench line opposite Neuve Chapelle to the second line, opposite Fauquissart and Richebourg St. Vaast. Large numbers of heavy guns also searched behind these defense systems for crossroads, ammunition dumps, railways, villages, and headquarters, or units, while the Portuguese batteries were assailed with gas shells and flying steel.

The Portuguese front line was overwhelmed by the intensity of the bombardment, and, although some of their outposts held on, fighting gallantly to the last man, their line had to fall back to the second system. This was attacked by enemy assault troops and between six and seven in the morning they had reached Fauquissart. The barrage lifted at seven o'clock for a general attack on the second line. Here the strongest body of Portuguese troops fought stubbornly, but by eleven o'clock the Germans forced their way through to Laventie and the position round Fleurbaix was threatened.

Destroy Abandoned Guns.

They were then holding the line through Richebourg St. Vaast and Laventie, but it was difficult to make a stand here, as the Portuguese troops had by that time suffered heavily. The Portuguese field artillery served their guns as long as possible and destroyed the breech blocks whenever it became inevitable that they would have to leave a gun behind. The Portuguese gunnere were attached to the British heavy batteries and behaved with special courage, firing and laying and carrying up ammunition all through the battle under dangerous shelling, and the British artillery officers report that nothing could have been better than the way they stuck to it. A battalion of their infantry also held on gallantly to Lacourte until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when they were charged by the enemy.

The enemy advance in the centre put a severe strain upon the 55th Division, who were already sustaining terrific attacks on the right by Givenchy. Many of these Lancashire men had been in billets sleeping peacefully when the news of the battle came the night before last, and they had to turn out at once and go straight to the trenches under the abominable fire.

All of them were like the lad I met this morning in charge of German prisoners sitting on top of a ladder, with his slouch hat on the back of his head, while he told me his astounding adventures in the dialect of Warrington, and for all the world like the music hall comedian, in spite of the horrors which he had seen and now described. They must have been remarkable fellows. Oppressed as I was with the sense of tragedy, this boy's monologue, with the snarl of shrapnel as a musical accompaniment, made me laugh as he sat up there with his funny face, saying the droll-est things.

They also took over 700 prisoners, whom I saw today, and a very hefty crowd of gray wolves they were. In spite of the fact that some of them

Hold Village on the Luce and Repulse the Germans at Other Points.

LONDON, April 10.—In heavy fighting lasting all day the British troops have been forced back by a new German attack north of Armentières to a line running through Wytschaete [five miles south of Ypres] along the Messines Ridge to Ploegsteert [about three miles north of Armentières.]

South of Armentières the Germans, after a protracted struggle in continuation of yesterday's battle, crossed the Lys River and established themselves on the left bank at a number of points east of Estaires [about seven miles southwest of Armentières] and near Bac St. Maur [about four miles southwest of Armentières.]

From Estaires southward to Givenchy, the southern limit of this latest German offensive, the British today maintained their lines. Givenchy, which was taken by the Germans yesterday, was recaptured by the British troops, with 750 German prisoners.

The night bulletin reads:

Following upon the bombardment already reported, the enemy this morning launched a fresh attack in strength against our positions between the Lys River and Armentières and the Ypres-Comines Canal. Heavy fighting has been taking place in this sector throughout the day, as well as on the whole front of yesterday's attack, north of La Bassée Canal.

North of Armentières the weight of the enemy's assaults pressed our troops back to the line Wytschaete-Messines Ridge and Ploegsteert.

Bodies of German infantry who had forced their way into Messines were driven out this morning by a counterattack.

South of Armentières the enemy succeeded after a prolonged struggle in establishing himself on the left bank of the Lys River at certain points east of Estaires and in the neighborhood of Bac St. Maur.

This morning the enemy also crossed the Lawe at Lestremh, but was counterattacked by our troops and driven out of the village and back across the river.

Between Estaires and Givenchy our positions have been maintained.

On other parts of the British front the day again passed comparatively quietly.

The day announcement follows:

On the front north of La Bassée Canal fierce fighting continued during the night. Our troops are holding the line of the Rivers Lawe and Lys and are heavily engaged with the enemy at the river crossings at Estaires and Bac St. Maur.

On the southern flank of attack Givenchy, into which the enemy at one time forced his way, was recaptured later in the day by a successful counterattack by the Fifty-fifth Division, which took 750 prisoners in this area.

Early this morning the enemy opened a heavy bombardment of our positions east and north of Armentières, as far as the Ypres-Comines Canal. Fighting is reported to have commenced on the southern portion of this front.

Airmen Hampered by Mist.

An official statement on aerial operations tonight says:

During the morning the whole front was covered with a mist, which prevented any of our airplanes leaving the ground. Later in the day, when there was a slight improvement in the weather, our machines reconnoitred the new battlefront between La Bassée and Armentières and bombed and engaged with machine gunfire the enemy's attacking troops.

Hostile low-flying machines also were active in this sector. Four of these machines were brought down by our airplanes, and one was shot down by our infantry. Two of our airplanes are missing.

Foe Used Huge Masses of Men.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 10, (Associated Press.)—The Messines Ridge and the Ploegsteert Wood, which last June were cleared of Germans by a spectacular coup, were filled again today with swirling masses of battling troops as the result of a drive launched by the enemy between Armentières and Messines.

For hours the German hordes flung themselves viciously against the defending lines, and by sheer weight of numbers forced their way forward into the British positions. Messines, Ploegsteert, and Nieppe all came within the zone of the bitter fighting during the forenoon. If the attack should succeed, Armentières would lie in a deep salient with the Germans well in on either side of it.

One of the main features of the German plans for the offensive as a whole now becomes obvious. The Kaiser is bent on annihilating the British Army, as far as is possible.

Givenchy was the pivot of the battle and the most important position along the line, for the high ground here dominates the whole Lys valley. The enemy tried to work around the place, and twice succeeded in getting into the town, but each time he was stormed out by the grimly fighting division which is holding this section of the front.

The battle in Givenchy was sanguinary. For hours the contending forces fought at close quarters with rifles and hand grenades. The nature of the British defense may be seen from the fact that one British division was being attacked by four German divisions and an extra brigade.

The German artillery fire of yesterday and today has been terrific. Great concentrations of guns have been hurling steady streams of high explosives far back of the lines, and virtually every village within reach of the long-range guns has come under the punishment.

FRENCH REPULSE FOE IN HANGARD REGION

The Village, After Repeatedly Changing Hands, Remains in Their Possession.

PARIS, April 10.—German troops last night delivered a heavy attack on the French lines near Hangard-en-Santerre, (ten miles southeast of Amiens,) which was met by a French counterattack, preventing the Germans from gaining any advantage, the War Office announced this afternoon. The village changed hands repeatedly, but early this morning the French were in complete possession of the place and the cemetery near by.

West of Castel and west of Noyon German efforts to advance failed.

The fighting near Castel (two miles southwest of Hangard) grew out of a German attempt to drive the French out of the woods there. The enemy sustained heavy losses in his repulse.

Today there was artillery fighting of considerable violence north of Montdidier and on the Oise Canal front.

The day statement reads:

The night was marked by a series of local actions begun by the Germans at several points on the front.

In the region of Hangard-en-Santerre the Germans yesterday evening delivered an attack which was preceded by strong artillery preparation.

A violent fight took place for possession of the village, which several times changed hands. About 3 o'clock in the morning a counterattack launched by French troops brought the village and cemetery into our possession.

At the same time a German attack, which was intended to drive the French out of the wood to the west of Castel, suffered a severe check.

West of Noyon the Germans were no more fortunate.

In the region of Suzoy French troops smashed the German efforts, which increased the number of his losses without giving him any gain.

Northeast of Mont Renaud French reconnoitring parties took some prisoners and captured two machine guns.

On the left bank of the River Oise and in the region of the canal there was intermittent artillery fighting.

Northwest of Rheims the French succeeded in penetrating the enemy lines and in bringing back some prisoners.

There was great activity of both artilleries on the right bank of the Meuse, in the forest of Apremont, and in the Woevre, in the region of Flirey.

The War Office announcement tonight says:

On the front north of Montdidier and in the region of the Oise Canal artillery fighting was maintained with considerable violence. There was no infantry action.

We took about thirty prisoners in the course of engagements last night. The day was relatively calm on the rest of the front.

It is confirmed that five additional airplanes have been brought down.

OUR ENGINEERS AIDED CAREY.

Railway Men Played an Important Part in Saving Amiens.

LONDON, April 10.—But for the gallant defense put up by General Carey's improvised army, in which American railway engineers played a prominent part, says the correspondent on the western front of The Daily Mail, the enemy might have pushed through to Amiens in the first few days of his great attack. The improvised force held an important stretch of the front against furious German onslaughts.

"There was no doubt in anybody's mind that they would hold on grimly as long as breath remained in their bodies," says the correspondent. How the men were assembled before daylight, made up into companies and battalions by noon, and ready to march shortly afterward is told by the correspondent, who adds:

"It was not until it had been in the field for some time that the force was able to get artillery. But as soon as they had it they certainly used it to good advantage. • • • In the beginning, however, it was the men who held the enemy back with their bodies."

The sector involved began at the River Somme, near Sailly-Laurette, and extended southwest to about the Luce River.

CANADIANS WAIT ON VIMY.

Confident That Germans Cannot Turn the Ridge from the North.

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, April 10. (Canadian Press, Limited.)—Foiled in their attempt to outflank Vimy Ridge on the south, the Germans are now attempting the same manoeuvre from the north by Bethune. The anniversary of the date that saw Canada victorious in winning back so much of the coal lands of France finds those lands menaced again. Canada, with its hard-won Vimy Ridge behind it, waits for Germany to dare a frontal attack.

All yesterday afternoon and evening and this morning the Canadian guns answered those of the enemy. Throughout the area from the Scarpe to Souchez little villages have known again the blood price of battle. Women and children are evacuating their homes. Death has visited many. War broods over the ridge.

From Lens to Arras ruin is being added to ruin. Smoky by day, rimmed in fire by night, the old battlegrounds are alive to battle again. Constant "crumping" of shells in Arras, Lievin, Acquerolvres and other big and little centres is answered by the roar of guns sweeping the enemy front, assembly and rear areas.

The Canadians wait in their trenches without fear for the future. Everywhere there is confidence that if the enemy attacks the heights his price for the assault will be terrible.

The temper of the Canadian forces is magnificent. It found repeated expression yesterday. At one point two Canadian parties raided enemy lines. The first, advancing after an artillery barrage, found the enemy outpost line deserted. It pushed on to the front line with no better success, only two of the enemy being found. They resisted and were killed.

The other party, in a stealthy raid, found the enemy in some strength and killed five and captured one. Later in the afternoon the Canadians took three more prisoners.

Early this morning, under cover of an artillery barrage, two more raids were carried out against the enemy. One raiding party had no luck, but the other, twenty-five strong, took no fewer than ten prisoners.

PARIS EXPECTED NEW THRUST.

Probably Part of Original Plan of Battle, Says Hutin.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 10.—The probability of the German attack on the British front in the La Bassee-Armentieres region yesterday, had been foreshadowed by the military critics here for some days. It was regarded as unlikely that the army of the Crown Prince of Baveria, which is well furnished with reserves and a system of communications based on Lille, would remain inactive.

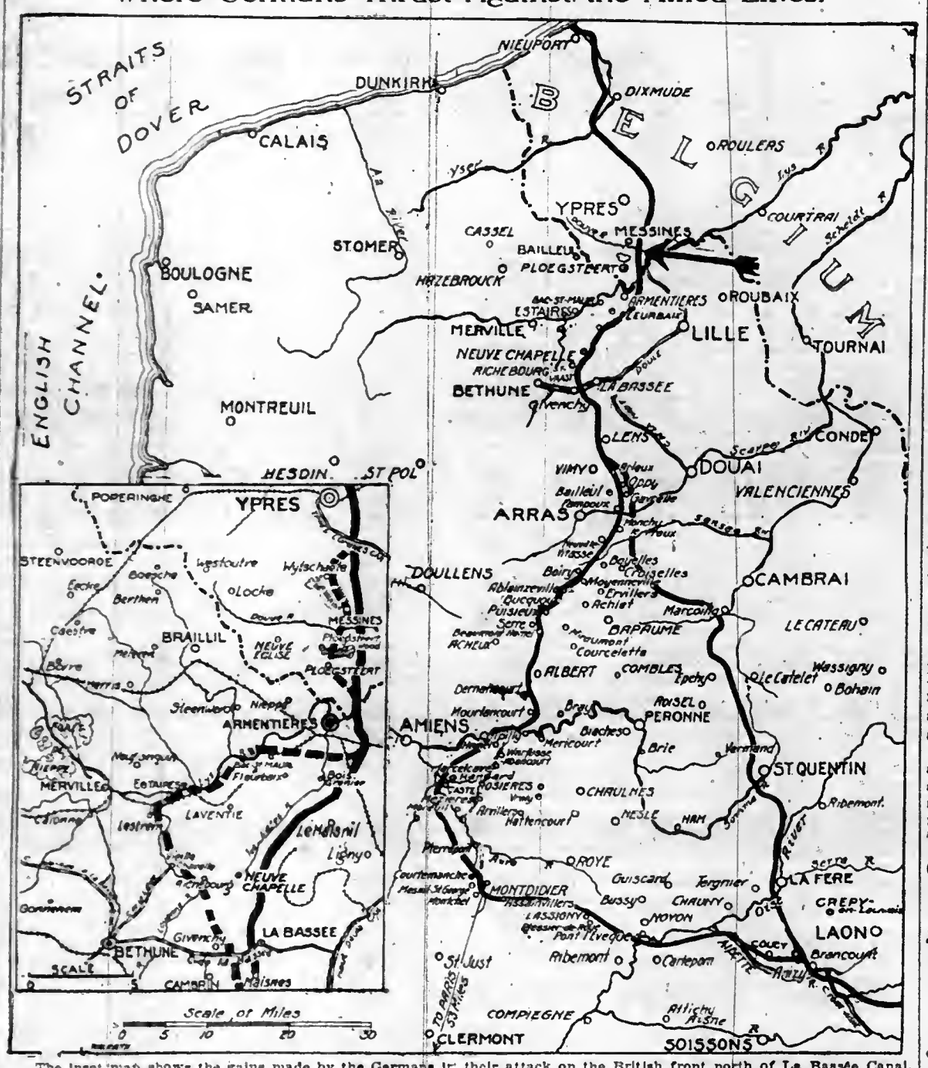
Yesterday's German blow must not be regarded as a mere diversion attack, but was fully consistent with the beginning of the German attack has been on more dangerous ground. Switching their attack from the south of Armentieres to the north of the town, the Germans delivered a strong attack against the British line between Armentieres and Hollebeke, behind which is the famous Messines-Wytschaete ridge. No serious damage was done at latest reports. The British were driven in, back upon this ridge which they held at last accounts of the fighting. But if the Germans can push them back from the ridge the entire position in Flanders is threatened.

The advantage in this fighting, however, lies with the British at present. The ground in Flanders is, it will be remembered, very low and without any naturally prominent features other than the Wytschaete ridge and its extension, the Passchendaele ridge. The possession of these points is an advantage not readily exaggerated. For observation, for artillery work, the ridge is of vital importance, and was the one feature which caused the British such great trouble in both the first and the second battles of Ypres.

As long, however, as the British hold the Messines ridge, the extent of the German advance along the Lys to the west is limited. In other words this position bears the same relation to the positions west of Armentières that the ridge at Vimy bears to the line north of the Somme. An advance with this bastion on the flank, from which the British could later strike out against the base of the salient, is not possible as a military conception.

There is no indication that this is an attempt to get to the sea at another point. There is every indication, in fact, that it is not. It is, however, a gigantic attempt to clear the ground from Ypres to Montdidier of all positions which the British could use as striking points in a counter movement. To win, Germany must concentrate on one objective. She cannot scatter her efforts over this long front. Every move must be in furtherance of a single plan, otherwise the German strength will be frittered away with nothing definite accomplished in the end.

Where Germans Thrust Against the Allied Lines.



The inset map shows the gains made by the Germans in their attack on the British front north of La Bassée Canal. The solid black line represents the front as it existed before the latest offensive started, the broken line its location according to yesterday's official reports.

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

Reports of the fighting in the north between La Bassée and Armentières have given a much clearer idea of the operations in this sector, and the accomplishments by both the Germans and the Allies in the first stage of the fighting. The German effort which was directed against this line had for its purpose exactly the same as that which proved successful in the opening of the battle—to break through the British defenses, indeed through the entire defensive zone, and sweep on to the heights beyond. There can be no question that if this could be done the damage would be vast. The southern line north of the Somme would be vitally affected. The hinge at Arras would be destroyed through the forced evacuation of the Vimy Ridge positions. This, as has been previously noted, is the primary object of the German plan.

The Germans find themselves cramped in the relatively narrow salient along the Avre. There is not room to spread out. Their numbers cannot be used advantageously. To attempt to increase the men per mile of line causes slaughter of their troops, and, moreover, there is a natural limit to the number of men who can be so employed. As the number of men increases the burden of the transport also increases, causing a complete block of all available routes to the front.

In addition to this, the Allies are always prepared for the attack when it comes because the Germans practically have no choice. They must attack in a very narrow area, with no possibility of concealment of their real object. For every reason it became necessary to widen the front of activity. To have an active front of a hundred miles, or even of half that distance, gives them some choice and some ability to divert attention from the real front to be attacked, which need be but a few miles long in order to force a local withdrawal if the wedge is sufficiently deep. If then the active front can be widened to include all of the line from Montdidier to Armentières, or even to Arras, Germany can attack where she pleases, create local salients, and, if the supply of men holds out, gradually encircle each place by attacks both north and south of it.

There is an additional value to be gained in this attack in the north other than Arras directly. That is the town of Bethune, some five miles west of the original line where it crosses the canal. The importance of Bethune lies in its railroad connections. It has direct rail communication with Calais by a double-track system, while from it branches radiate both along the canal feeding that section of the front and southeast to Lens. It is an important British base, supplying much of the line from Lens to Fleurbaix.

The German attack has brought the line within four miles of this base at its nearest point, which is on the Laire Canal, near the town Vieille Chappelle. The advance, however, can be accomplished only with great loss, as the country is absolutely flat, making it difficult to effect concentrations unless they are plainly visible. It is also void of defensive features, although there are several heights about Bethune which give good observation.

The Germans advanced their lines in the fighting of the first day as far as the Laire River from Vieille Chappelle northward to its junction with the Lys at Estaires and in the northern zone of attack, along the Lys as far as Bac St. Maur. This throws the battle line well to the west of Armentières and makes the village the point of a rather sharp salient. This town, however, has no value from a military standpoint. Far down in the Lys Valley, directly on the river, it has been very close to the battle lines since 1914. Any advantage which it might have possessed has been long since destroyed by artillery fire. It lies moreover on the south bank of the Lys and for the British to retire behind the river, using it as a defensive screen would indeed better their defensive power to this extent.

Yesterday the fighting spread to the north, where the situation is much more serious. In fact, no fighting since the were boys in glasses, who were under average size, the rest of them were tall, strapping fellows, and did not look cowed by their capture. Some of them had lost their way in the fog, which otherwise was to their advantage, because in some places they penetrated between Portuguese posts before they were seen. But one lot strayed hopelessly, and came into one of our communication saps.

Philip Gibbs's Story of the Great Battle

"We did shout," said the Lancashire lad with the funny face. "Then these Johnnies put up their hands and said 'Kammerad,' just as you read in the picture papers, and I took ten of them, though I'm only 19."

Givenchy Twice Retaken.

But it wasn't comedy at all for those Lancashire men. It was grim fighting in a bad little corner of hell, for that was Givenchy yesterday; and today the enemy attacked it in crowds and captured it in the morning, in spite of a deadly rifle and machine-gun fire, from these men of the 55th Division. He was hurled out again by parties of bombers and riflemen, but returned to the attack and regained half the village. Then these Lancashire lads counterattacked once more and drove the enemy clean out and further back than where he started from.

In the hard fighting the Lancashires and Yorkshires took most of their men and these Germans were crestfallen, for before the battle a document was read out to them saying the division in front of them was not to be feared because it was very weak and very tired, and the German storm troops would be attacking in the proportion of three regiments to six British companies and would have no trouble.

On the left, beyond the flank of the 55th Division the situation was more serious, and parties of the enemy crossed the river Lys and got into the neighborhood of Croix du Bac and to the outskirts of Estaires. They apparently were not in big numbers there and this morning were driven back over the Lys.

In the centre when the Portuguese were forced to fall back the weight of the German attack then fell on the British troops, who fought magnificent defensive actions. Counterattacks were also made with the greatest gallantry near another place called Hult Maisona. Some of the men held out in an outpost for many hours and kept the enemy back by their fire.

From captured maps and other information it is proved that the enemy had the most ambitious objects yesterday which should have brought him to the outskirts of Bethune on the canal bank, but owing to the brave fighting of the British he was unable to achieve this purpose.

Two German aviators were brought down in the British lines today.

Yesterday's battle was only the beginning of a great attempt in the north on a twenty-five-mile front. This is borne out by an extension of the attack today above Armentières and up by Messines Ridge. Of that most northerly attack I know as yet little, because I was in the region further south this morning

GERMANS WASTING MEN ON OISE FRONT

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Wednesday, April 10.—There is something curious, almost to the point of the comic, in the German advance on the east of the Oise up to the region of the Allette and the Oise-Aisne Canal.

I have explained that this protruding corner of the French front was not tenable because there was no room for the deployment of any considerable body of troops, and because it lay between the marshes and forest block of St. Gobain, held by the enemy. It was a salient of very little value, the abandonment of which was early decided upon. Advance guards were, however, maintained from Barisis to the river, with instructions to fall back slowly to the new line, which would be firmly held, making the enemy pay as heavily as possible for every mile of ground. This program has been carried out exactly.

The odd thing is that the German attack of April 6 was not made by a skirmishing force, but that five divisions, or about 60,000 combatants, were poured into a space which broadens from three to only about six miles at the base of the triangle.

I can see only one explanation of this needless demonstration. The German people are already disillusioned. They ask what has been gained for so much slaughter. Von Hutier was at a standstill on the Avre. Here, at least, was a chance for cheap newspaper display. The occupation of the Sinceny-Barisis sector was therefore represented as a victorious battle. The only other possible explanation is that the enemy completely miscalculated his task; but to put more men into such a job than are required is simply to increase casualties.

There is, by the way, reason to believe that the German people are disillusioned on the east as well as the west front. They are not getting what they expected to get out of Russia. The last crops have been to a large extent destroyed or dissipated, and in other ways Germany is paying for the anarchy its agents helped to create.

An enemy attack at Hill 344, near Verdun, on Sunday, was conducted by a body of about 1,000 men, acting in five deep columns on a front of nearly a mile. It got no further than the first French line, and suffered heavy losses, including three officers and thirty men captured.

Statements made by prisoners are very poor evidence, but some of them may be mentioned for what they may be worth. One is that the German command does not believe in using specialist grenadiers or grenado riflemen in a war of movement because of the difficulty of keeping them supplied with bombs.

Splendid Service of Allied Airmen.

The effectiveness of the work of the British machine gunners during the retreat has been frequently admitted. A captured aviator attributes the momentary suspension of Gotha raids on London to the disproportion between the results obtained and the losses suffered either during the raids or in landing on the return. Another traces it to the requirements of the offensive; but, except at the beginning, when they kept up with the advance and reported pretty well on the whereabouts of the retreating troops, the German airmen have certainly not shone, whereas the feats of the allied aviators are so numerous, and in some cases so romantic, that it is difficult to do justice to them.

I was talking yesterday to a boy of 22 who in a halting, ineffectual way narrated a series of thrilling adventures. He had followed most of the retreat, descending every now and then to fifty or sixty feet to empty a belt of cartridges on a German column, and was at last brought down between the German and French lines on the Avre, with his machine riddled with bullets, and bad to run for it.

A better explanation than the German prisoner's of the absence of raiders from London of late is probably to be found in the extreme daring and success of the French and British bombardment squadrons. Many illustrations of the effectiveness of their raids on aviation grounds and other military works behind the German front could be given.

A peculiarly satisfactory instance is that of a French expedition which threw many tons of projectiles on the aviation ground of Frascaty, near Metz, and the poison gas factory at Ludwigshafen-Mannheim, the largest of its kind. A prisoner says that at Frascaty a great hangar was destroyed with seventeen airplanes. As for the Soda Anilin Fabrik at Mannheim, its manager has admitted in Switzerland that it was almost completely destroyed, and that the gas manufacture was altogether suspended.

I am informed that different kinds of evidence obtained on other parts of the French front show that the German command expected as the result of the offensive not only a retreat more considerable and more rapid than that which occurred in the region of the attack, but also a substantial withdrawal of the French lines lying to the east.

In the middle of March the German armies consisted of 4,000,000 men at the front, 1,300,000 on the lines of communication and in the interior, and others who can be added to the present effectives.

GERMANS TO ATTEMPT TO RETAKE JERUSALEM

AMSTERDAM, April 10.—Lieut.-Gen. Baron von Ardinne, a military writer, in an article in the Düsseldorf Nachrichten says:

"The tide is about to turn in Syria and Palestine. With the Turkish victory near Es-Salt the recapture of Jerusalem has become a practical possibility. "It is a satisfaction to us Germans that the struggle for the holy places is again proceeding with German arms, as in the time of the Kaiser at Barbarossa."

TEUTON SPIRIT OF CONQUEST RISING

Demand for Annexations Increased by Fear of a Post-War Trade Boycott.

WANT ORE MINES RETAINED

FEAR OF EXCLUSION HERE

Belief in Germany That America Will Shut Off Raw Material Supply.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 10.—There has been a marked change among the German political leaders who passed the famous Reichstag peace resolution, and apparently the Socialist Party as such has been unable to withstand the pressure of German labor opinion, which for some months has repeatedly given voice to its anger over the unconciliatory spirit of the Entente Powers.

According to information received by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, men who a few months ago would not listen to any annexation plans admit today that compensation in some form must be exacted by a "victorious Germany." They justify this change of opinion by reminding the people that Dr. Hertling and Count Czernin have both stated repeatedly that if Germany's peace offers were disregarded by the enemy the Central Powers would not feel pledged to peace without compensations and annexations.

Much of this change in the public mind has been brought about by the menace of a commercial and industrial war after the world war, and in this respect America's attitude probably has been most effective. The people take it for granted that the Central Powers will end the war victoriously in a military way.

"But what will be the situation between us and America afterward?" they ask. This question is asked not only in the industrial centres, but even oftener on the sea coast, and the general opinion is that America will use every effort to harm German interests, especially by barring Germany from all the raw products that Germany bought from America before the war. Mercantile and industrial circles are busy making plans to forestall the danger of a boycott after the war. The press publishes daily articles dealing with these problems. They say: "If America sells us no cotton, she shall get no potash, which is a fertilizer almost indispensable to impoverished agricultural land. Germany has a world monopoly of potash. If America gives us no petrol and no grain she shall get no dye materials, no drugs, no glassware, no optical instruments and nothing else that Germany has exported to the United States in the past.

In Dark As to Our Real Needs.

"It is as yet not known to Germany to what extent the United States will depend upon such imports after the war, but it is generally assumed that none of the other belligerents ner any neutral country will be able to take Germany's place as a producer of all the goods America used to buy from Germany.

The Deutsche Zeitung makes the point that if America expects her industries to continue prosperous after the war she must encourage immigration, but says that because of the European war there will be none, and on the contrary a large emigration from the United States to Europe, especially to Germany. Thus the Zeitung argues, the United States can not afford to conduct a commercial war with Germany.

Professor Troelsch says commerce and industry will find themselves seriously handicapped after the war. Although heretofore one of the most indefatigable champions of a peace of conciliation without annexations, he now publishes an article in the Muenchener Neueste Nachrichten, in which he says:

"As Briey and Belfort appear in quite a different light today, so does the question of Belgium. Here we must demand an eye for an eye, and one necessity must count against another. It would never do for us to play general benefactor."

What Professor Troelsch only alludes to is openly demanded by Germany's captains of industry, who insist that Briey and Longwy, besides a strip of French land wide enough to protect the iron mines from hostile guns in any future war, be incorporated into the German Empire.

Borsig, chief of the famous house of August Borsig, writes in the Vossische Zeitung that the menace of economical war after the war, as decided on by the Paris conference, has made it imperative for German industry to seek independent sources of raw products.

The Paris conference is merely used as an excuse to air the annexationist desires, which, however, are now no longer cloaked.

Wants Ore Deposits Secured.

"The deposits of iron ore in Longwy and Briey," Borsig says, "would make us quite independent of any importation of raw material. We could spare even the Swedish ore. Even if we were to treat France leniently and generously leave her in possession of those districts we have no security that she will serve us likewise.

"The iron industry is a wonderful, great tree in the midst of the field of the German industry. Its roots are the supply of raw products, its trunk the iron mills and steel works, upon which spread flourishing branches of many-sided industry. During the war it has been very difficult to keep this splendid tree alive, for half its roots extend to foreign countries. This tree has been growing close to the German border line. If we want to secure it we must take enough territory to make sure that in the future its roots need not wander beyond the German frontier."

"A country like Germany, surrounded on all sides by enemies," he says, "must look for independent supplies of raw products if it wants to keep alive. Our whole development of traffic railways, and navigation depends on the iron industry, also our means of conducting war, if necessary. Certain persons think we might rely on foreign countries for our supply of iron ore, as before 1914. But this war has taught us another lesson.

"Besides many other imports, we lost our supply from Spain, France, Russia, North Africa, Newfoundland, Greece, and British India completely, and also a good part of our imports from the Scandinavian countries, so that our iron production was reduced from 19,000,000 to 13,000,000 tons yearly. After the war we must reckon with sharp competition in neutral countries which have improved their iron industries during the war. Iron ore may cost four times more than before the war.

"In order to remove the mines of Lorraine and Luxemburg from the reach of French guns we must claim that narrow strip that formerly belonged to Germany for a period of 900 years—Nancy, Briey, Longwy. France is the richest iron country in Europe. She will have 7,000,000,000 tons of raw product left, against Germany's 6,000,000,000, even after we have acquired the district described above."

Director General Voegler of the Deutschluxemburgische Bergwerks and Huetten Gesellschaft, calls attention to the fact that even before the war most of the mines in the Briey and Longwy districts had passed into German possession, Frenchmen having been used as straw men in their acquisition.

Impressed by Wilson's "Force."

The fact that President Wilson, in his recent Baltimore speech, gave prominence to his use of the word "force" impressed the German press, for most of the papers use his word in their headlines.

The Cologne Volkszeitung calls Mr. Wilson the "force politician." It declares the speech worthless as a historical document, and says it was meant only to have a political and psychological effect on the Americans. Mr. Wilson, the paper asserts, has not been overcareful about keeping to the truth, as he is only considering immediate results.

"He is now the business proprietor of the big American world-war business," says the Volkszeitung, "the Wall Street commissioner and representative of the ever-increasingly great American financial interests and the exponent of the war profiteering trust. This he was from the beginning, and he will remain true to the role to the end. It would go badly with him if he tried to resist the pressure put on him by the group of New York billionaires."

The paper scoffs at Mr. Wilson for continuing to talk of ideals and says that when people remember the notes of the period of "neutrality" it is difficult to recognize the thoughtful, philosophical clergyman's son who now cries "Force, Force to the utmost!" but that only the tactics have changed and not the policy. It is contended that while Mr. Wilson talks of fighting for freedom, he is really fighting for the large sums invested in the war, as America's loans must not go bankrupt. The paper asserts that the Americans will continue to throw good money after bad and that the public will have President Wilson to thank later on when the money is lost.

PLAN TO THROW OFF YOKE OF AUSTRIA

Representatives of Oppressed Nationalities Under Hapsburg Rule Meet in Rome.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, April 10.—What four years ago seemed impossible became today, under pressure of events, an accomplished fact. Delegates of all the nationalities oppressed by Austria, viz., Bohemians, Slavs, Jugoslavs, Rumanians, Italians, Poles, &c., met in the Capitol under the Presidency of former Minister and Senator Ruffini, with prominent Italian and French politicians, such as former Ministers Martini and Barzilai and MM. Franklin Boullion and Albert Thomas. The meeting agreed on measures, the nature of which was not disclosed, to free the oppressed nationalities from the Austrian yoke.

It is difficult to explain the capital importance of this meeting, which is understood here among persons who for years saw with deepest regret all these nationalities at daggers drawn. The Poles joined the movement with great enthusiasm, but had a special declaration approved by the meeting, saying that their problems concerned Germany in even greater measure than Austria; they will, however, eagerly fight Austria, which they consider Germany's tool.

The newspaper Epoca hopes the discussion at this meeting will have a special effect on America, which, owing to distance and the diametrically opposite conditions obtaining here, can not imagine the true state of affairs from which the oppressed nationalities under Austria are suffering.

CONGRESS TO RUSH OUR OWN DRAFT BILL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The statement of Premier Lloyd George, in Commons yesterday, that American troops are an essential factor in holding the western line, was received in Congress today with great interest. It will form the topic of debate tomorrow when the War Department's amendments to the existing draft laws, declared necessary by the department for the second call of men, comes up for debate.

Unanimous consent was given just before adjournment tonight that these changes would be taken up tomorrow, displacing the Rivers and Harbors bill, and be kept before the House to the exclusion of all other business until finished. Representative Madden of Illinois, consenting to this arrangement for the Republicans, called the measure the most important matter before the American people. It seemed certain tonight that these changes, over which a sharp fight had been threatened, will go through without serious difficulty.

Representative Kahn of California, ranking Republican on the Military Affairs Committee, said today:

"It is my firm opinion, and I shall tell the House tomorrow, that the best the Allies can do is to hold the western line, and that it will be Americans who will give the final momentum necessary to a successful offensive.

"I am very hopeful that when Secretary Baker returns from France, he will bring with him plans for a vastly increased military establishment. A few months ago, when I told him that the United States should have 5,000,000 men in arms, he threw up his hands. I imagine he hasn't that same attitude now. To win this war, we must outnumber and outfight the Germans on the Western front."

Representative Shallenberger of Nebraska, a member of the Military Affairs Committee, who opposed the draft, said today after reading Lloyd George's speech that he thought the United States would be forced to conscript all men for service up to 40 years of age. Tomorrow he will oppose the War Department's proposal that no men except those in class 1 of registrants shall be called into active service.

One result of the Lloyd George statement was that Representative Kitchin, Democratic floor leader, who had been counted on to oppose the War Department's draft bill, announced that he would support it.

tary age to 50 would result in the increased military efficiency expected. He thought it more probable that, owing to the resulting dislocation in industry, it would cause a diminution in the sum total of the available national effort for the conduct of the war.

Dealing with Ireland, Mr. Asquith said that the question whether compulsory service, when it was proposed for Great Britain, should be extended to Ireland had already been twice considered by the late Government, and on both occasions had been deliberately rejected.

The test to be applied was always whether the advantages would be greater than the disadvantages. It was purely a practical question. He thought that the argument against compulsion in Ireland had been strengthened rather than weakened by the time that had elapsed since it was last considered.

"The Government was introducing a large measure of self-government for Ireland, Mr. Asquith said, and he hoped that the measure would be received with something like general assent.

There were both constitutional and revolutionary movements in Ireland, Mr. Asquith went on. The evidence showed that the latter was waning, but it was not stamped out. It still existed, and had to be reckoned with. He suggested that the Government would be guilty of terrible short-sightedness, at a time when the Irish Convention had completed its labors, and when it was asking the House to accept a far-reaching measure of self-government, in imposing on Ireland compulsion which was obnoxious to a very large number of the Irish people. It was all-important that unnecessary domestic controversy should be avoided, and that a united and unbroken front should be presented to the people, the Allies, and the world.

Bonar Law Tells of Emergency.

Andrew Bonar Law, spokesman for the Government, said that what had happened in France was unexpected. That was why this bill was presented.

"It is useless to conceal from ourselves the real position," he said. "Until the battle began the balance of forces was not against the Allies on the western front. Not only the Government, but the British and French military advisers, believed that there was no danger of anything fatal happening. Wherever the fault lies, it does not relieve the necessity of filling the ranks in the army, unless we are prepared to accept the position that we cannot win.

"We have been able to fill the wastage in the battle thus far, but according to the figures of the casualties available, the most critical time is likely to arise at the end of May and June. We have succeeded to some extent in meeting the difficulty by what the Americans have done. We cannot put too high our admiration of President Wilson's action in this matter in brigading the American troops. Nothing but absolute necessity could have justified our making such a demand or President Wilson's acceding to it."

Using Four Months Men.

There were still eight months at least of this campaign left, Mr. Bonar Law continued, and if the struggle went on, as the Government believed it would, the men conscripted now would become available just at the time they were needed. The Government had already put in men of four months or less training, and must face the economic risk, confronted as it was by a greater risk.

"What we are doing now," he said, "might mean the difference between victory and defeat."

With regard to Ireland, the Government did not contemplate without reluctance or hesitation doing anything which threatened to make Ireland England's enemy. It ought not to be so. The Government was asking Ireland to do nothing which was not asked from the citizens of every belligerent country, and the fact that it was delayed proved that the Government had been anxious to deal honorably and fairly with Ireland.

"We acted only after mature consideration," said Mr. Bonar Law, "and we are not going to alter our decision. If this clause is rejected it will be wiser to reject the whole bill. If the country thinks we are making a mistake we will do our utmost loyally to support any other Government which carries on the war."

Colonel Martin Archer-Shee wanted to know if it was a fact that six weeks ago the American Government offered to recruit in the United States for the British Army, and if that offer was refused. If so, would the Government reconsider the decision and ask the Americans to take the step now.

Irish Howl Down Geddes.

After Captain William A. Redmond had spoken against the Government measure, a sensational scene arose in the House. Leif Jones, Liberal for Nottinghamshire, demanded on whose advice the Government was acting in deciding to conscript Ireland. Sir Auckland Geddes, Minister of Recruiting, rose to address the House, but the Nationalist members shouted for Chief Secretary Duke to speak.

Sir Auckland tried to speak, but his voice was drowned by shouts of: "Duke!" "Duke!" The Speaker of the House appealed for order, whereupon Joseph Devlin excitedly demanded to know where the Irish Government stood in the matter. The disorders continued, Sir Auckland Geddes vainly trying to get a hearing. The Speaker again intervened and said that, although some members were anxious to hear the Chief Secretary, others wanted to hear Geddes.

This failing to quiet the commotion, the Speaker appealed to the House for a third time and said that, if a certain number of members were determined that Geddes should not be heard, that was a game two parties could play at. He strongly deprecated the attempt to shout down the Minister or Recruiting.

John Dillon appealed to his friends to allow Sir Auckland a hearing, and Andrew Bonar Law eventually promised that Mr. Duke should participate in the discussion of the Irish clause. Sir Auckland Geddes was then allowed to speak. He gave some explanations on details of the bill and strongly emphasized its urgency from a military viewpoint.

Closure was applied and carried by a vote of 319 to 103, and an amendment by Sir Charles Hobhouse, declaring that "while recognizing the gravity of the military situation, the House is of opinion that the measure diminishes the naval and economic power of the nation without adding commensurate military strength," was defeated by a vote of 321 to 106. The bill was then passed to second reading.

BONAR LAW STANDS FIRM.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, April 11.—The Daily Chronicle's Parliamentary correspondent writes:

"After last (Wednesday) night's debate on the second reading of the new Military Service bill, the country is faced with the possibility of a grave political crisis developing in the next few days. Some of the provisions in the bill were severely criticised during the debate, notably by Sir Donald MacLean, who spoke with all the authority that belongs to him as Chairman of the most important draft appeal tribunal in the country. John Dillon solemnly warned the Government of the danger they were running of creating a new battlefront in Ireland, and Mr. Asquith earnestly counseled against extension of the military service act to that country.

"The ex-Prime Minister was critical of other points in the bill. He spoke with great energy and under an overwhelming sense of responsibility, avoiding merely controversial points and betraying not a trace of partisanship. The great majority of the House seemed to be in sympathy with Mr. Asquith, and when he sat down he received a veritable ovation.

"It was in a crowded house in this mood, at once tense and critical, that Bonar Law rose at 6:35 o'clock. He spoke for an hour without the aid of a single note. As a debating effort his speech was a tour de force. His arguments marched in orderly procession.

"Every phase of the bill was discussed. Even when his spirit was hard and unyielding his manner was fair and courteous. Never has he spoken with more power or with an accent of firmer conviction.

"The feature above all others that stood out in the speech was that frank invitation to the House to change the Government if it did not like the bill. Bonar Law was not very malleable on the question of the new age limits for military service, but in regard to the extension of conscription to Ireland he was as unyielding as a block of marble. On this point the Cabinet mean to stand or fall.

"The application of the military service act to Ireland is not,' he said, 'with us a pious opinion; we intend to carry it out.'

"He went on to say that there was no subject on which the House of Commons was more entitled to pronounce its judgment than this one. 'If the House thinks we are wrong, somebody else must carry on the Government,' he asserted. He disclaimed the idea of using this language as a threat. He only desired to make it plain that on this matter of Ireland the Cabinet were not going to alter their decision.

"He even invited the House to pronounce for or against the Government by a decision on the second reading, without waiting for the committee stage, when the clause dealing with Ireland is reached. It was a direct challenge, so bold and overpowering that for the moment it took everybody aback, but boldness in adhering to rash causes has often led to dangerous embarrassments for a Government."

"The initiative is now with Asquith. He could not, of course, oppose the second reading, but if during the committee stage he chose to accept Bonar Law's challenge by moving or supporting an amendment for the exclusion of Ireland a critical political situation would arise."

'INSANE,' SAYS T. P. O'CONNOR.

Irish Leader Cables "Solemn Warning" to Dillon.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 10.—Application in Ireland of military conscription would be an "insane blunder," according to a cablegram sent today to John Dillon, leader of the Irish Party in Parliament, by T. P. O'Connor, Irish publicist and member of Parliament, who is here on a speaking tour. The message read:

"I must at once record a solemn warning that conscription in Ireland will paralyze its friends and encourage its bitterest enemies in this country. This insane blunder would again render futile the best efforts of Irish leaders everywhere."

LONDON PRESS FEARS EFFECT IN IRELAND

LONDON, April 10.—The general tone of the comment in most of the London newspapers on Premier Lloyd George's proposal of conscription for Ireland reflects serious apprehension of the effect on the Irish people. The evening papers, except The Globe, which is pro-Ulster, either oppose the bill or express grave doubts as to the effect of an attempt to enforce it. While a majority of the morning papers agree with the principle of the measure, several of them dwell upon the need of caution in dealing with Ireland at this time.

The Westminster Gazette, while maintaining reserve on the man-power bill as applied to Great Britain, says that the proposals regarding Ireland have increased Irish uneasiness.

"We are at war, and we cannot wish to add acute troubles in Ireland to our other difficulties," says this newspaper.

It expresses regret that the Irish Nationalists were not consulted and that Premier Lloyd George is "flying into the teeth of a unanimous report signed equally by the Unionists and Nationalists of the Committee of the Irish Convention appointed to consider the relations between the military service and the Irish Government."

The Gazette thinks that the Premier, by declaring for conscription to be imposed upon Ireland no matter what happens to the Home Rule proposition, risks the failure of both measures, between the Nationalists who may object to the one and the Unionists who may object to the other. It suggests that this portion of the bill be reshaped and that "we be saved acute trouble with Ireland for a military reinforcement which may easily, if this method be pursued, turn out on the balance to be a minus quantity."

Views Outlook with Anxiety.

The Evening Standard, after expressing the hope that the Government will do its best to minimize the disturbance to the national life due to the partial mobilization of men up to 50 years of age, says that it is undoubtedly only just that Ireland should do her part. "but when we come to the question of compulsion there are considerations which make us regard with considerable anxiety the situation foreshadowed in last night's debate."

Charging the Government with having "weakly and foolishly permitted anti-British, pro-German propaganda in Ireland," the Standard adds that, much as it regrets this, "it is clear that Ireland is in a false position as regards the rest of the civilized world so long as she refuses to play her full part in the war."

The Star takes the Premier to task for having, as it alleges, failed to read the report of the Irish convention before making his proposal.

The Daily Mail says that the choice which is now being made is between victory and defeat, adding:

"No faintheartedness of the survivors must make the sacrifice of our dead in vain."

There is no other course than that proposed, it adds, "as Russia has failed us and the United States has not been able to send us armies in time." The paper says that Irishmen cannot be excluded when men of 50 in England are being called up for service.

The Daily News agrees that whatever steps will further the prosecution of the war must be adopted, but says:

"In striking a balance we must satisfy ourselves that the gain will be more than the loss."

The paper then deals with the Irish proposal, which, it says, seems like "midsummer madness," adding:

"For every battalion it brings us it will mean the loss of two needed to hold in check an indignant people stung once more into open rebellion."

Called Obvious Justice.

No Government measure, The Times says, has ever had a background more grim or a justification more imperative. The Times adds:

"We shall certainly not attempt, especially in the light of the latest news from France, to prejudge the attitude which the Nationalist members may ultimately adopt toward this obvious measure of justice to the rest of the United Kingdom and to the Irishmen of Canada and the United States."

The Morning Post rejoices that the Premier and his colleagues have resolved on a "straight, just and courageous policy" toward Ireland, but says that the proposal to introduce a measure of home rule in Ireland is unwise and unjust, as it is an attempt to conciliate the irreconcilables.

Premier Lloyd George, says The Daily Express, undoubtedly was voicing British opinion when he declared that it was intolerable that young Irishmen should be left "to prosper and riot" when British manhood was mobilized for military service.

The Manchester Guardian considers that from the Premier's statement a case for raising the military age in Great Britain has not been made out. Assuming that the Germans have made up their minds either to succumb or triumph as a consequence of this present offensive, the newspaper says, that particular issue will be settled in one way or the other before the men of 50 and 50 are trained. The paper asks whether it is worth while to disorganize the business of the country for the sake of 70,000 or 100,000 men six months hence.

The Guardian believes that American reinforcements will turn the balance, and finds it impossible to regard the raising of the age for service as a real contribution to the military problem. As for conscription in Ireland, it calls this the gravest decision announced in the Premier's speech, and the one with the smallest attempt at justification.

WAR NEWS HELPS PREMIER.

LONDON, April 10.—Factors which governed the recent crisis over the removal of General Sir William Robertson as Chief of the General Staff still seem to control the political situation. The Lloyd George Government has again challenged the House of Commons to accept its man-power policy or provide another Government.

Since no Parliamentary section appears ready to take the Government responsibility, the indications are, as shown by today's debate, that the Government will carry the day, despite the evidence that the new proposals meet with widespread criticism. Moreover, the news from the front today, showing the continued gravity of the military situation, is helping the Ministers in their new campaign.

Ireland and the attitude of the Nationalists remains an unknown factor, but John Dillon at the end of his speech seemed to indicate a possible means of agreeing with the Government. Until the Government proposals on the projected home rule measure become known, nothing can be predicted with any certainty.

ANGRY PROTESTS IN IRELAND.

Freeman's Journal Says That the Government Has "Gone Mad."

DUBLIN, April 10.—Commenting on Premier Lloyd George's proposal of conscription for Ireland, the Irish Independent says:

"The bases of the Government's policy are so apparent that all its intentions are suspected. No Ministry that has ever ruled Ireland since the penal days has more justly incurred the execrations of a people whose liberties are sacrificed to mean expediency."

The Freeman's Journal says: "The Government has gone mad. Lloyd George, the quondam Boer champion, announced the decision yesterday to carry the war into Ireland. Every one in Ireland knows what the result will be. The only supporters in Ireland of forcible conscription of Irishmen for the war are those who want to see Ireland reduced to a welter of confusion, in order that their own reactionary views may prevail."

The Irish Times says:

"We are sure the Government did not reach its decision without having made its plans to overcome, if it cannot propitiate, the resistance which may be offered from Ireland. Only one thing could be more unfortunate than the total exemption of this country from compulsory service—the enactment of compulsion and subsequent hesitation to enforce it in the face of lawless and disloyal threats."

SAYS AMERICA HEARTENS ITALY

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The powerful support of the United States has stiffened the resistance of the people and soldiers of Italy, King Emmanuel cabled President Wilson in a message on the occasion of the first anniversary of the United States' entry into the war. The message, just now received here, reads:

"It is a year since the American Republic under your enlightened guidance threw herself into the gigantic struggle which the free peoples, united by common ideals of justice and democracy, are waging against the threatened yoke of autocracy and militarism.

"While the valiant American troops are fighting on the glorious soil of France, while new armies are about to cross the ocean, the powerful support of the United States stiffens the resistance of the people and the soldiers of Italy. Full of faith in the justice of the common cause and in the righteousness of the Italian national aspirations, the soldiers of Italy await confidently the enemy's offensive. On this eventful anniversary they send with me their greetings to you and to the American Army."

CALM CONFIDENCE IN FRENCH ARMY

unit, the General commanding was able to retreat step by step until relieved.

At Roye he learned that the troops on the left were unable to withstand pressure. He set off alone for the front line and personally led his men to a victorious counterattack. Their forces dwindled continually until divisional instruction units and schools of hurriedly recovered wounded and engineers were fighting in the front line. Yet the officers of the cut-off division described the whole thus: "At the end we had the impression that the German blood had reached its high-water mark. They did not seem to want to attack any more," was the laconic phrase used of the ultimate failure of the attempt of 100,000 men to break 10,000.

That is what I mean by saying that the French Army is professional. It possesses to the utmost degree that dispassionate judgment which marks efficient business all the world over and which refuses to be influenced by the incidentals, however unpleasant, these are to individuals, in their consideration of big affairs.

It must not be thought that this means that the French lack humanity or tenderness. On the table of those very staff officers was a bunch of Spring flowers, and the new graves that were being dug daily nearer the front are decked with flowers also.

Tears came into an officer's eyes as he described the heroism of one of his comrades, who was decorated with the Legion of Honor on the battlefield for serving a mitrailleuse all alone to permit his section's withdrawal. He added, "What was finer still in my opinion was that he carried men wounded, while serving his piece, to shelter on his own shoulder. It was only when the others had to retreat that he himself began firing. By a miracle he escaped slightly wounded."

In another sector a Sergeant today told me how with seventy comrades he repelled the assaults, ten times repeated, of a German battalion on Mont Renaud. He concluded, smiling:

"We were sorry to be relieved because most of my men come from the invaded districts and had not had a chance to kill so many boches before."

This same Sergeant had a homeless puppy in his dugout and talked proudly of a thrush which he had trained to whistle patriotic airs and taken back to his mother in Paris.

In short, the French soldiers from highest to lowest are doing the work they know must be done. Their officers have been trained to war during the last forty years and are equal to every emergency.

But the French Army has full reliance upon the British also. The French know enough to make allowances and have great faith in the bulldog tenacity of the Britons. They have even greater faith in America.

"When will the Americans be here?" "How many Americans are there in France?" are the questions asked in every front line sector of the present battle.

France is putting her trust in America. It is our duty to see that France is not disappointed.

Where They Fought Hand to Hand.

THE TIMES correspondent has visited one of the less active sectors of the great battle—between Lassigny and Noyon. The configuration of the ground resembled the country above Long Island Sound in Connecticut—low, wooded hills with steep sides, broken by occasional stretches of valley.

The weather was dull and clouded, which hampered the view but permitted me to overlook the German position from hill tops instead of being compelled to peer through narrow slits of observation posts under pain of being sniped or treated to a shell burst by the enemy. On the right the tower of Noyon Cathedral was easily visible, and on the left were the hills toward Lassigny. In the valley below the opposing front lines were established.

A boyish officer of a regiment holding the sector, who explained with pride that despite the battle on Mont Renaud the previous week against ten times their number his comrades had been allowed to stay in the front line, declared that while they did not expect a boche attack in force at that point, because the defensive position was too strong, yet infantry activity, especially at night, was incessant.

Of what this artillery was doing I had unceasing evidence. The roar of explosions—French "departs" and boche "arrivals"—was tremendous. The officer said:

"It can hardly be said that the trenches are yet fully established. All night long patrols go out from both sides and fight hand to hand, or rather knife to knife, for both dare not fire lest they bring down a hail of quick-firer bullets, in swampy bruabwood bordering the Divette rivulet down there. Now and then even in daytime the Germans attempt a sudden attack with half a battalion or so. Word comes to our batteries before they have hardly started, and at once a storm of 75 shells drives them back.

"Unless my study of American military history is faulty, the geographical position is much the same as at the battle of Chickamauga, where, as here, there was abundant cover for advancing troops. But we have the aid of telephones in repelling attacks and, above all, 75s, which upset the Germans even worse than quickfirers. We can check all of his attempts, and at night our patrols often get close enough to drop grenades upon them.

"Your fellows would have an opportunity to 'hunt big game' without risk of trouble. Tell them we are waiting for them eagerly, and they will have good sport when they come."

ADVOCATES ONE POWER IN CENTRAL EUROPE

Professor Nauman Would Unite Germany and Austria in Common Policy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 10.—Professor Nauman, the famous exponent of the Mitteleuropa scheme, makes a special appeal in the Vossische Zeitung that Germany and Austria-Hungary contract a binding agreement immediately involving a mutual foreign policy as well as an economical and military one. The writer argues that only through the formation of a united Central European power can real security of frontiers be attained, and that Poland will only be subdued when confronted with this. The Brest-Litovsk treaties, he says, should lead to other agreements.

Professor Nauman advocates Central European Ministers, officials, Consuls, shipping industry, and railroads, as well as foreign policy.

"Now is the time for this deed," he concludes.

Their "Gold Medals" Iron at Present

THE HAGUE, April 10.—The famous Bunzen Society today awarded its gold medal to Dr. Ingeneer Bosch and Professor Haber, inventors and perfectors of the system of exploiting nitrogen contained in the air which makes Germany independent of imports from Chile. The medals delivered are really of iron, but will be replaced by the real thing after the war.

Saving to Win the War

IN order that our soldiers and sailors may be supplied with food and clothing and with the guns and ammunition with which to fight the war to a successful finish it is necessary that about Forty Million Dollars a day should be saved and paid into the Treasury. This is about two dollars a day for each and every family—much beyond the means of many and much below the means of others.

To determine how this burden should be apportioned we have made a careful study. The results of our investigation are contained in a pamphlet just published, a copy of which you should have before you when making up your Liberty Loan Budget.

OLD 69TH MEMBERS ON CASUALTY LISTS

157 or More Were of Companies K and M, of New York Regiment.

STRETCHER BEARERS ALSO

Although the casualties announced yesterday in Washington contained the names of officers and men from all commands in the 165th Infantry, which had absorbed the old 69th Regiment of the New York National Guard, a large number of the wounded were members of Companies K and M. Some of the wounded were members of the Sanitary Detachment of the regiment, who had been trained as stretcher bearers. Veterans of the 69th here said that the two companies must have been exposed to heavy fire, and that the stretcher bearers were wounded in trying to carry wounded comrades to the casualty stations.

Captain John P. Hurley of Company K, who is slightly wounded, is the senior company commander in his battalion and has taken the command of Major Timothy J. Moynahan, who was slightly wounded in action about March 28.

Captain Hurley was a member of the Sixty-ninth for several years and served with it on the Mexican border in 1916. He was a member of the engineers' staff of the Public Service Commission and the Highways Department and did much of the engineering work in the border camps. He is about 35 years old. His wife is living now at 8 Eighth Avenue, Brooklyn.

Another officer of Company K reported slightly wounded is First Lieutenant Coleman D. Burns of 17 Arden Stret. He served ten years in the old 69th and was promoted from Second to First Lieutenant when the 165th Regiment was in Camp Mills. His wife said that she received yesterday the official notification of his injury, and that the message stated he had been wounded in action on March 21. She received a cable from her husband on March 28 saying: "All's well."

Three officers of Company M of the 165th Infantry are reported slightly wounded, as are about thirty-five other men of the command. Captain Martin H. Meaney of 151 East Fifty-fourth Street, the youngest company commander in the regiment, is only 26 years old, but was a member of the 69th for eight years. He served on the Mexican border and was designated by the regimental commander to attend the first officers' training camp at Plattsburg. He was commissioned as Captain, and on request of Lieut. Col. Latham R. Reed he was assigned to a command in his old regiment.

First Lieutenant Floyd L. Stevens of Company M is 28 years old and lived at 170 East Seventieth Street, Brooklyn. He was Vice President of the L. A. Westermann Company, commercial illustrators, of 175 Fifth Avenue. He was an officer in the Twenty-third Regiment and served on the Mexican border. Lieutenant Stevens resigned from the Twenty-third to go to Plattsburg, and was assigned to Camp Upton and then to Camp Mills. Two years ago he married Miss Edna Baskerville of Bayonne, N. J. His brother, Harry C. Stevens, Jr., is a lieutenant in the 105th Infantry in the Twenty-seventh Division at Spartanburg, S. C.

Second Lieutenant Arthur L. Bunnell of Company M served as a non-commissioned officer in the Twenty-third Infantry on the Mexican border and was assigned to the Plattsburk camp. He is 29 years old and lived with his parents, at 178 East Seventieth Street. He had been in the newspaper advertising business after his graduation from Williams College.

In addition to the officers named, there are 36 members of Company M and, 116 of Company K of the 165th Regiment who are named among the slightly wounded. All of these are residents of New York or its vicinity.

ATTACK CREEL.

Security League to Ask Congress to Abolish His Committee.

George Creel's reported statement that he was glad that the country was not prepared for war was attacked yesterday by the Executive Committee of the National Security League at a meeting and by the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, who spoke to the members of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce at 127 Remsen Street. The National Security League decided to ask Congress to abolish the entire Committee on Public Information as at present constituted, and a resolution was passed calling for the handling of the business of the committee "by three or five men not holding any other public office and selected irrespective of political affiliation."

Dr. Cadman said that if the sentiments attributed to Creel are correctly reported, Creel ought to disclaim them, change them or resign from his position.

PHILADELPHIANS WOUNDED.

LONDON, April 10.—In the course of the recent fighting and retirement on the western front, says an official statement issued this evening by the War Office, "a surgical team, which very generously had been sent to one of our casualty clearing stations by a Philadelphia hospital, was heavily bombed, and two officers and one nurse were wounded."

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—It is believed here that the two officers and the nurse mentioned in the London dispatch as wounded are Dr. Edward B. Hodge, Dr. Henry Dillard, Jr., and Miss Isabella Slambaugh, all attached to a base hospital unit sent out by a local hospital. Word that they had been wounded was cabled to this city a week ago yesterday by the medical director of the unit. The families were notified by the War Department March 30.

The names of Captain Hodges and Miss Stambaugh were included in the casualty lists issued by the War Department last night. Dr. Dillard was only slightly wounded, and is supposed to have returned to his duties.

BAKER, INCOG., HEARS PRAISE AND BLAME

SECRETARY HAS TOUGH JOB

One Thinks He Must Be Smart, but Another Is Less Charitable in His Opinions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Thursday, April 11.—The Stars and Stripes, the American troops' paper, prints a story about a civilian in a derby hat and "store clothes" who recently strolled into a garage in a town on the American front in France where a dozen chauffeurs were sitting around a stove swapping yarns.

"Well, how do you boys like it here?" asked the visitor. They answered his question. Some of them liked it and some did not.

"Tell you what, guy," said one of the hardiest of the car propellers, "things is better than what they uster be. Time was when we got nothing but canned Willy and hardtack for Sunday dinner and didn't get any days off after driving the big birds up to the front and hanging around all night. Now, though, things are better all along the line. Guess somebody must of tumbled to his job down in Washington."

"Oh," said the stranger civilian with just a little smile around the corners of his mouth. "So you think some one in Washington was to blame?"

"Sure, and why wouldn't we?" answered the informative person. "We know all the people high up here and they're onto their jobs now. Chances are if they can't get things for us that they can't get 'em themselves from Washington to hand out to us. Sometimes I think some of them guys in Washington is fightin' this war in France—honest, I do."

"Aw, I don't know that they've done so bad," piped up another. "You can't expect 'em to fit out a million men overnight, when they were only geared to fit out about a hundred thousand before we got into it. Give 'em a chance, I say. And another thing," he persisted, "that gets my goat is the way the papers back home slams this guy Baker, the Secretary of War. He's up against a helluva tough job for even a lawyer to handle, and editors that's pannin' him would probably do a darn sight worse with it. He must be a smart son of a gun or the President wouldn't have picked him out for it."

The civilian laughed, and then—

"Well, boys, I've got to be running along," he said. "Who knows? Some of these fine days I may be washin' the top of a car and some of you may be Secretary of War."

And Secretary Baker, who was enjoying one of his little incognito visits to get right at the facts as the men see them, slipped out.

MEXICAN TROOPS FACE AMERICANS AT BORDER

FORT HANCOCK, Texas, April 10.—American cavalry patrols and Mexican Federal troops face each other tonight across the Rio Grande at the San Juan mine ford, eight miles southeast of Fort Hancock. Across the river from Fort Hancock, Federal troops at nightfall were "digging themselves in" and the two forces lay so close to one another tonight that the challenges of Mexican sentries could be heard plainly on the American side of the river.

Reports reaching Colonel George T. Langhorne, commander of American troops in the Big Bend district, tonight told of the death of five Mexican soldiers at the hands of American troops today. Three Mexican Federal cavalrymen were killed near here when an American machine gun detachment opened fire on the Mexicans after more than one hundred shots had been fired at the Americans from the south bank of the river. After two volleys from the American machine gun the Mexicans retired and were not seen again. Two other Mexicans were killed near Ysleta, Texas, in a skirmish between Mexican and American troops after the former had opened fire.

Army officers said tonight that it had been known for a week that a general concentration of Mexican Federal troops in this region had been under way for some time. A column of cavalry, the strength of which was estimated at 500 men, was observed today, coming from the direction of Guadalupe, west of here, and it believed to be a part of the general concentration.

The purpose of the concentration remains unknown, but many officers believe that an organized effort will be made to oppose further invasions of Mexico by American troops in pursuit of bandits.

GERMANS MUTINIED IN PRUSSIAN CAMP

Three Officers Shot When Troops Were to Start for Fighting Line in France.

AMSTERDAM, April 10.—A mutiny occurred among the German troops at Beverloo Camp, in Limburg, Prussia, before the time they were to start for the fighting line in France, according to the Telegraaf.

Three officers were shot and several others wounded. The disturbance, adds the newspaper, was suppressed and most of those responsible for it were placed under arrest.

PARIS WANTS BEEF CONTROL

PARIS, April 10.—Representatives of the Paris Municipal Council today requested Victor Beret, Minister of Provisions, to check the speculation in livestock which has been in progress for some time, resulting in increases in the prices of dressed beef. The committee cited wide differences between prices at the stock yards and in the Central Markets as evidence of manipulations, which the municipal authorities believe to be responsible for the recent increases. The Minister was urged to requisition live stock.

Bernard's characteristic cleverness is shown in the designing of the full-length stole front that drapes into a large collar, and shapes a deep fitted yoke to which is shirred the full rippling cape.

CRAZED SERGEANT KILLS TWO AT FORT

PICKED OFF FROM WINDOW

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., April 10.—Sergeant James Boyle, stationed at Fort Wright, Fisher's Island, N. Y., seven miles across the Sound from New London, today suddenly killed two of his comrades, seriously wounded four others, and ended his own life. It is supposed he became suddenly insane.

Boyle, who was a native of Allentown, Penn., and 40 years old, had recently returned to the fort after a leave of absence and appeared to be rational. A few moments after conversing quietly with a brother soldier he walked into the company office and without warning whipped out a revolver and began to shoot. His first victim was First Sergeant Fred H. Cook of Abington, Mass., a member of the Fourth Company. Sergeant Cook was shot through the heart and died instantly. Private, first class, Tomasso Guzbeg of Holyoke, Mass., fell dead with a bullet through the head.

Opening a window in the office, Boyle coolly began to shoot out promiscuously around the reservation. He was always regarded as a sharpshooter and especially expert with a revolver. Private Edward M. Greene of the Ninth Company, who stood some distance away from the office window, was chosen for slaughter, but he escaped with a bullet in his head. His condition is regarded as very serious.

Private Timothy Sullivan of the 30th Company, a New London youth who recently enlisted, was walking along the company street, when he was shot in the thigh. Lieutenant Jean Bechaud, staff officer, was another selected by Sergeant Boyle as he stood at the window. The Lieutenant received a bullet in the abdomen. His condition tonight was very grave.

Sergeant Adolph Holtoint of the 4th Company was the last soldier shot at from the window, and a bullet went clear through his jaw. His chances for recovery are about even.

When Boyle had finished picking off the men in sight from the window, he turned the revolver upon himself and sent bullet into his own brain, dropping dead.

Colonel Henry S. Dorsey, in command at Fort Wright, summoned surgeons from New London to render assistance to the small hospital force on the island, and Major English of Fort Terry, Dr. Daniel Sullivan, and Captain Cranston of the New London hospital base were dispatched to Fort Wright at top speed aboard the Government transport steamer. Captain Cranston was accompanied by two assistant surgeons and a nurse.

Colonel Dorsey said he could not account for Boyle's act unless the Sergeant was temporarily insane. An investigation was started immediately after the shooting. Boyle was always looked upon as a fine soldier.

MME. DUTREIL IS BETTER.

Ex-Justice Ingraham's Daughter Recovering from Injuries in Paris.

A cablegram received yesterday by ex-Justice George L. Ingraham said that his daughter, Mme. Claude Dutrell, who was injured in the bombardment of a Paris church by the Germans on Good Friday, was recovering in a hospital in the French capital. A column which shielded her from falling debris, prevented Mme. Dutrell from being crushed, the message said, and she was the only one seated in that particular part of the church who escaped death.

Mme. Dutrell sustained cuts over the ear and on the chin and a severe flesh wound on the right thigh. First reports were that both her legs had been broken.

BRING SCRAPS OF SHELLS THAT FELL IN PARIS

AN ATLANTIC PORT, April 10.—Two passengers who arrived here today on a transatlantic liner brought with them bits of projectiles with which Germany has been shelling Paris. Pieces of the shell were reported to be in great demand as relics. The bombardment caused more excitement among souvenir hunters than among any other class, according to the passengers, as the greater number of the shells had exploded harmlessly.

One of those who brought a specimen of the shell into this country was Percy R. Atkins, a Y. M. C. A. secretary, who had been for six weeks with the Rainbow Division, which is now occupying a part of the front line. He had a piece of the aluminum fuse cap of one of the shells, a fragment two inches long and an inch in width. Orlando Marshall, of Waltham, Mass., who has been driving an ambulance in the American Ambulance Corps, also brought back a piece of the shell.

Both men corroborated the statements in despatches from Paris that the population of the city, far from being frightened at the occasional long-range bombardments, regarded the shelling as one of the curiosities of war. With the exception of the destruction wrought in the Church of St. Gervais, which was due, not to the power of the shell but to the fact that it struck in such a way as to carry away the supports of the roof of the church, the execution done by the shells was reported to be inconsiderable.

Mr. Atkins said that all the troops in the Rainbow Division were straining at the leash for a chance to attack the Germans and that one company of Alabama troops had actually broken away from restraint, dashed into the German lines without orders, killing nine and capturing two Germans. Iowa men, he said, had been the first to carry out a raid and penetrate the German trenches. All of the other contingents were filled with envy because this honor had fallen to the Middle Western unit, and were giving their officers trouble in keeping them in the trenches.

Two Alabama men, according to Mr. Atkins, were the first to win the French Cross of War, and others from all sections of the country followed quickly in winning the same distinction.

Mr. Atkins said that Father Francis P. Duffy, the Chaplain of the old Sixty-ninth, now the 165th, was one of the most popular men in France and that men of all faiths were wearing the crosses which Father Duffy had purchased with a fund raised by his friends in this country. Mr. Atkins said that Father Duffy was continually traveling on foot from one unit to another and had become so well-known that parties of officers and others, visiting this section of the front, never failed to recognize the Chaplain on the road and to give him a lift.

PARIS PUPILS DEFY SHELLS.

Schools Reopen After Holidays and City's Life Is Normal.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 10.—The triumphant German reports of panics in Paris and an exodus of the inhabitants in consequence of the long-range bombardments have been effectively disproved by one simple fact. The Paris schools reassembled yesterday after the Easter vacation.

The figures show that the number of children absent, which in the week before the Easter recess amounted to 5 per cent., yesterday did not exceed 8 per cent. This figure will certainly improve during the week, as many children do not return to school the first day after the holidays.

There is evidence also that a large proportion of the people who left Paris before Easter are returning. The genera lappearance of the city is absolutely normal for April in wartime.

TREASURY MODIFIES BAN ON LOAN TOTALS

PADDED RETURNS BARRED

Progress of Sales Shows the Will to Buy, but Campaigners Have Hard Work Ahead.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The Treasury Department has revised its decision to withhold figures of sales of the third Liberty Loan bonds. The Governors of the Federal Reserve Banks today were directed to make daily reports of the totals of completed subscriptions.

Publication of daily figures on total subscriptions will begin tomorrow. Subscriptions for a day probably will be included in the Treasury report the following night. They will be recorded in two classes: Those which the Reserve Banks have received with 5 per cent. initial payments, and those reported by banks and trust companies, but not forwarded to the Reserve Banks with the cash payments.

It was explained by officials today that this publicity policy was in accordance with the original intention, but that the previous instructions had been understood as barring tabulation in each community of subscriptions received by local banks.

The aim in this arrangement is to eliminate the uncertainty and confusion that result from taking the returns of loan soliciting committees and will include only actual subscriptions received by the banks. Duplicated reports of subscriptions also will be avoided by this plan. The broad purpose is to put a stop to exaggerated claims and keep the conduct of the bond campaign on a sure footing. In the previous loan drive there was a tendency for sales that were initiated only and in most cases to stimulate actual sales. The argument is advanced that after two bond issues the American people is now somewhat educated in the matter of Government bonds and there is not so much need of arousing the will to buy.

The progress of sales of bonds in the last four days, it was said, indicated this, and the promptness with which subscriptions have been made is believed to promise well for the success of the loan. At the same time, the experience heretofore has been that the later stages of the campaign require the hardest work.

The hot or flag competition still holds the imagination of the country. The efforts of claimants for the award of being first to complete a quota is growing longer. Six hundred cities and towns now demand first honors, and the number is expected to go to 1,000.

The secondary contest among towns and cities that, having completed their quotas are engaged in reporting their overasubscriptions is going forward with enthusiasm. Far Hills, N. J., has the palm now for having done this three times already. The aggregate of subscriptions by the successful towns is said to be not large, but the effect on sales throughout the country is likely to be highly stimulative.

Reports from the six special war relic trains that are touring the Atlanta, St. Louis and Dallas districts indicate the keenest interest. In almost every city where a stop is scheduled it is necessary to hold overflow meetings for crowds that cannot get into the train.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, the singer, today enlisted as a Liberty Loan campaigner.

"I surely am at your service for our country and Government," she wired the National Speakers' Bureau. "Just command me. On April 8 I bought for myself again Liberty bonds to the amount of $20,000. I am heart and soul for the United States and for the army and navy boys forever."

William S. Hart, the motion picture actor, also wired that he would leave tomorrow to begin his campaign on the Pacific Coast. His personal subscription to the Third Liberty Loan, he said, was $100,000.

An army of several hundred thousand school children will add its force to the speaking propaganda in behalf of the loan through the organization of Junior Four Minute Men. Every pupil in the graded schools will be permitted to enter the contest. Each contestant will prepare and deliver a four-minute talk, and the winners in each school will gain the privilege of delivering their talks before joint meetings of the entire membership of the schools and the pupils' parents.

NEW ENGLAND PUSHES SALES.

Nearly 100 Towns Have Already Passed Their Loan Quotas.

BOSTON, April 10.—Although still without official totals to indicate just what has been accomplished in the matter of disposing of the district's quota of $250,000,000 of Liberty bonds, members of the New England Committee tonight were satisfied that they were well on the road to success. There was no relaxation of effort, however, the announcement that every dollar of oversubscription was to be accepted and that Secretary McAdoo had set $5,000,000,000 as the goal for the country serving as an incentive for a big oversubscription drive here.

The list of towns that already have passed their quota continued to grow today and was well on toward the 100 mark. As rapidly as the returns were checked up honor flags were awarded these 100 per cent. communities and several banners were sent out today. Twenty-six have been presented. Lynn took first place on the roll of honor for the State. No other Massachusetts city with a population between 50,000 and 100,000 has gone "over the top." New Hampshire continued to lead the New England States in the number of individual towns and cities which have done more than was expected of them, claimants for honor flags in that State numbering thirty-three tonight.

Large subscriptions reported late today included $500,000 each by the Pacific Mills and the Provident Institution for Savings of Boston. A subscription of $1,000,000 by the United Shoe Machinery Company was among the sales reported by the Boston Committee.

Banks Agree On Interest Rate.

Arthur M. Anderson, Director of Distribution of the Liberty Loan Committee, announced last night that every commercial bank and trust company in the Borough of Manhattan had agreed to carry Third Liberty Loan bonds for 90 days at not more than 4¼ per cent., the coupon rate. A few days ago the Liberty Loan Committee recommended to the banks that they agree to this rate, and the suggestion has been unanimously adopted. Similar steps have been taken by the associated banks in Boston and in Chicago. The Federal Reserve Bank's discount rate for 90-day paper secured by Liberty Loan bonds is also 4¼ per cent., and consequently institutions which rediscount the notes of their customers will be according bond subscribers facilities for which they will receive no remuneration.

A number of additional subscriptions to the Liberty Loan were announced yesterday. It should be noted that some of those appearing in the list have actually been reported to the Federal Reserve Bank, while some have not; and attention is called to the fact that in some instances applications filed by individuals or corporations are duplicated in the announcements of subscriptions filed by banks, the latter including the former.

D. P. Kingsley Urges Action.

Darwin P. Kingsley, President of the New York Life Insurance Company, who is Chairman of the Insurance Committee of the Liberty Loan, addressed yesterday about 500 agents who met at the company's luncheon room.

Myron T. Herrick, formerly American Ambassador to France, and Marie Dressler addressed a gathering at the Liberty Bell in City Hall. An incident of yesterday's drive for subscriptions to the loan was told last night by Mrs. Guy Wilkinson, one of the Captains in charge of the booth at the Liberty Bell in City Hall Park.

"We were taking in subscriptions," Mrs. Wilkinson said, "when we observed an old man slowly pushing his way through the crowd to the booth. When I asked him if he wanted to buy a bond, he answered affirmatively and showed me his honorable discharge from the British Army. He was a Gordon Highlander and seemed proud of that fact.

"I gave him the usual white receipt when he paid me the $50. Then he tore up the receipt with the remark, 'For the United States.' That was the old Highlander's tribute to this country for the support it is giving the Allies. I thought it was such a fine thing for the old Britisher to do, when so many native-born Americans will not give as much as $5 for any patriotic cause."

Parade of Elephants Postponed.

The parade of elephants and camels from the Barnum & Bailey Circus has been postponed until tomorrow.

The New York Stock Exchange expressed its support of the third Liberty Loan in this resolution yesterday:

Whereas, On the anniversary of our entry into the war our President has marked out one and unvarying course to be to force, force to the utmost, force without stint or limit," and

Whereas, This means bringing to bear the entire man power, industrial power, and financial power of the nation; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the New York Stock Exchange pledges itself and its members to the energetic and resolute support of the President and the third Liberty Loan.

Members of the Hungarian Society of New York are working hard in the interest of the Liberty Loan. The organization has already applied for $10,000 of bonds, and it is estimated that individual members have subscribed to date something like $100,000.

The display of Liberty Loan posters is not limited to buildings in the business parts of the city, but the owners of fashionable Fifth Avenue homes have given their approval to the exhibition of posters on their property. Already there has been placed on the ornamental iron fence surrounding the Vanderbilt house at Fifty-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue, two big Liberty Loan signs. Against the railing of the Oelrichs property and other well-known homes there have been spread signs reading: "He Also Fights Who Helps a Fighter Fight—Buy Liberty Bonds."

USE WILSON TO BOOST LOAN

AMSTERDAM, April 10.—The German war loan propaganda is working under full pressure. The newspapers are filled with short articles, pithy sayings, drawings, and poetical efforts on this subject.

President Wilson's Baltimore speech is brought into the propaganda thus:

"President Wilson threatens us with force to the utmost, without stint or limit. We believe he means it. Therefore, hasten ye all and subscribe to the loan."

Janitor Invests $828 in War Stamps

Bolsheviki, It Is Said, Will Publish Documents Showing Tokio Long Planned Action.

SIBERIAN SOVIETS ANGRY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, April 9.—Premier Lenine, in his speech at Moscow yesterday, referred to the prevailing unemployment and hunger and said:

An official protest against the landing of Japanese at Vladivostok has been sent to Washington.

The Commissariat Foreign Affairs is about to publish secret documents which it is asserted show that Japanese action was prepared at the very beginning of the revolution. The Zemstvo at Vladivostok, encouraged by the presence of foreign troops, demanded that authority be handed over to it. The Soviet refused.

MOSCOW, April 9, (Associated Press.)—A protest against the landing of Japanese armed forces at Vladivostok has been sent to the Japanese Consul there by a committee representing the All-Siberian Soviets. Copies of the protest have been delivered to all the other foreign Consuls in Vladivostok.

The protest says that the feeling of indignation among the Russian masses caused by the landing has been intensified by the statement issued by Admiral Kato, the Japanese Commander, It is denied that Japanese in Vladivostok are in danger, and the declaration is made that the landing is an interference in domestic affairs similar to the Japanese participation in the civil war at Blagovieshtchensk, in the Amur Province, where the Japanese are charged with having taken up arms against the authority of the Soviet.

The murder of Japanese at Vladivostok, it is said, was clearly of a provocative character and cannot be charged to the legal authorities. The protest declares that the Japanese interference is an openly reactionary movement which threatens relations between the Japanese and Russian peoples. Deep friendship for the laboring masses in Japan and other countries is expressed in the protest, which adds that they will undoubtedly raise their voices to compel the Japanese Government to withdraw.

Communication with that portion of Manchuria where General Semenoff, the anti-Bolshevik leader, has been operating, has been cut. A Siberian committee which has been conferring with a Chinese delegation at Chita for the purpose of stopping raids by General Semenoff and restoring order on the Siberian Railway, has returned to Irkutsk and asks that troops be dispatched presumably to begin operations against General Semenoff.

Russian newspapers charge that the Japanese have supplied General Semenoff with artillery for the purpose of undermining the Soviet authority in Siberia.

TOKIO, April 9, (Associated Press.)—The landing of a Japanese force at Vladivostok was in consequence of increased disorders and the killing of Japanese there, the Admiralty announces.

Conditions in Vladivostok were constantly becoming more dangerous, the announcement says. There was no police protection and some Japanese were killed. Consequently a number of marines from a Japanese warship were landed this morning to protect residents of the city.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 10.—The Berlin papers pretend to be much amused by the statement that German war prisoners disguised as Bolsheviki were responsible for the riots in Vladivostok which led to the landing of Japanese and British sailors.

"But where will these grotesque representations find credence?" asks the Vossische Zeitung. "Surely not in Washington. Only in March last President Wilson ostentatiously assured the Bolshevist Government of his good-will, and only a few days ago the American Ambassador assured the Moscow authorities that Washington disapproved of Foreign interference in Siberia. It is hardly possible that Tokio should really consider such a farcical pretense, as intimated by a Reuter report, sufficient to raise a serious East Asiatic question."

FAMINE SPREADS IN RUSSIA,

Disorganized Transportation Is Blamed by Food Official.

MOSCOW, April 9, (Associated Press.)—"We entertain no illusions. Victory over famine cannot be expected under the existing circumstances," declared M. Brukhanoff, a member of the National Food Department, at the session last night of the Central Executive Committee of the Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates. Continuing, the speaker said:

"Famine has spread among the great masses of the people owing chiefly to the disorganized transportation. There is plenty of grain in Siberia, Northern Caucasus, and in the Don region. In Siberia there are 150,000,000 poods [a pood is equivalent to thirty-six pounds] of grain, and in the Don province there are 5,000,000 poods, but the regular export to needy sections is difficult to organize."

M. Brukhanoff said that instead of the 35,000,000 poods of grain necessary monthly for a "semi-hunger ration," only 15,000,000, or at the most 20,000,000, were obtainable. This represented a great improvement over former conditions.

The Government has appropriated 1,500,000,000 rubles for the purchase of grain and of manufactured articles to be exchanged for grain. Six hundred carloads of manufactured goods of all kinds have been sent to Siberia and the Don region—350 carloads of leather, boots, and cloth, the remainder of metal products. From Petrograd 35 carloads are being sent daily—40 per cent. to Siberia, 30 to the Don country, and the remainder to the Ufa and Volga provinces, which are in chief need of cloth and leather. The exchange of goods for grain has proved to be the best method of obtaining the foodstuffs.

Improvement of the Trans-Siberian Railway, M. Brukhanoff continued, was the most urgent question, as European Russia was dependent upon Siberia for most of its grain. He said that of 4,000 locomotives which Russia possessed before the recent German advance 1,000 were disabled. This number was increasing because the repair shops were not being operated regularly.

RUSSIA'S OFFICIAL FLAG RED.

MOSCOW, April 9. (Associated Press.)—Russia's national flag henceforth will be red with the inscription "Rossiskay Sotzialyitcheskaya Federativnaya Sovietskaya Respublika" (Russian Socialistic Federative Soviet Republic). This was decided upon today in a resolution passed unanimously by the Central Executive Committee of the All-Russian Soviets.

Chairman Sverdloff, proposing the resolution, said it was imperative to decide the question of the flag immediately, as "the Russian flag will have to wave over the embassies in Berlin and Vienna, and we cannot have the old tricolor, so I think it most proper to adopt the red flag under which we fought and gained victory."

Leon Trotzky, former Foreign Minister, has been appointed Joint Minister of War and Marine. He has been acting as Minister of War since the Government was removed to Moscow.

New German Envoy to Russia.

LONDON, April 10.—The Bolshevist Government, according to an announcement in the Izvestia forwarded by Reuter's Petrograd correspondent, has consented to the nomination of Count von Mirbach, former German Minister to Greece, as German Ambassador to Russia. Peace negotiations with the Ukrainian Rada have been opened by the Russian Government.

SENATORS OPPOSE "LICENSE" TO STRIKE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The attitude of organized labor toward war industries was debated in the Senate today, when the conference report on a bill making it a penal offense to destroy or injure war materials by explosion or other means was taken up. Senators attacked a clause in the bill that would permit employes to strike for higher wages or better conditions of employment. The clause objected to reads:

"Nothing herein shall be construed as making it unlawful for employes to agree together to stop work or not to enter thereon with the sole and bonafide purpose of securing better wages or conditions of employment."

Senator Sterling of South Dakota attacked the clause as unnecessary, arguing that the country could appeal to the loyalty of laboring men everywhere to stay at work while the conflict was on.

"It would be deplorable, regrettable, to think that organized labor would not stick to the country in its hour of stress. But I do not believe they would desert the country."

Senator Sterling read from a circular sent out, he said, by the United States Public Reserve Employment Bureau, an agency under the Secretary of Labor, in which union workmen were called upon to apply for jobs in shipbuilding yards. The circular, Senator Sterling said, urged the employment of union men to the exclusion of all others.

Senator King of Utah wanted to know the name of the official who issued the circular. "He ought to be at once removed from office," he added.

Senator Sterling did not know the name of the official, he said, but agreed that he might to be removed.

Senator McCumber of North Dakota said there was not one shipyard but was obliged to accept union labor on penalty of not getting a Government contract.

"And that in face of the fact that labor is short in shipyards," added the Senator.

"We will merely be inviting men to strike if we pass this," he said. "Now is the time to make an issue of the matter. Let us see if union labor is to obstruct the war. I don't believe it has any such idea."

Senator Reed of Missouri argued that, while in peace time a strike was a matter between a private individual and his employes, in time of war it assumed the phase of an issue between the Government and loyal citizens.

"We cannot afford to have our war industries halted by strikes," he maintained. "Every man who goes on strike delivers a blow for Germany."

The report went over for further debate.

The Heirs of Democracy

THERE was started throughout the United States on Saturday last—April 6th—a Baby Saving Campaign, which is to have a vital influence for good on an entire generation of American children—the boys and girls who are to be the heirs of that Democracy for which this Nation stands ready to pay the last full measure of its devotion.

President Wilson writes thus of this campaign: "I trust that the year will not only see the goal reached by saving 100,000 lives of infants and young children, but that the work may so successfully develop as to set up certain irreducible minimum standards for the health, education and work of the American child."

Today's Housewife has for years devoted itself to the "setting up of certain irreducible minimum standards for the health, education and work of the American child." It is proud of the service that it has been its privilege to render in the past in this worthiest of all tasks—and it welcomes the enlarged opportunity made possible by this concentrated national recognition of the special importance of child welfare at this time.

Dr. Josephine Baker, who has charge of the "Care of the Child" Department in Today's Housewife, has been chosen as the Chairman of the New York City Committee on Health in this nation-wide campaign, a subcommittee of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense.

Today's Housewife—the magazine of American homemaking—is serving the women of America today as it has never served them before, because the needs of women for a magazine of this type have never been so great as they are right now. In the confidence of three-quarters of a million American mothers and homemakers, it has an extraordinary opportunity to serve, and to serve well, in this hour of great national stress. That this opportunity is fully appreciated is best indicated by what the magazine has already done, is doing, and is to continue to do in shaping and guiding the woman's share in our great common task—winning the war.

BULK OF OUR WHEAT MUST GO TO ALLIES

Of 42,000,000 Bushels a Month Two-thirds Are Needed Abroad.

RATION HERE MUST BE CUT

The enormous demand that the Allies are making on the wheat production of this country was discussed at length at a conference held at the Federal Food Board Headquarters yesterday of the fifty-three Deputy Food Arministrators of this State. They were summoned by Federal Food Administrator Arthur Williams to consider the most available methods of enforcing wheat conservation measures. Mr. Hoover was represented by E. C. Walcott, Dr. Alonzo Taylor, and Richard Whitney of the United States Food Administration.

Mr. Walcott and Dr. Taylor dwelt especially on the urgent need of reducing the country's wheat consumption to about one-third of normal. Mr. Walcott made his address at the morning session at the Federal Food Board Headquarters, while Dr. Taylor spoke at the afternoon session, which was held at the Union League Club, where Federal Food Administrator Williams gave the assembled deputies a "Hooverized" luncheon.

Describing conditions of famine in Europe, caused by the war, Mr. Walcott pointed out that about 4,750,000 persons have died of starvation there since the war began, while about 4,250,000 were killed by fighting.

"At the end of February," he said, "Lord Rhondda cabled for 25,000,000 bushels of wheat a month for the next three months. In addition we had to send 10,000,000 bushels to Cuba and 15,000,000 bushels to Belgium in the same period. In all 105,000,000 bushels had to go out in March, April, and May. Lord Rhondda stated at that time, 'You will pardon my bluntness, but unless you can send this wheat, we will not be responsible for the Allies continuing in this war.' As fast as Mr. Hoover could write the answer he replied, 'We ship your wheat on time.' And we are almost up to this schedule today."

Mr. Walcott said that our normal consumption for the six months commencing in March and ending in September, over a period of three years, amounted to 42,000,000 bushels of wheat per month. In order to live up to the demands of the Allies, he added, it would be necessary to ship two-thirds of that amount, leaving less than 15,000,000 bushels a month for home consumption. To achieve the necessary saving, the well-to-do, according to Mr. Walcott, would have to make a material reduction in their wheat consumption, supplanting their wheat and cereal dishes with other dishes. The poor, he said, cannot be expected to save wheat, because wheat is the cheapest of the nutritional foods, but the well-to-do can and should take to other foods.

Dr. Taylor surprised the administrators when the statement that despite conservation measures, the consumption of flour in this country during the last year has been about normal. A similar condition was found to be true for the first year of the war in France and England.

"Lord Rhondda told me," he said, "that the upper 20 per cent. of the population in England had saved 20 per cent. of its normal supply of wheat, but that the total consumption had been 5 per cent. above normal. The condition was a natural one. A nation at work consumes more wheat, and the masses working harder than ever naturally consumed more of that food product which was cheapest. It is no reflection, for instonce, upon patriotism to say that the garment workers of New York who have had no raise in wages, have consumed more wheat this year than in previous years. They need more food to sustain them, and bread is the cheapest. On the other hand, working men who have had their wages increased also eat more because more work is expected of them."

After consultation with Chief Magistrate McAdoo, the Federal Food Board announced yesterday that it had summoned seven grocery dealers for violation of the label law of the State Food Commission. The hearings in these cases will be held at 3 P. M. today. The label requires grocers to post on their goods labels indicating the exact grade, quality, and price of those goods.

1,275 VESSELS ADDED TO NAVY DURING WAR

CHICAGO, April 10.—Since April 6, 1917, the day on which war was declared against Germany, there have been added to the United States Navy 1,275 vessels, aggregating 1,055,116 tons, Secretary of the Navy Daniels said tonight in an address before the National Chamber of Commerce.

"In addition to the battle cruisers, dreadnoughts, and scout cruisers authorized, some building and others deferred temporarily for the more pressing construction of ships to transport soldiers, munitions, and supplies," he said. "We are now building of what is technically known as smaller craft, from 65 to 1,215 tons each, 794 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 420,217.

"We are working day and night in Government and in private plants on the construction of more American destroyers than were in all the allied navies when the war began, and every possible facility is being created to construct additional fighting craft which can be effective against the submarine warfare of assassination and murder.

TO ATTACK TRANSPORTS?

Washington Thinks Reduced Ship Sinkings Has a Meaning.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The increased troop movement to France to aid the Allies makes interest here in the submarine question acute. There were indications two weeks ago that the Germans had coupled with the assault in Picardy an effort to increase their inroads upon allied shipping.

Officials here believed that with the situation on the battlefront as Mr. Lloyd George pictured it, German submarine efforts would be concentrated against troopships to prevent American reinforcements from reaching the battlefront in sufficient numbers to influence the outcome this Spring and Summer.

While there has been no information to indicate any increased menace to the transports, the decided falling off in the sinkings of British ships last week and this week was interpreted in some quarters to mean the diverting of the U-boats to the transport lines.

CALL ON BUSINESS FOR UNITED ACTION

HAMLIN SOUNDS WARNING

Reserve Board Member Says War Will Not Be Won Until All Our Strength Is In Europe.

CHICAGO, April 10.—Speaking to more than 1,500 delegates, assembled at the sixth annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Charles S. Hamlin of the Federal Reserve Board said there would be no victory in the world war until the entire strength of the United States Army and Navy had been transferred to Europe. Mr. Hamlin spoke in the place of W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, who was unable to attend the meeting.

"Don't let talk of a premature peace mislead you," said Mr. Hamlin. "The only peace we shall see will be dictated in a large part by General Pershing and the United States Army."

The speaker dwelt upon German atrocities as a prime reason why American business men should see the necessity of exerting their full energies to aiding in the prosecution of the war.

"Some people say there were atrocities practiced by the Indians against the whites," he said, "but, compared to the Kaiser, Sitting Bull was a philanthropist."

The estimated cost of the war, Mr. Hamlin said, has been placed at $18,000,000,000 annually, but has run slightly below that figure for the first year. At present there are in the Federal Reserve Banks $1,809,000,000 in gold, which, according to Mr. Hamlin, is more than the gold reserve of the banks of Italy, Spain, France, and England combined.

Hurley Sends Greetings.

Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board, who was scheduled to speak, notified the chamber that an important conference would prevent his appearance. His place on the program was filled by Charles Piez, General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

Mr. Hurley telegraphed: "I was anxious to address your organization, as I believe you represent that class of business men who possess that broad patriotic wisdom of our country's affairs so necessary during these trying times. The Shipping Board feels that every member of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States takes a personal interest in its work."

Lucius Teter, President of the Chicago Association of Commerce, said in an address at the opening of the meeting:

"As all people under the flag come to understand more clearly their necessary part in the conflict of this hour, whether it be at the front, in the factory, on the farm, or in the home, we shall join as a nation, in the motto, dear to Chicagoans—'I will'—the 'I will' of national aspiration, victory, and an enduring peace."

R. Goodwyn Rhett of Charleston, S. C., President of the chamber, said that the business man has furnished the leadership for the building of the American Nation.

"There was a time," said Mr. Rhett, "when industry and trade were looked upon as soulless, and those who engaged in them money makers only. But the business man has in fact created a new nobility for the common welfare. It is not enough for the business man to turn his genius to the saving of America from the menace of German militarism. He must play an important part in preserving America from the foes that threaten her from within. To me the highest mission of the chamber is to put the soul into business, to transform the cold clay into the sentiment—to 'transfuse into a marble statue the warm blood of the human being that will make its face to shine, its eyes to glow, its hands to clasp, its heart to beat, and its soul to vision.'"

Speed Up the Ships.

A challenge to American business men that they, collectively and individually, bestir themselves to speed up shipbuilding, was the keynote of an address delivered by Edward A. Filene, Chairman of the War Shipping Committee of the chamber.

"There are enough men to talk about the blame for delay due to causes which the Government can correct," said Mr. Filene. "Let us emphasize the blame that rests upon communities and the business men of these communities—and try to find a way to help. The problem of a contented and effective working force in our shipyards will not be solved finally by rhetorical preachments to the shipworkers at their luncheon hour, but by the definite solution of the discouraging problems of bad housing, inadequate transportation and inadequate amusements.

"What can the business men of the United States do in these fields? The answer is two-fold.

"First, we can see to it that our local business organizations in every community where ships or ship parts are being turned out shall make it their first business to organize themselves into an effective aid to shipbuilding.

"Second, we can help organize the community behind the shipbuilding in as definite a manner as we can organize the business forces back of shipbuilding."

The Committee on Industrial Relations also pointed out in its report to the chamber that the difficulties of obtaining war materials had been increased by questions of wages, of hours, and conditions of labor, of transportation for workers, and of housing, each of them of the highest importance to the maintenance of vital production.

"Industrial relations are the very hinge-joint of the war in which we are engaged," said the report.

Dwelling upon the part which labor plays in war, and the consequent necessity for the establishment of amicable relations between employers and employes, and proper working conditions, the committee said that in two years the number of men at work in our shipbuilding plants has increased by at least 300 per cent and that 3,500 factories are to-day at work upon articles which go into the construction of ships. The constructive plans suggested by the committee to insure industrial peace and efficiency included agreements that there should be no cessation of production, that these agreements be supported and enforced by Executive authority, that there should be control of causes leading to unrest and provision for conclusive arbitral decisions regarding differences arising in spite of preventive measures.

ARCHBISHOP OF YORK SURE OF AMERICA

GIVES PRAISE TO FRANCE

Happy in Reunion of America and Britain—Believes Future Wars Will Be Prevented.

The Archbishop of York, who spoke last night at the Waldorf at a dinner of the Church Club which was attended by Bishops from every part of the United States, who are in session here, said that he would take back to England the word that America would not fail the Allies, that there was to be little delay in putting America's forces into the field, and that the country was, with increasing rapidity, taking up the burden of its part in the war.

"If there has been some dissatisfaction and discontent with the quickness with which the United States has been putting its forces into the war, I would say to you, 'Do not fret. Do not worry. You will not be too late, if you come into the war with all your strength and every part of the country united in the war.'"

The Archbishop said that his tour of the country in the last month had shown him that a vast change was taking place in the spirit of the people, and that the reality was being fully appreciated by all Americans that the French and British had been fighting the battle of all free men and that the war was being fought to save the principles of liberty for which America was founded.

If the French and British armies should be struck back temporarily in the great battles now in progress, he said, they would continue to fight with the greater confidence because of the knowledge that this great and strong nation, with unstrained resources, was standing by their side and was, with the least possible delay, pouring its whole strength into the conflict, in which he predicted that they would in the end be victorious.

In spite of the solemnity of the great crisis facing the world at present, he said, one great encouraging fact was to be distinctly seen, and that was that a deep-rooted and unalterable affection had sprung up again, after clouds and misunderstandings of generations, between the two great English-speaking nations of the world.

"Two great nations," he said, "which God has so plainly joined together, let no man hereafter, on any pretext, attempt to put asunder."

He was cheered when he said: "In any discussion of this subject, I would not leave out the people of the great Republic of France."

He predicted that these three nations, after the present war, would by their union prevent future wars.

Nicholas Murray Butler was applauded when he said that the greatness of France and England in the present war was to be found in their "faith." Bishop Greer and William Edmund Curtis, President of the Church Club, made speeches. Nine hundred persons attended the dinner.

NEW ANTI-DRAFT MOVE.

Columbia Student, Whom Camp Upton Rejected, Active Again.

Henry MacDonald, Director of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense, announced last night that the Department of Justice had been informed that Charles Francis Phillips, the former Columbia student who was discharged from Camp Upton on the ground that he had been convicted of crime, had issued a call for a convention of "The Young Democracy," on May 4 and 5 at the Mountain House, Valhalla, N. Y.

Inspector T. F. Pitch, of the Post Office Department, according to Mr. MacDonald, declared the pamphlet in which the call appears was unmailable, and orders were issued to seize all correspondence and literature coming from the organization, whose headquarters are at 32 Union Square.

Phillips said last night it had been sent to 3,000 persons. It said in part:

And now there is being planned for us among other things the discipline of universal military training. We are to be made the energy and the maze of a Prussian military machine. Our lives are to be given out of control for good and all. Shall we submit to this as we have submitted to everything in the past? Shall we surrender ourselves without even a protest?

We propose to inaugurate a change!

The signers include Phillips and his wife.

Phillips said that his new organization would be extended all over the country, would run candidates for office and issue pamphlets. He did not tell who would provide the funds. The names of Socialist Assemblyman Louis Waldman, Truman S. Potter of the University of Chicago, and Edmund C. Evans, a Quaker, of Philadelphia had been added to the members of his organizing committee since the circular was issued.

The matter was brought to the attention of the Mayor's Committee by Frank J. Welton, proprietor of the Mohegan Inn, Lake Mohegan, N. Y.

Phillips, Owen Cattell, and Eleanor Wilson Parker, whom he later married, were tried last Summer before Judge Mayer in the Federal District Court on charges of advising resistance against the draft. Phillips and Cattell were fined $500 each and sentenced to prison for one day, thereby losing their citizenship. Miss Parker was acquitted.

TEA FOR RED CROSS NURSES

Mrs. Speyer Entertains 250 Waiting to Go to Front.

Two hundred and fifty Red Cross nurses waiting to go to the front were entertained at tea by Mrs. James Speyer at her home, 1,058 Fifth Avenue, yesterday afternoon.

There were three units, No. 83, from Albany, headed by Miss Mattie Washburn; No. 20, from Pennsylvania, Miss Irwin commanding, and the Shell Shock Division 177, under Miss Adele Poston, with forty-six nurses and five reconstruction aids picked from all over the country. Miss Poston was the Director of the School of Nursing at Bloomingdale. Among those who assisted in receiving were Miss Amy Hilliard and Miss Anna Maxwell, Mrs. George B. McClellan, Miss Florence Johnson, and Mrs. Alice Fischer Harcourt.

"I do not think there will be need of a draft," said Miss Poston. "The Red Cross is instituting a drive for nurses, and when the doctors realize the need they will release nurses from cases that are not serious. There are many semi-invalids who have nurses travel with them; they are what we call 'luxury' nurses. The places of these could be taken by less well trained attendants or the members of the invalids' own families and allow the thoroughly trained nurse to go into war service."

Nurses billeted at Ellis Island will attend a concert tonight arranged by Mrs. George J. Gould. Rose Coghlan, Frank Reichor, Beverly Sitgreaves, Mignon d'Valery, Professor Kreigher, and Glen Howell will entertain.

ROMAN LEGION ORGANIZED.

Men of Italian Origin Move to Combat German Propaganda.

American citizens born in Italy or descended from Italian parents, met at the Italian Chamber of Commerce, 208 Broadway, yesterday afternoon and organized the Roman Legion of America to combat German propaganda, which is being spread to the detriment of Italy and her efforts in the war. The following telegram was sent to President Wilson last night:

We American citizens of Italian origin, believing in America as our country and in the great institutions, the unshakable traditions and the principles she typifies—liberty, justice, equality, and humanity—declare unequivocally our unswerving loyalty and patriotic devotion to America and to her cause in the present world struggle for democracy, which is also the cause of Italy and her allies. We pledge our lives, our possessions, and our all to the President of the United States and to the Government.

Dr. Antonio Stella was elected President of the Roman Legion and Mgr. Alfonso Arcese and Stephano Miele, Vice Presidents. At a dinner given by the organization at the McAlpin last night, Justice John J. Freschi addressed the members on the objects of the legion.

The Season's Only New Car

Hudson Super-Six Touring Limousine

THIS new model answers every requirement of the owner who drives and who on occasion wishes to use it as a formal limousine.

But more important than the exclusiveness of its body design is its independence from the present scarcity of expert automobile repairmen.

The best mechanics out of every important repair shop have been enlisted to look after the motors of the army. They are needed to keep the aeroplanes, motor trucks, automobiles and ambulances in running order.

Those who are left don't know so much about automobiles. Every shop is at lower efficiency. Cars which call for constant service attention simply won't be as satisfactory as they have been. There will be no one to give them the needed attention.

The car that satisfies this year must be so built that it will stand upon its own design. Its construction as turned out by its builder must be final.

It is not a time when the buyer can safely rely upon the mechanical organization of the local dealer, however efficient and willing he has been in the past.

50,000 Super-Sixes Prove Their Reliability

No one doubts the position of the Hudson Super-Six. There are 50,000 in service. For two years it has far outsold any other fine car. Motorists are familiar with the character and number of its records made in every field that calls for super-endurance. These tests did reveal limits, though far beyond those of the average car. They enabled Hudson engineers to extend the endurance of this new series.

The report from thousands of earlier cars, as made by private owners, also helped in showing what was necessary to make the Super-Six what we believe the present series to be—the most enduring car in the world.

construction and are expected to be finished in June next.

"The aggregate capacity of the schools now in operation is something over 3,000 cadets. One thousand nine hundred and twenty-six have thus far been graduated from this primary training course and commissioned as reserve military aviators. Very few of these have received their advanced training in this country.

"In addition to the above, the Signal Corps, acting upon the invitation of the several Entente Governments, dispatched some 1,200 cadets to England, France, and Italy last year, who were to receive primary and advanced training in aviation schools of those countries. The experience of a great many of these men has been most unfortunate in that at some of the schools a very serious delay has occurred in providing them with the training planes, which it was expected would be manufactured in foreign factories in sufficient numbers. As a result, several hundred of the American cadets have been practically idle and have made no progress. About 450 of them are reported as having completed the primary training, after long delay.

"The Signal Corps is giving serious consideration to the advisability of bringing the remainder back to the United States to be trained. With the exception of this severe disappointment, the primary training of our aviators, according to the testimony of the aviation officials, appears to be progressing favorably. The health record of the schools is excellent and the fatalities arising from aviation accidents, while always distressing, appear to be less frequent than in the schools of our allies, according to the testimony of the Chief Signal Officer.

TRAINING PLANES.

"For some time after the inception of the work the output of primary training planes in this country for use in our schools gave ground for grave concern. In recent weeks, however, the output has been greatly increased and there seems to be no doubt of the Signal Corps having an amply sufficient number in the future. On April 1, 1918, 2,458 primary training planes had been completed. The planes are of two standard types developed for the purpose and are equipped with Curtiss and Hall-Scott motors, respectively. The advanced training planes are being turned out in accordance with the schedule and estimates laid down at the inception of their manufacture. In advanced training planes four types are being made, the total number up to date manufactured being 342. In these planes three types of engines will be used, of which 965 have been completed. These include Gnome, Le Rhone, and Hispano Suiza, all of foreign design but American manufacture. The Liberty Motor is not suitable for use in these planes.

THE LIBERTY MOTOR.

"It is apparent from the evidence that the twelve-cylinder Liberty motor is just emerging from the development or experimental stage. Since the original design and the setting up of the first completed motor in July, 1917, a large number of changes have been found necessary, many of them causing delay in reaching quantity production. Within the last two months changes of considerable importance have been made which, it is hoped, will make the motor serviceable for combat planes of the defensive type and for bombing and observation planes. It is not designed for and cannot be used in the swift, single-seater fighting machine. A few of the motors are being flown in appropriate machines. These reports, as recited to the committee, indicate that with the latest changes the motor will be satisfactory for the character of work expected of it and that it bids fair to hold its own with foreign motors of similar power, weight, and purpose. For the campaign of 1919 the Liberty motor must undoubtedly be further improved in order to keep up with the evolution constantly going on along the front. The motor as now manufactured is of the direct-driven type, a type which has limits of usefulness in heavy machines.

"Steps are being taken in the designing of a geared drive, in order that the usefulness of the motor may be further extended and further improvements attained. Twenty-two thousand five hundred Liberty motors have been ordered, 122 have been completed for the army, and 142 for the navy. Four have been shipped overseas. Some of those already delivered are being altered to overcome the defects ascertained during the last few weeks. It is understood, however, that these alterations will consume but a very short time. The production of Liberty motors to date is, of course, gravely disappointing.

"The testimony shows that experts of the highest reputation and experience have, since last July, repeatedly warned the officials of our Government that the perfecting of a newly designed motor must inevitably involve many months of painstaking experiment, accompanied by many setbacks and disappointments. In spite of the unanimous testimony of motor experts along this line, the Government officials having the manufacture of the Liberty motor in charge have made the mistake of leading the public and the allied nations to the belief that many thousands of these motors would be completed in the Spring of 1918. Information of this sort, not borne out by the facts, has been injurious, and its constant dissemination the committee regards as misleading and detrimental to our cause.

COMBAT PLANES.

"The production of combat planes in the United States for use in actual warfare has thus far been a substantial failure and constitutes a most serious disappointment in our war preparations. We had no design of our own; neither did we adopt any one of the European designs until months after we entered the war. Much time was consumed in discussion as to types. Innumerable changes of designs and specifications of the types finally decided upon have cost further delay. In all, five types at one time or another, have been adopted. Two of them have been abandoned after the expenditure of much time and money. The three remaining types still left upon our program are now in the course of manufacture. Of these the largest and most powerful is the Handley-Page heavy bombing machine, designed to carry as many as six men, eight machine guns, and a heavy load of bombs, and to be driven by two Liberty motors. The history of the negotiations for the adoption and manufacture of this plane afford a remarkable illustration of procrastination and indecision, too long to recite. Suffice it to say that the designs and specifications of this plane, which had been used with marked success by the British and placed in production by that Government, were offered to our officials as early as May, 1917. The testimony before your committee shows that the Signal Corps finally decided upon the manufacture of a number of sets of parts of this machine about Jan. 1, 1918. Eventually the finished and tested parts will be shipped to England, where they are to be finally assembled in factories now being prepared for this work. Officials of the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps testify that they do not expect the completion of the first set of parts in this country before the month of June, 1918.

"Another type of combat plane, known as the De Haviland, is included in our program. This machine habitually carries two men, four machine guns, a moderate load of bombs and other apparatus and is driven by one Liberty motor. Fifteen have been completed; one has been shipped to France; the remaining fourteen have been very recently completed in this country. Some of these have been tested, propelled by a Liberty engine, and appear to have given satisfaction. The third type upon the program is known as the Bristol fighter. This machine is lighter and faster than the De Haviland. Its speed is expected to be in the neighborhood of 125 miles per hour. It is what is known as a reconnoissance machine. Another term which might be properly applied to it is defensive fighter.

"It carries two men, four machine guns, and is driven by one Liberty motor. The decision to make this type was reached on Nov. 7, 1917. The manufacturers completed the first of these machines during the week ended March 30, 1918. The machine was tested once during that week with a Liberty motor, and, according to the testimony of the aviation officials, met its preliminary test successfully. This machine, a few hours after its flight, caught fire while standing upon the aviation ground and was entirely destroyed. The officials of the Signal Corps assured the committee that another machine would soon be finished by the manufacturer, and that if it met the tests satisfactorily quantity production might be expected within a reasonable period.

"The testimony as to this machine was given on April 2, 1918. This completes the list of machines now under manufacture and constitutes a correct statement of the situation in this country as of April 1, 1918. In addition to the American production of engines and airplanes as herein set forth, considerable orders for combat airplanes and engines were last Summer placed with European manufacturers by General Pershing, and we have furnished quantities of material and numbers of mechanics to aid in their construction.

"Your committee has full information as to the number and quantity of machines and engines ordered here and abroad, but does not feel justified in stating the number in this public report. The facts contained in this report are drawn from the testimony of the Chief Signal Officer, General Squier; Colonel Deeds, and Mr. Potter, the Chief of the Equipment Division of the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, and are confirmed from other sources, official and otherwise.

"Your committee, being devoid of technical knowledge of motors and airplanes, does not undertake to point out in detail engineering and manufacturing errors which may have been committed and which in part may account for this gravely disappointing situation. Your committee, however, is convinced that much of the delay in producing completed combat airplanes is due to ignorance of the art and to failure to organize the effort in such a way as to centralize authority and bring about quick decision. A certain aloofness in dealing with persons possessing information based upon experience, an apparent intention of confining the actual production to a restricted number of concerns, and a failure of the officials in charge of the work to grasp the situation in a broader way and seize upon the best approved foreign engines and planes and proceed promptly to build as many as possible for the campaign of 1918 has contributed to the failure. It is greatly to be regretted that the statements of Government officials have misrepresented the progress of the aviation program. This has misled the public, and your committee, cognizant of the facts, has, in the performance of its duty, made this report to the Senate.

"Your committee believes that production of aircraft should be controlled by one executive officer, appointed by the President and responsible to him. He should be assisted by a corps of the best aircraft engineers and designers possible to obtain, both European and American. The matter of production should be taken out of the hands of the Signal Corps entirely, and no man who has any near or remote interest in a company manufacturing airplanes or engines should be permitted to act as adviser or be in authority.

"While we are developing American aircraft and American engines we should temporarily, at least, procure an abundant supply of approved types of aircraft and engines of European design.

"Further, it seems to the committee that every encouragement should be given to the development of aircraft, and that any action which retards progress, such as trust agreements or the prevention of those developing machines from flying, under proper restrictions, should be removed.

"The committee also believes it to be its duty to point out that thus far no broad plan looking to future development has been laid down by the authorities. Warfare in the air is still in its infancy, and it is inevitable that rapid changes will take place in both engines and planes. It is essential to our success that those in charge of the American aviation development shall be constantly looking ahead and devising plans for a continued expansion of the program, as well as the development of new types of engines and planes."

The Minority Report.

The minority report, after speaking of the magnitude of the work ahead of the Government in supplying aircraft, dwells upon the causes for delay, and declares that in the face of unparalleled obstacles the record of the Signal Corps is one of which every American may be proud.

The minority report follows:

"We do not believe that the report of the majority of the Senate Military Affairs Committee on the aviation situation shows a proper estimate of what is being accomplished or that it is sufficiently complete to give an accurate impression of the facts.

"Soon after the war began the Signal Corps arranged with the French Government for the making of 8,100 combat planes at a total cost of $127,000,000, the plants to be produced as rapidly as American fliers could be trained to operate them. As the American aero squadrons reach the front ready for duty, battle planes are being supplied them under this arrangement. To aid in this foreign manufacture of planes for American fliers, the Signal Corps has shipped to France 11,000 tons of various materials and has sent 7,000 mechanics to release for French factories making planes for our American fliers the French workers on motor transports. The Signal Corps then arranged for the making of about 11,500 combat planes in the United States, the term combat plane being here used to embrace all kinds of planes, both offensive and defensive, except training planes. The Curtiss Aeroplane Corporation, the Dayton Wright Aeroplane Company, the Fisher Body Company, the Standard Aero Corporation, the Grand Rapids Aeroplane Company, W. H. Mullen & Co., and about nineteen other companies throughout the country were engaged for the production either of completed machines or of spare parts.

"Let it be said here that when the war began the United States Government had purchased altogether less than 250 airplanes in its entire history, and that of the few airplane factories in this country probably not one was making over five or six a month. It is hardly possible to grasp the magnitude of the task the factories contracting to make the 11,500 combat planes found before them. New plants had to be constructed, old ones fundamentally changed. Special tools for the making of the planes had to be devised and manufactured, and mechanics had to be trained to make the tools and also to make the planes after the tools had been completed. An airplane, especially the battle airplane, is one of the most highly technical, delicate, and complicated machines known to man. In no other form of machinery is absolute and painstaking accuracy in the smallest details more indispensable. It has about 4,000 parts, and requires from 1,800 to 2,800 different drawings in the preparation for its manufacture—almost as many drawings as are required for a battleship. Every part is strained to the utmost while the machine is in the air, and the slightest break almost anywhere means instant disaster.

Perfection Necessary to Safety.

"When it is remembered how often the wheels of railway trains, due to hot boxes, &c., parts of railway and automobile engines, tires on automobiles, &c., go wrong, necessitating immediate repair, and that any similar breakdown in an airplane would mean as a rule death to its occupants, some part of the responsibility and difficulty involved in making a finished plane may be understood.

"Remember further that every fighting plane must have machine guns, synchronizing devices, special telescope airplane sights, wireless apparatus, cameras of special type, electric heating devices for clothing, oxygen apparatus, speed indicators, special gauges, barometers, compasses, altometers, &c. To say that this complicated equipment is in steady and adequate production, and that the factories are now about in shape for quantity production of combat planes, and have about completed the foundation for what is as difficult and responsible a task as has ever fallen to the hand and brain of man, is to state the truth and at the same time to recite an achievement unparalleled in all history for so short a time.

"Remember again that when these combat planes were contracted for the only known lubricating oil adapted to their delicate parts was an oil made from the castor bean. There were not enough beans in this country to make anywhere near the amount of oil required. Neither were there enough seeds with which to grow the needed quantity of beans. The Signal Corps had to search the globe for seeds, and finally secured a shipload from distant India. Then the corps had to contract for the planting of the seeds in this country, and has succeeded in having about 110,000 acres planted. It is now claimed that a form of petroleum has been developed that will answer the same purpose. This, however, is still in the experimental stage, while the oil from the castor bean is known to be entirely adequate and reliable.

"Remember again that the cloth used in the wings of the airplanes of all types had to be treated with acetone, a liquid substance which makes the cloth as fireproof as possible, and also strengthens it for the immense strain to which it is subjected in the air. The Signal Corps is having this acetone distilled from wood under its own supervision on an enormous scale, and at a cost of about $20,000,000.

"The corps has had to find a substitute for Irish linen, as the material for wing cloths on training planes, and has succeeded in adapting a certain form of long staple cotton to this need.

"Coming to the training plane, it may well be said that the completion of 3,500 to date and the fact that they are now on quantity production, practically according to program, constitute a remarkable achievement when the nature of the task is fairly weighed. The training plane is simpler than the battle-plane, and for that reason could be produced sooner, but the making of the training planes on a quantity scale is in itself a task of unprecedented difficulty and magnitude.

"Let it be remembered further that the Signal Corps had to put regiments of workers in the forests to find the spruce needed in the making of airplanes. The spruce trees are found among fir and other trees, and of each 100 feet cut only about 15 per cent. is found good enough for airplane construction. Approximately 1,000,000,000 feet of lumber had to be cut and inspected and tested before the necessary 100,000,000 feet of spruce could be obtained.

"Propellers are made from mahogany and other highly durable woods, and three or four must be made for each machine. This mahogany comes from the tropics, and whether and when it can be brought to seaport depends on tropical rains, which swell the rivers so as to permit transportation.

Defends Liberty Motor.

"Let us now consider the Liberty motor. The Liberty motor could not fairly have been called an experimental and untried device. It represented a combination of what had been demonstrated to be best in all motor construction. The Signal Corps, with its trained and skilled engineers, understood that a foreign motor could not be adapted to American manufacture and turned out in sufficient quantity in anywhere near the time in which the Liberty motor could be produced. Foreign motors are based on the metric system of measurements, &c. American practice and American manufacture are not adapted to this system. All parts made under the metric system must be converted into inches and fractions of inches under our system. The foreign motor is so extensively the result of hand work that it is with great difficulty adapted to the machine work that dominates American factories.

"Furthermore, the Liberty motor is capable of one hundred more horsepower than any foreign motor except a few of one single type, the Rolls-Royce. The Liberty motor develops 400-horse power ordinarily and is capable of 465. The foreign limit, with the one exception above mentioned, is 300.

"The Liberty motor has become so well established that the British Government has asked for a large number. Sir William Weir, head of British aircraft production, stated recently in London that he considered the Liberty engine the greatest single factor in the world's aviation program; that it was the most important single thing in the air program of England in 1918.

"As soon as the Liberty motor had been designed, arrangements were made for the manufacture of a very large number before the close of 1918. The exact figures are withheld for military reasons. Henry Ford agreed to produce a substantial number of the total, the Packard another portion, the Lincoln Motor Company, Nordyke & Marmon, General Motors, and the Trego Company still another portion. These companies were notified to get ready last Summer and the actual contracts were signed later. They have spent the intervening time preparing plants, tools, and workmen for this unprecedented work and are now on the eve of quantity production. The very names of those manufacturers are sufficient assurance that they would not take a day longer than necessary to lay proper and efficient foundations.

"The foreign planes which were accepted by the Signal Corps, known as light battle planes or single seaters, for which the Liberty motor is too heavy in horse power, were none of those offered by foreign concerns that came to America soon after the war began to sell their wares, except the Hanly-Paige, and that was not the plane which the Hanly-Paige people first offered our Government on this side. Indeed, when the Hanly-Paige plane was first offered here it was untried and undeveloped, and had not been accepted by the British Government. The Signal Corps sent a commission abroad to study foreign planes on the ground, and accepted certain ones only after careful and personal study.

"On the whole the record of the Signal Corps is one of which every American can be justly proud. In the face of unparalleled difficulty it is accomplishing an unparalleled task with characteristic American energy, capacity, patriotism, and enthusiasm."

It developed today that the Signal Corps last Summer, on assuming control of the aircraft program, at once put into effect a policy of secrecy. Howard Coffin, head of the Aircraft Production Board, who appeared before the Senate Military Affairs Committee in secret session, urged that the public be informed as to the progress of aircraft work; but the Signal Corps declined to acquiesce. Since that time, it is said, the Signal Corps has not only maintained its policy of secrecy toward the public, but has many times refused to give data wanted by the Aircraft Production Board.

PRAGER ASKED MOB TO WRAP BODY IN FLAG

Witness Also Tells the Coroner That Boys of 12 to 16 Helped to Hang Alleged Pro-German.

COLLINSVILLE, Ill., April 10.—A request that his body be wrapped in the American flag formed the last words of Robert B. Prager, hanged here by a mob early last Friday, according to testimony given today before the Coroner's inquest by Joseph Riegel, it was said tonight by persons who were present at the inquiry, which was held behind closed doors. Riegel, according to these persons, admitted he was a leader of the mob.

Riegel said that en route to the scene of the hanging several persons were met in automobiles, and Prager was forced to sing and kiss the flag for them. At the tree members of the mob questioned Prager for twenty minutes regarding his alleged pro-Germanism.

"Somebody tied the rope around Prager's neck," Riegel continued, "and several boys, from 12 to 16 years old, pulled him up. His hands were not tied and he grabbed at the rope. They let him down and we said: 'Now are you going to tell whether anybody is mixed up with you?' We told him we were going to kill him if he did not tell everything.

"All the time the crowd kept getting more excited and angry. Some one shouted: 'Well, if he won't come in with anything, string him up.' A boy produced a handkerchief and his hands were tied. I might have been the man who did the thing. I was drunk and because I had been in the army the crowd made me the big man in the affair and I guess I was sort of puffed up over that.

"Just as we were about to string him up Prager said: 'All right, boys! Go ahead and kill me, but wrap me in the flag when you bury me.' Then they pulled the rope."

The inquest was continued tonight in an attempt to conclude it by tomorrow night. No arrests will be made until after the inquest, according to W. E. Trautmann, Assistant Attorney General of Illinois, who is in charge of the proceedings.

PRESS THE HOUSING BILL.

Department Officials Tell Senate Committee of Shelter Deficiency.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—War, Navy, and Labor Department representatives before the Senate Public Buildings Committee today urged speedy passage of the House bill appropriating $50,000,000 for housing workmen at munition and shipbuilding plants and $10,000,000 for housing clerks in Washington.

Rear Admiral H. H. Rousseau said production and repair of naval vessels could be increased from 25 to 100 per cent. by providing housing facilities, particularly at Norfolk, Va., Portsmouth, N. H., Charleston, S. C., Mare Island, Cal., and Puget Sound, Wash.

Secretary of Labor Wilson told the committee that his department had prepared to undertake the housing work.

Major Z. L. Potter of the Army Bureau of Ordnance asserted that the condition in the District of Columbia, unless attended to, would "become a national scandal" and cause "serious derangement of the war program."

Alma Real, Soprano, Heard.

Alma Real, a soprano already known in Mexico, where she has sung with Bonci, appeared as a newcomer at Aeolian Hall yesterday before an audience including many Spanish-speaking compatriots. Opulent of voice, she sang with refinement and restraint in old Italian arias, to which she added popular Mexican songs by Ponce, Bertman, and Braniff, and an encore in dancing "Habanera" rhythm. The singer, amid her flowers, looked like the Howard Chandler Christy girl in a poster of the Liberty Loan, which with other wartime appeals decorated the stage.

Washington Sq. Players' New Bill.

The next program of the Washington Square Players, which will be offered at the Comedy a week from Monday, will include two one-act plays in addition to Oscar Wilde's "Salome," already announced. The other pieces will be Harold Brighouse's "Lonesome Like," played here by the Irish Players several seasons ago, and "Enter the Hero," by Theresa Helburn. "Mrs. Warren's Profession" will be sent on tour.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

A new Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic, it is announced, will be produced on the roof of the New Amsterdam Theatre on the night of Tuesday, April 23. The new show is being written by Gene Buck and Dave Stamper, and the entertainers will include Will Rogers, Lillian Lorraine, Eddie Cantor, Ann Pennington, Frank Carter, Lillian Leitzel, and Savoy and Brennan.

The Shubert Academy of Dramatic and Musical Art is to be established this Summer in the Forty-fourth Street Roof Theatre, and will open in June. Actors and actresses will be trained in the school for places in Shubert productions.

"The Third Party," a farce seen here several seasons ago, is being made into a musical comedy by Harold Atteridge, and will be produced by Al Jolson.

The first New York performance of "You Know Me, Al," a musical show written and played by men of the 27th New York Division, will be given at the Lexington Theatre tonight. The show will be continued for ten days, and the proceeds used to purchase and equip a portable theatre for use behind the lines in France.

CIRCUS INVITES ORPHANS.

Special Performance Will Be Given for Them Next Tuesday.

Following the annual custom of more than fifty years, the management of the Barnum and Bailey circus, now performing at Madison Square Garden, will entertain the orphan and crippled children of New York, at a special performance to be given on next Tuesday morning at ten o'clock. Usually the circus management entertains the orphans at one of the regular afternoon performances, but the special morning performance has been made necessary because of the fact that the advance sale of tickets for all matinées during next week has been very large, therefore limiting the space desired to entertain the orphans.

Superintendents and Matrons of orphan homes and asylums for crippled children in New York City are asked to communicate by letter, at once, with the Secretary, Barnum and Bailey Circus, Madison Square Garden, giving the name of institution and number of orphans in their care, so that reservations may be made and delivered to the different orphan asylums.

"Shanewis" and "Pagliacci" Sung

Charles Cadman's successful American opera, "Shanewis," in a new combination with Italian "Pagliacci," filled the Metropolitan last evening in the last week but one of New York's opera season. With Miss Braslau in the native cast were Mmes. Howard and Sundelius, Messrs. Althouse and Chalmers. Mr. Scotti returned for the first time this year to his famous part in Leoncavallo's prologue, while Mr. Martinelli, Miss Muzio, Messrs. Bada and Laurenti reappeared, and Mr. Moranzoni conducted the double bill.

An Open Letter to District Attorney Swann

Dear Mr. District Attorney:—May we publicly take advantage of this opportunity to convey to you our sincere thanks for the splendid work done by your direction, on the part of the Police Department and your own subordinates, in breaking up the "gangs" of ticket speculators who had become such a public nuisance in front of the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, selling tickets for D. W. Griffith's famous "Hearts of the World"?

These speculators, by devious tricks, had secured certain tickets which they were selling at $3, $4 and even $5 each to the public anxious to see Mr. Griffith's latest achievement.

Owing to the crowds, the speculators worked in comparative safety, despite the efforts of the police to enforce the city ordinance.

When the matter was called to your attention, however, and word came that the District Attorney had ordered this nuisance to the public stopped, the result was instantaneous and amazing.

The moment the "gangs" got wind of the order from your office, they faded away into oblivion.

Today the public can go to the box office of the Forty-fourth Street Theatre without being pestered by these gentry who block the streets.

As managers of Mr. Griffith's "Hearts of the World" and for the public, we desire to publicly thank you and the Police Department for all that you have done in the interests of the public.

THE PREMIER EXPLAINS THE BATTLE.

Mr. LLOYD GEORGE's explanation about the relative number of men in the contending armies comes down to this, that they are about equal, though as the German division is smaller than the British the Germans have more divisions. What he does not explain, but what seems to be fairly conclusive from his statement, is that neither side has any "army of manœuvre," any "reserve army." The reason why this mobile army has not made a counterattack is because it doesn't exist. Otherwise Mr. LLOYD GEORGE would not be reciting with pride the rapidity with which troops were rushed across the Channel to take part in the battle, and there would have been no necessity for brigading American troops with those of the French and British. If the French and British have no reserve army of manœuvre, neither have the Germans, since the forces are equal. The thing has become a gigantic wrestling match, in which every ounce of power is being exerted at every moment and nothing can be held back for strategic uses.

The whole German plan was foreseen by Sir HENRY WILSON as early as the beginning of February, even to calculating the extent of the British retreat. It had as its object, as General WILSON foresaw, the capture of Amiens and the severance of the French from the British forces. That General must have also foreseen, and the War Conference must have reckoned as certain, the advantage which the Germans would gain from the division of the allied command; yet it was not possible to take the steps necessary to unify the command and centre it in General FOCH until the catastrophe had actually happened. So strong is the aversion of soldiers to give up their military identity and subordinate their nationalism. Yet the plan for putting FOCH in command, as soon as the catastrophe actually happened, must have been made, then, in January or February, and he must have begun making his preparations at that time; so that it was not a case of his being suddenly raised into an unexpected command at the moment of battle, as was the case with MEADE before Gettysburg.

Americans may take just pride in the fact that President WILSON pointed the way, that his cheerful and instant response to the request that American soldiers should temporarily merge their identity has deprived British irreconcilables of any excuse for holding out against this necessary measure. "I shall beat them, for they have no united command," said the Kaiser to his brother-in-law CONSTANTINE. The Allies knew of his calculation, but he probably did not know of the steps they had taken to nullify it. They knew that a reverse was necessary to prepare the way for those steps, and they stoically made their arrangements to suffer that reverse. It is evident that the appointment of General FOCH is, both in the German and in the British mind, the equivalent of a lost battle for Germany.

The British Premier's speech makes it clear that this battle is as close to Armageddon as it is possible to get; that the two contestants are engaged in a death grapple, and that all that has gone before, in Russia for instance, has been mere preliminary play. Equally matched, and with no tricks in reserve, no cards up their sleeves, the battle is simply a brutal test of strength. It calls for every ounce of it. This is so well recognized in England that the Ministry has apparently been blamed for wasting armies in Mesopotamia and Palestine; but the Premier answers that triumphantly. "In Mesopotamia "there is only one white division in "all, and in Egypt and Palestine together there are only two white divisions, and the rest are either Indians or mixed with a very small "proportion of British troops." With these forces the British have destroyed two Turkish armies and kept the Turks out of the battle line in France.

The world will be eager to hear more of Brigadier General CAREY, who improvised a force of "engineers, laborers, signalers, and anybody else "who could hold a rifle" and held the gap the Germans had opened on the way to Amiens. But for him and his scratch corps, the Premier broadly intimates, the Germans might have got to Paris. We shall know more of CAREY before long, and of this astounding fight of his; and it appears certain that it will be years before the world ceases to hear of him.

THE PEOPLE AND THE BONDS.

The people whom it is most necessary to interest in the Liberty bonds are those who wonder why the Government is borrowing by billions if it is so rich as everybody says. One simple patriot who subscribed asked when he had to make his interest payments. He had grasped the idea of his patriotic duty, and was ready to do it. He had not appreciated that he was buying something which would pay him both interest and principal. There are not many so simple as that, but there are millions who do not understand the necessity of help from people with little incomes. They think it is the duty of the rich, and particularly of the banks.

It is peculiarly the duty of those who are neither rich nor poor to keep the loan out of the banks. There are not enough of the rich to furnish the Government with the immense sums it must have for the war. The nation's biggest reliance is the moderately well off and the humble wage-earners. They do not fully appreciate how great is the share they get. The largest total of incomes by any group of families is received by the group with the smallest family earnings. There are half as many families in the next group with average income of $850. They would pay the Government, if they paid proportionately, almost thrice as much as those whose incomes are but little smaller, so far and fast do their modest wages raise them in the scale. Families averaging only $1,000 income receive more than the families in any other group.

This calculation by a leading trust company puts the expectations of the Government from families on the basis of proportions in both bonds and taxes at $7,250,000,000, and on corporations at $2,750,000,000. The share of the banks is put at half the share of families. Yet most of the comment is on the basis of the banks doing most of the work. The cost of the war could not be raised by the banks and corporations. The loan would be a failure if it were raised by them. That would make this a rich man's war. It is a war for the people's liberties, and the loan will be successful in proportion that the people appreciate their relation to it.

CONSCRIPTION FOR IRELAND.

"If Irish liberty were at stake," says Mr. JOHN DILLON, leader of the Irish Nationalists in Parliament, "I would not hesitate to support" conscription. Irish liberty is at stake. In December, 1914, the Irish Party declared that "this is a war for the "defense of the sacred rights and "liberties of small nations," "a war "for the high ideals of human gov-"ernment and international rela-"tions." Ireland would be "false to "her history, and to every consid-"eration of honor, good faith, and "self-interest, did she not bear her "share in its burdens and its sac-"rifices." She is not doing it.

What has happened since? Why should Ireland refuse to bear her share of the burdens of the war? The growth of the Sinn Fein movement, compromised fatally in the war by the treason of CASEMENT and his associates; the Easter rebellion, the new brood of "martyrs," the lawless proceedings of the Sinn Fein under leaders who seek for Ireland an impossible independence under German tutelage—these things are in every memory. The Sinn Fein insults to our sailors in Ireland are but too well known. Against England exists a romantic hatred, careless of the present British democracy, of the great economic ameliorations caused by land and other legislation for Ireland in GLADSTONE's time and since. That feeling, only too intelligible historically, however unjustifiable of late years, cannot cover hatred of the United States and the other allies shown by some of the misguided Sinn Feiners. Those cheerers for the Kaiser are simply pro-Germans. A movement for "independence" under German protection and patronage could end, if successful, only in the submission of Ireland to Germany, the loss of that liberty which Ireland enjoys at present.

Mr. DEVLIN and the other Irish Nationalists who side with Sinn Fein in opposing conscription forget that conscription has been found necessary for the preservation of liberty by the United States and by Canada. For the preservation of Irish liberty also it is necessary. Ah, but conscription in the United States and Canada of Irishmen is "not by the English," cries an Irish Member. Liberty itself is not worth fighting for if "the English" have a hand in the fight!

We cannot believe that the mass of Irishmen of Ireland, however much blinded and bedeviled by politics, are so blind or so base as to sacrifice to an ancient grudge the liberty of Ireland, it may be of all free nations. And if any Irishman in Ireland labors under the impression that Irish resistance to conscription will find favor in this country, where there are so many of Irish descent, where among all sorts of Americans there has been sympathy for Home Rule, extreme is his delusion. Americans of whatever strain are resolute to beat Germany. They have only abhorrence for those who in Ireland or elsewhere are playing Germany's game. Americans of many origins are in France, fighting by the side of Frenchmen, Englishmen, Scotchmen, Welshmen, of those noble Irishmen who have not been false to liberty or slow to fight for it in its utmost peril. In this country there will be no tolerance of opposition to conscription in Ireland. Why should Ireland escape the duty which England and Canada have done and are doing so well, which the United States has entered upon and will not turn back from?

It is time for men who talk so well about liberty to take their part in defending it. If they won't fight for "the English," as the best Irishmen have been fighting, let them fight for Belgium, for France, for the United States. Fighting in the British Army, they will be fighting for liberty everywhere, for Serbia as well as for Ireland. How can any genuine Irishman bear to be a slacker?

MR. CREEL.

Actual or inferential responsibility for the doings and utterances of Mr. GEORGE CREEL cannot any longer, consistently with the public welfare and comfort, be borne by the Administration. It is the general impression that when he speaks he speaks for the President, an impression he has not very energetically sought to dispel. His declaration that he should be proud to his dying day "that there was no rush "of preparation in this country prior "to the day the President went before "Congress" could not have been made at a more inopportune time, but that is not the worst of it. It is an avowal never to be made by anybody at any time. It has aroused public indignation to a degree which is only faintly reflected by the denunciation directed against it in Congress.

The usefulness of the Bureau of Public Information has never been satisfactorily demonstrated, but the demonstration that, if the bureau is to be continued, it should have a new head is complete and conclusive.

NATIONAL AND PAROCHIAL.

General GOETHALS, opposing at Albany on Monday the Sage-Welsh bill to prevent the building of a bridge with piers in the Hudson River, opposite Castleton, told the Governor that midstream piers wouldn't obstruct navigation; that to build a bridge without piers would take 18,000 more tons of steel, enough to build "50,000 tons, dead weight, of ocean steamships"; that the Port of New York couldn't handle all the war traffic; that the Government was going to spend $25,000,000 on the Port of Boston before the end of this year and build great reserve storehouses at Schenectady. The bridge at Castleton should be built at once, so that there should be no delay of shipments from the West to Boston and New York.

Governor WHITMAN on Tuesday signed the Sage-Welsh bill. What is so pitiful a trifle as the expedition of war shipments compared with the momentous, the sacred interests of Albany Beadledom? Opposition to the pier bridge came from Albany, the Sage-Welsh bill was intended to kill the project for which General GOETHALS argued; it was an Albany measure. Albany ought to be grateful to the Governor.

THE SIGNAL CORPS FOUND WANTING.

The report of the Senate Military Affairs Committee on aircraft production lays stress upon the unfitness of the Signal Corps as at present organized to have technical charge of the aviation program. General GEORGE O. SQUIER is the head of the corps. The committee recommends that aircraft production be turned over to "one executive officer appointed by the President and responsible to him," who shall surround himself with "the "best aircraft engineers, both Euro-"pean and American." Whatever usefulness the Liberty motor may have in the future, production so far is pronounced a disappointment. The reason has become well known. Constant tinkering with it by the specialists of the Signal Corps in an endeavor to make it a triumph of American design, when dispatch was the crying need of the war emergency, has delayed manufacture at the plants selected by the Production Board. A very serious indictment of misguided official zeal is made in the following paragraph of the report:

> The Government officers having the manufacture of the Liberty motor in charge have made the mistake of leading the public and the allied nations to the belief many thousands of these motors would be completed in the Spring of 1918. Information of this sort, not borne out by the facts, has been injurious, and its constant dissemination the committee regards as misleading and detrimental to our cause.

Time lost in planning combat machines that were never produced is declared to be "a most serious disappointment in our war preparations." The Signal Corps could have supplied the army with the British Handley-Page machine, just as the Ordnance Department could have armed the American troops in France with the useful Lewis machine gun, but there was once more a straining after the ideal, and effort was obstructed by the usual red tape. And two other combat planes of foreign make are said to have been available. But at the end of our first year of war not a single American-built fighting machine was flying on the western front.

The responsibility of the Signal Corps for bedeviling and delaying the aviation programme is so palpable, and has been so costly, that the President cannot fail to give the most serious consideration to the recommendation of Senator CHAMBERLAIN and his associates. No time, not a day, should be lost in placing aircraft production in the hands of a man of executive ability and driving power.

ANOTHER FIGHT FOR THE SEA.

A glance at the map of the western front shows that the base for the strong German assault on the line from La Bassée Canal to Armentières and still further north, almost as far as Comines, is Lille. From that great industrial city railroads radiate in every direction, affording a system for concentrating troops and transporting them to the front much superior to the facilities at the disposal of the British. Therein lies a danger to Marshal HAIG's forces on that part of the line he has been defending. The German tactics in the offensive that was launched on March 21 call for assaults on a wide front that, if successful, will prepare the way for strategy on a major scale. Flattening out a salient is only an incident in the execution of the German plans. While trench warfare continued, the reduction of a salient was a notable achievement.

That the Germans should have succeeded in their drive north of Lens in pressing the British and a Portuguese contingent back is disquieting until the failure of the Germans in the south—that is to say, from La Fère to Arras—to attain Amiens or to open the road to Paris is weighed in the balance. The line of the Allies in the southern part of the field has been pushed back mile after mile, but nowhere has a gap been made through which mobile troops could be poured in great strength. The attack in the north signifies that the Germans know that they are far behind their schedule elsewhere, with final success in grave doubt. It is obvious that in this new venture they are pursuing the same tactics as they have employed in the south, their immediate object being to smash the enemy line on a wide front, and demoralize and disorganize the British Army, isolating one part of it from the other; the ultimate German object being, in this case, to get to the sea and break up the defensive campaign in the north altogether.

With their superior transportation and their resultant greater strength in men and guns, the Germans, starting their assault in thick weather, had no serious difficulty in forcing the irregular British line back at several points between the La Bassée Canal and Armentières. Two "towns," north and south of the old fighting ground of Neuve Chapelle—respectively, Richebourg-St. Vaast and Laventie—were taken, and at Fauquissart and Cardonnerie Farm the British had to give ground. At crossings on the River Lawe and Lys the fighting was especially heavy, and the Lys south of Armentières was crossed in several places. But it is to be borne in mind that every foot of that region is familiar to the defenders, and that in the Fall of 1914 it was the scene of the fight for the sea, which the Germans lost, although they were in greatly superior force.

A heavy attack in the neighborhood of Comines, which is only five miles from Ypres of glorious memory for the British, indicates that the Germans have begun another fight for the sea. But how changed are the conditions on the British side. In October, 1914, they were often reduced to desperate straits for want of reinforcements, divisions dwindling to skeletons of brigades and regiments to little more than corporals' guards; and the British became grimly familiar with failing ammunition. It has been said that "whole battalions virtually disappeared." Nevertheless, remnants held on and saved the day. The first Ypres was a positive British victory. The Kaiser, waiting at Roulers for news of an overwhelming triumph, was doomed to disappointment.

In the present battle there is a disparity of numbers in favor of the Germans, but it is probably not so great as it was in 1914. At the first Ypres there were sometimes eight Germans to every British soldier on the field, and often four or five. And the British today are said to have abundant ammunition and superiority in the air. They will undoubtedly take heavy toll of the massed Germans, and the presumption is that the British will retire to prepared positions for tactical reasons rather than from absolute necessity. The counterstroke at Givenchy, which netted them 750 prisoners, is of good omen.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Silences Filled with Fears. There is constant complaint on both sides of the water with respect to the mail service to and from the men in our expeditionary force. The complaint, as yet, is rather in the tone of grief than of anger—a fact explicable only by a general realization that the Government's transportation facilities are strained close to the breaking point by tasks even more important than that of carrying letters for our soldiers and sailors abroad. There is, however, a feeling that the mail service should be better than it is, and that it could be made so without interfering seriously, or even at all, with the performance of tasks to which everything else must be subordinated.

If it were shown or believed that the choice is between moving mail and getting men into the field, equipped and supplied, there would be patriotic resignation, even to a complete abandonment, till the crisis is over, of all efforts to keep up communication of what might be called the personal sort. But that has not been shown and it is not believed. On the contrary, the all but universal impression is that the military authorities do not sufficiently appreciate the benefits that would follow both here and on the other side of the ocean if the present anxieties were lightened by a fairly frequent exchange of information as to individual conditions and fortunes.

If space and tonnage lack for the transportation of letters, let the size of the communications be reduced. Far better than nothing would be the weekly receipt of a printed card such as is used by both the British and the French—a card on which nothing is written except the signature, the other news being conveyed by crossing out printed lines till only those are left that tell the few vital facts that everybody feels that he or she must know about the absent one to make life tolerable. Such cards would not be satisfactory, but they would be vastly better than nothing, and an enormous number of them would occupy little space.

Anything is better than silence, continuing week after week, and equally harmful to morale here and in France.

A Serious Mistake Was Made. It will be with a regret deeply tinged with indignation that all sane and reasonably enlightened people will hear of the decision by the heads of the Red Cross not to use for animal experimentation—often and almost always incorrectly called "vivisection"—the money hitherto appropriated by them for that purpose. The decision may mean avoiding the loss of a few contributions to the Red Cross funds, but it also means the triumph of vicious ignorance over common sense, and it will encourage to further efforts the members of the most detestable and not the least dangerous group of men and women to be found in the United States.

The campaign of the anti-vivisectionists is waged, now as always, with no other weapons than those of calumny and falsehood. They deliberately and persistently make the most abominable accusations against men who have done and are doing an enormous amount of successful work to mitigate human suffering and to save human life. Incidentally, these same workers are conferring like advantages on innumerable domestic animals, but let that pass. The immediate issue is that interference with animal experimentation just now decreases the safety of the men in our army and navy, makes impossible, so far as the interference is effective, the conquest of several terrible diseases to which the fighters for liberty are still exposed, and sets up the absurd claims of fanatic degenerates against the well-demonstrated truths of medical science.

And the Red Cross cautiously says that it does not take sides for or against "vivisection"! Such caution is reprehensible—is utterly unworthy of that great and beneficent organization. It should take sides, standing for right and against wrong. The immediate profit of doing anything else or less will be dearly bought in future loss of both money and respect. Red Cross money, in the amount that was proposed, could not possibly have been better invested than in the establishment of a biological laboratory near the scene of war for the study of the maladies of soldiers which this sort of research has not yet conquered. It was weak, and worse than weak, for the Red Cross to heed the hysterical shrieks and the monstrous charges of venality and murder that came from a few people whom it strains charity to call deluded or insane.

The Times War Service.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with pleasure your recent one-page advertisement calling attention to your excellent war news service, and being a faithful reader of your paper I, of course, indorse every word of it. The way you have "covered" the war has been truly magnificent. In quality and extent the information you have furnished your readers has been unrivaled. Praise be to you for your accomplishment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to congratulate THE TIMES for having such excellent war correspondents as Philip Gibbs and Charles H. Grasty—one giving such a vivid description of the military battlefront and the other of the political battleline. I note that Mr. Gibbs predicted the great German drive in your issue of Feb. 20, while it was only a few weeks ago that Washington correspondents reported that there would be no German offensive.

The Poly-Partisan Woman's Party.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that the Woman Suffrage Party has reformed and changed its mind, according to one of the great leaders, after giving its members "time to study and think" and conducting "a campaign of education for citizenship" among the ex-superior sex, why on earth do "our trained women" insist that "the organization is still non-partisan"? Just a little more time "to study and think" will convince even the suffrage leaders that they have no longer a "non-partisan" party, but a poly-partisan party. If they do not believe it, Noah Webster has been sadly neglected in the "great campaign of education" and another change of mind is in order.

English the Language of America.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Lane's wonderfully pertinent and patriotic speech has given me an idea which I should like to suggest to your readors. Why not organize a "Melting Pot" Society, whose slogan would be "English is the language of America. Loyal citizens will speak it"? Have cards printed with these words and the Stars and Stripes on them, and have them distributed by members of the society to all the stores with which they deal.

I have been surprised at the amount of German spoken both by proprietors and customers in the various stores.

THE RUSSIAN CHURCH.

Why It Shares the Fate of the Russian State.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Regarding the collapse of the Russian Church, concerning which communion there appeared in your columns of recent date an interesting historical résumé, it may be stated as an axiom that no national church can outlive its peculiarly national inspiration.

It has been the chief characteristic of both the Orthodox and other Eastern Churches that they have been since the very beginnings of Christianity in Turkey proper, Syria, Greece, Rumania, and the Slavonic countries, nationally particularistic. In each community where Orthodox Christianity has established itself, we find the Church, not as the mere vehicle of religious expression, but as the especial and chief exponent of nationalism. This is true in all the non-Protestant communities in the Turkish Empire, and is especially true in Bulgaria, Serbia, and Rumania, as well as in Russia. So well is this principle recognized in the East that the Turkish word "millet" means both "religion" and "nationality." The entire politico-ecclesiastical basis of Eastern Christianity is embodied in this undeniable fact, which really constitutes the most important point of difference between the great Eastern and Western Christian communions. The non-Protestant West, with the incomparable organization of Rome at its head, has always insisted on extra-national centralization, while the whole Eastern conception of Church government has been based upon intra-nationalism, with the State as the inseparable protector of the Church, and the Church as an integral part of the State. So, when the Russian people, to quote President Wilson, "by their own act" destroyed their political integrity, the fall of the Church as a factor was inevitable and should excite no surprise.

Most unfortunately, since the disappearance of religious influence, that devotion and piety, for which the Russians were justly celebrated, seem to have found another outlet, degenerating in many quarters into the "worship of mankind," with the pernicious gospel of license instead of liberty, and encroachment instead of equality.

What the ultimate destiny of Russian Orthodoxy as an organized body is to be, no man can predict at this moment, but, judging by past history, it may safely be prophesied that its fate will be that of the future Russian State, or of the component parts, into which future Russia may resolve herself.

Changes in the Russian Language.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article in today's TIMES on the elimination, by the Bolsheviki, of three letters from the Russian alphabet directs attention to a fiasco by the Batiushka ex-Czar himself in changing the name of the Russian capital, of which we have a flourishing namesake city in our own Virginia, to that of Petrograd. The latter is a compound word, "Petro-grad," neither portion of which is Russian. Petro stands for Peter. In the ancient Slaviansko Church language "grad" means town. This combination was probably inspired by the unlamented monk Rasputin. In the real Russian language "grad" means hailstone, consequently Petrograd means "Hails of Peter." The Batiushka meant to name the town Petrogorod, signifying "The City of Peter." It is to be expected, as soon as Russia shall free herself from hailstones of interior and exterior kind, which is certain to come with and by the aid of the United States of America, the name of her capital will be Glavnyagorod, which means Capital City, or most important city. This is typical of the nomenclature of Russian cities: Novgorod, New City; Starogorod, Old City, &c.

Roads for the Nation's Business.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We want to go on record as having protested strongly against the bill introduced in our New York Legislature by one of the Senators, at the request of the State Highway Department, relative to barring of State roads to army trucks. In our opinion the passage of this bill would do more to help the Hun than the sinking of a dozen or more transports. At the present time, when New York is laboring under the tremendous handicap caused by lack of transportation facilities and when every engineer in the country is trying his best to solve the transportation problem, legislation of this sort is to be completely condemned. Why didn't our worthy Senator bar the roads to passenger vehicles? Why use the roads at all, for that matter, for the passage of any sort of vehicle results in some wear? The President has asked for universal co-operation, and we are sure that he included our own State in his request. Are we to meet his request by refusing the use of our roads in the nation's business?

Women Telling Their Ages.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This is a time of change, as well as good sap weather. While admitting the well-favored run of editorial humor in today's piece, "Time and Woman," I must gently insist on its prehistoricity. The "petticoated registrant" glories in her age. Yesterday the one ahead of me cheerfully gave hers as 29, the one before her as 40. I noticed a 70, a 82, and a 57 in the record, and stated my own 41 to the twinkling clerks only with a sense of comfort in having reached the philosophic years. The woman watchers said afterward that not a woman balked at the "Chinese inquisition."

They did say, however, that the "men folks" in this polling place were still laughing over the tale of two men voters, sober, domestic citizens of no uncertain years, who refused to give their ages at the last election.

YOUTH.

Of sun-gilded days spun of youth all aglow,
A shimmering tinsel of tremulous moonbeams—
As glittering bright as the sun on the snow.
No flaw in its sheen of the finest-spun fabric,
It shone with the splendor of hopes and glad dreams,
Its fairy strands tinkled with light-hearted laughter—

The north wind blew clear and my dream web lay tangled,
In briar and weed at the falling of night;
The gold and the silver were tarnished and tawdry,
Tears blotted the foolish young dreams from my sight.
Then I looked at the ruin of youth without wonder,
For wisdom had come and illusions were gone,
And smiling through tears at the pitiful wreckage,
I held wide my arms to a wondrous new dawn.

FAVOR DAIRYMEN'S LEAGUE.

Assembly Passes Bill to Exempt It from Conspiracy Section of Penal Law.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 10.—The Louis M. Martin bill, designed to exempt the State Dairymen's League from the conspiracy section of the Penal law, passed the Assembly this afternoon, 79 to 53. The opponents of the bill declared it is an effort to break down the Donnelly anti-trust law. It prescribes that contracts or combinations made by farmers and dairymen's associations or their officers are not conspiracies.

An echo of the numerous fights this session to obtain the farmers' votes manifested itself in the debate on the bill. Assemblyman Duke, Jr., of Allegany asserted that the bill was an effort to "get the farmer vote," while McCue of New York offered an amendment "that no candidate for Governor be named until his name is approved by the Dairymen's League and that any conspiracy in that direction shall not be unlawful." The amendment was not accepted by the introducer. Several opponents of the measure declared it was introduced to find a way out for the six officials of the Dairymen's League indicted in New York City for violation of the anti-trust law.

The Slater bill, prohibiting the use in public schools of any textbook containing seditious matter, was sent to the Governor. It creates a commission, to consist of the State Education Commissioner and two persons to be designated by the State Board of Regents, who will examine all textbooks for unlawful matter. Prohibited books in use in the schools may be continued until Sept. 1.

Assemblyman Soule's bill, extending the time for employment of women in restaurants from 10 P. M. to 1 A. M. in all first and second class cities, was defeated, 107 to 26.

Majority Leader Brown's literacy test, providing for a proposed constitutional amendment, was adopted. After Jan. 1, 1920, no person shall become entitled to vote unless able to read and write English under its terms.

$56,076,000 IN WAR TAXES.

February Receipts Bring the Total Since July 1 to $251,890,000.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—War taxes took from the pockets of the American people $56,076,000 in February, or $251,890,000 in the eight months since last July 1. These figures, reported today by the Internal Revenue Bureau, are the tax increases for those periods over the same periods of the year previous, and represent substantially the result of heavier war levies.

Total internal revenue collections in February were $89,130,000, and since July 1, 1917, were $549,962,000. This is only one-seventh of the $3,400,000,000 total expected from tax sources, mainly income and excess profits taxes, before next July 1.

Freight tax collections of $4,625,000, representing 3 per cent. of freight payments, indicate that $57,812,500 worth of hauling business was done by the railroads. Most of this probably was for January, as reports on collections were several weeks late.

The month's passenger fare bill of the nation apparently was $35,820,000, for aggregate collections from the 8 per cent. tax on the cost of passenger tickets were $4,465,000. Pullman fares paid by travelers must have been $4,468,000, since the 10 per cent. tax brought in $446,800. Express taxes, 5 per cent. of the payment, were $767,000, indicating that the amount of business done was $15,355,000. From the tax of 5 cents on each telephone or telegraph message of 15 cents or more, $1,063,000 was raised, indicating that 21,275,000 messages were dispatched.

The nation's theatre and amusement bill for the month appears to be $37,083,000, as $3,708,000 was collected from the 10 per cent. tax. It also is indicated that the American people spend $3,659,000 for club dues every month, and pay 10 per cent. of this as Government tax.

DISCUSS TEXTILE CONTROL.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Suggestions that the Government either take over for distribution or fix prices on all cotton and woolen goods were discussed at President Wilson's weekly conference today with the heads of Government warmaking agencies.

Heavy demands of the army and navy, it was said, will take such a large percentage of the output of mills that probably there will not be enough goods to supply all the requirements of the civilian population. Officials fear that if some measures are not taken to hold prices down and to assure equitable distribution many persons will be unable to obtain a proper amount of clothing.

Representatives of the cotton-manufacturing industry met here today with the Price-Fixing Committee of the War Industries Board to take up the stabilization of cotton goods prices. Heavy Government purchases have disorganized the market, and manufacturers themselves asked for the conference.

NO DINNER TO PROF. NEARING

No dinner was given to Professor Scott Nearing, now under indictment by the Federal Grand Jury, as had been announced for the Central Opera House, Sixty-seventh Street, near Third Avenue, last night. Not a single friend of Professor Nearing put in an appearance.

A squad of police, which was at the hall as early as 6 o'clock, dwindled to the proportion of a single uniformed patrolman an hour later. The men on the police detail were surprised to learn from Rudolph Kutner, manager of the hall, that President Max Verschleiser of the Central Opera House Corporation had been notified on Tuesday afternoon that the luncheon was off after plans looking to providing 500 guests were well advanced.

Elizabeth Freeman of 138 West Thirteenth Street, a prominent suffragist, who had charge of the distribution of the tickets, said the dinner had been postponed because it had been considered inadvisable to hold it at this time.

When the Board of Inebriety met yesterday at its offices, 300 Mulberry Street, it became known that Mayor Hylan had reappointed William J. Donovan as the permanent Secretary.

Sylvan Levy, whose appointment was announced seven weeks ago, was elected President of the board.

Dr. John Dorning, head of St. Francis' Hospital, Bronx, and the Rev. J. J. Hughes of the Paulist Fathers, who had offered their resignations, it was announced had been reappointed by the Mayor.

GIVES PREFERENCE TO WAR INDUSTRIES

Revised Coal and Transportation Priority List Issued by Baruch War Board.

PLAN IS TO BE EXTENDED

Will Apply to Raw Materials and Other Supplies, and Additional Industries May Be Included.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The War Industries Board, of which Bernard M. Baruch is Chairman, announced today that industries contributing directly to the war needs of the nation and its allies would have preference in the delivery of coal and coke. The Railroad and Fuel Administrations were notified that their facilities must be used as directed in carrying out the program. The effect of the regulations is to provide first for essential industries and treat the nonessential on the basis of the country's needs and the amount of the surplus coal which can be safely spared. A statement issued tonight said:

"The Priorities Board has adopted Preference List No. 1 for the guidance of all Governmental agencies in the supply and distribution, by rail or water, of coal and coke. While the list speaks for itself, it is proper to say that the board has not undertaken to classify any industry as nonessential or at this time to limit the quantity of fuel which any particular industry or plant shall receive.

"The board has, however, listed certain industries whose operation is of exceptional importance, measured by the extent of their direct or indirect contribution either toward winning the war or toward promoting the national welfare, and these industries will be accorded preferential treatment by the Fuel Administration in the distribution of coal and coke and also in the transportation of such coal and coke by the railroads.

"The same plan will be followed in according preferential treatment to war industries and plants in the transportation of raw materials and supplies required by them in their manufacturing operations, so that they may not be delayed or hampered in complying with priority orders issued against them governing their products.

"Preference List No. 1 is not complete in itself, but it will be noted that provision is made for certifying additional classes of industries and also individual plants whose operations are necessary as a war measure. In determining what industries or plants are entitled to be certified, two factors will control:

"1.—The relative urgency of the uses or purposes for which the product of the plant is utilized.

"2.—The per cent. of the product of the plant utilized in war work, direct or indirect, or work of exceptional or national importance. No plant a very substantial per cent. of whose product is not of exceptional importance can be accorded preferential treatment."

The preference list was prepared after consultation with the Fuel Administrator, the Director General of Railroads, the Chairman of the Shipping Board, and other officials. In effect it is a revision and extension of priority lists prepared by the Fuel Administrator.

Work on the airplane and shipping program is protected, along with the principal industries essential to the equipment and maintenance of the army and navy and the production of foodstuffs. No distinction is made as to the relative importance of the industries listed, and questions of this nature will be determined from time to time by the Requirements Division of the War Industries Board and the various departments involved. Mr. Baruch's verdict will be final in all of the rulings made, subject only to revision by President Wilson.

"In pursuance of a resolution unanimously adopted by the Priorities Board at a meeting held April 6, 1918, the following preference list of classes of industries whose operation as a war measure is of exceptional importance is promulgated and published for the guidance of all agencies of the United States Government in the supply and distribution of coal and coke and in the supply of transportation by rail and water for the movement of coal and coke to said industries.

"The Priorities Commissioner shall, under the direction of and with the approval of the Priorities Board, certify additional classes of industries and also certify individual plants whose operation as a war measure is of exceptional importance, which industries and plants, when so certified, shall be automatically included in this preference list, which shall be amended or revised from time to time by action of the Priorities Board to meet changing conditions.

"No distinction is made between any of the industries or plants which are or may be included in this preference list, and no significance should attach to the order in which the industries or plants appear in the list.

BOARD MAY CHOOSE SCHOOL HEAD SOON

TWO CANDIDATES IN LEAD

Associate Superintendents Shallow and Ettinger Called Most Available Candidates.

The members of the Board of Education, sitting as a Committee of the Whole, will begin next Monday afternoon to consider the question of the selection of a City Superintendent of Schools to succeed William H. Maxwell, who recently resigned. This will be the first conference of the board on the vacancy to be filled.

A canvass of the situation disclosed yesterday that at present the most available candidates for the office were Edward B. Shallow and William Ettinger, Associate Superintendents. Both men were consulted by Mayor Hylan following his election concerning the best methods of carrying out the Mayor's pre-election pledge of abolishing the Gary system. Dr. Shallow, after visiting Gary, Ind., returned to this city a strong antagonist of the plan, and Dr. Ettinger has been interested in a duplicate school plan which is known as the Ettinger system.

From the information available yesterday it appeared that the Shallow supporters claimed the votes of three of the seven members, and were angling for the additional vote to elect their candidate. A woman member of the board was asked yesterday regarding her attitude toward Dr. Shallow, but she said it substance that she was still undecided.

President Arthur S. Somers said that his mind was not made up and he believed that no member of the board was pledged to any candidate. Both he and Mayor Hylan denied yesterday that there was any truth in the published report that President Somers, because of friction with the Mayor concerning the selection of the City Superintendent, had threatened to resign.

Grover Whalen, Secretary to the Mayor, said there had been absolutely no friction between the Mayor and Mr. Somers.

It is believed that the Mayor's desire not to have any "outside expert" in the office almost eliminates from the race Albert Shiels, Superintendent of Schools in Los Angeles, who was for many years connected with the Department of Education of this city.

President Somers, at the meeting of the Board of Education, said yesterday that there were business firms in this city which had refused the offer to establish continuation classes in their places. The matter would be referred, he said, to the proper authorities, who would doubtless take action in regard to it. He asked Acting City Superintendent Straubenmuller what had been done toward excluding from song books used in the public schools patriotic songs of the enemy. Dr. Straubenmuller replied that the song books contained patriotic songs of the different nations. Orders had been given to the Principals to paste paper over the patriotic songs of Germany and Austria-Hungary, which would permit the use of the other songs in the books.

SENATOR STONE STRICKEN.

Has Paralytic Stroke in Car, but Recovers Somewhat.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Senator William J. Stone of Missouri, who suffered a slight cerebral hemorrhage today, is resting easily and his condition is hopeful, according to a statement made tonight by Dr. W. M. Sprigg, his physician. Senator Stone was stricken while on a street car on his way to his office in the Capitol. Dr. Thomas N. Vincent, who was on the car, noticed his collapse and went to his assistance, remaining with him until the car reached the Capitol. Senator Stone first was taken to his office and later to his home.

Dr. Sprigg confirmed Dr. Vincent's diagnosis that the Senator had suffered a cerebral hemorrhage, which partially paralyzed his left side. He at no time never was unconscious.

Senator Stone is 70 years old. He had a severe attack of pleurisy several years ago from which he never recovered, and lost complete use of his leg or arm and it is thought this, coupled with recent hard work, had much to do in bringing on today's attack. As Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and ranking Democratic member of the Senate Committee on Finance, he has been one of the hardest working members of the Senate.

TIMES WAR REPORTS ARE USED IN SCHOOL

Newark High School Teacher Finds Philip Gibbs Dispatches Stimulate Interest.

THE NEW YORK TIMES dispatches from Philip Gibbs, at the British battle-front, are daily used in the "discussion of current events," a part of the history course in the South Side High School at Newark, whose pupils number between 1,000 and 1,500. Miss Helen G. Stevenson, the instructor, said yesterday that since the great battle began the dispatches had stimulated an especial interest in the students, though for the last two years Mr. Gibbs's correspondence had been employed in the history class, for the information of the students and as a basis for exercises.

Miss Stevenson added that in her opinion [illegible]

¶ The only special dispatches from the battle front that reach America on the day they are written are the vivid narratives of Philip Gibbs, published in THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Emphasis laid latterly on our ability to please men who have been used to paying big money to custom tailors, has produced an almost startling demand for our highest priced suits and overcoats.

This is especially gratifying in view of the bigger preparations made for just this thing. We saw it coming. Now it's here. Everybody to-day wants "the most for his money," as well as "the best."

The same generous preparations for men of modest means as they long ago learned to expect.

STEPS TAKEN TO OBTAIN BASEBALL FRANCHISE FOR BRONX

BIG LEAGUES MUST PASS ON NEW CLUB

Plan to Add the Bronx to International Circuit May Be Opposed by West.

HEMPSTEAD IS SOUNDED

The first step to get permission for establishing an International League baseball club in the Bronx was taken yesterday when a delegation from the Bronx Board of Trade called on President H. N. Hempstead of the Giants and asked him to waive the rights of the New York National League club to the Bronx territory.

Cyrus P. Miller, former Borough President of the Bronx, and now Fuel Administrator, headed the committee of five, which conferred with Mr. Hempstead. The latter explained to the delegation that the question was one which would have to be decided by the National and American Leagues jointly. He advised the committee to send its application for the Bronx territory at once to both leagues. It is expected that action on the request will be taken in a short time.

President Hempstead did not state what his own views on the question were, and said that he did not care to discuss it one way or another, and he also added that if the proposition to establish minor league ball in the Bronx did not go through, he did not want it said that it was blocked to the New York club.

To invade the Bronx territory, it will be necessary to get a majority vote from the club owners of both the National and American Leagues. Outside of New York there is some opposition to the scheme, and baseball men who discussed the plan yesterday doubted whether the necessary vote could be obtained from the two major leagues. It is known, however, that strong influence will be brought to bear to give Bill Gibson and his associates permission to place a club in that section of the city.

One of the strong arguments of the new International League men is that just as soon as the war is over baseball will start to boom, and the Bronx will be an inviting field for a new outlaw league. If the International League is permitted to place a club there, the territory will be protected for organized ball. This argument, however, is not strongly favored by the major leaguers, as they say that there is not immediate danger of another outlaw league of the same proportions as the Federal League.

Gibson and his Bronx associates are enthusiastic about locating in the Bronx. There is a population of 800,000 to draw from in the Bronx alone, besides the nearby places of New Rochelle, Pelham, White Plains, Mount Vernon, and Bronxville. Now that Newark seems backward about getting into the league again, the International League people are more than anxious to line up the Bronx for one of their clubs.

As far as the two local major league clubs are concerned, it is believed that they would have no objection to minor league opposition in the Bronx, but even if they did come out in favor of it, there is a big question whether they could influence the other club owners to their way of thinking.

The International League club owners will get together again in this city on Friday. By that time it is expected that some definite action will have been taken in Albany on the Sunday baseball question.

MARSANS TO JOIN YANKEES.

Cuban Outfielder Changes His Mind About Retiring.

Armando Marsans, the Cuban outfielder who refused to report at the Yankee training camp, has changed his mind and word was received from Havana yesetrday that the player will rejoin the club here at the end of next week. Marsans came to the Yankees last season from St. Louis in trade for Lee Magee.

GIANTS MAKE SERIES EVEN.

McGraw's Men Wield Bats with a Will and Beat Indians.

NEW ORLEANS, April 10.—Effective pitching by Slim Sallee and Fred Anderson and prolific batting by the Giants' hitters gave McGraw's club a 4-to-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians here today. The New York players made eleven hits off the pitching of Coveleski and Lambeth, the upper end of the batting order hitting the ball freely.

Anderson's pitching was a pleasant surprise to McGraw, for, after he relieved Sallee in the sixth, the Indians didn't get a hit. Two of the four hits they made off Sallee came in the fourth inning and resulted in the Indians' only run. The Giants pounded Coveleski hard, and the pitcher, who last season was the shut-out king of the American League, was the victim of nine hits and issued three passes.

RAIN KEEPS YANKS IDLE.

Game with Braves Abandoned—Team Starts Home Tonight.

GREENBORO, N. C., April 10.—The Spring series between the New York Yankees and the Boston Bravas suffered its first interruption today when rain prevented the game scheduled for this city. The players arrived here early this morning while a shower was in progress, and although the weather cleared later in the day a game was impossible owing to the condition of the field. The tourists left here tonight for Petersburg, Va., the last stop before the Yankees go to New York to open their series with the Brooklyn Club.

Frank Baker left the team today for a short vacation at his home in Trappe, Md., and will rejoin the club at Brooklyn later in the week. Pitchers Bunny Hearne and Jack Scott reported to Manager Stallings here. Scott, who was purchased from the Nashville Club, was injured recently in an automobile accident, and will be unable to pitch for some time.

RAIN ENDS DODGERS' TOUR.

Last Game Against Red Sox Canceled—On Way Home.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 10.—The final game of the Brooklyn-Boston Red Sox series was spoiled here today by a heavy rain storm and the Dodgers started back to Brooklyn, where they will play their first home exhibition game against the Yankees on Friday.

Manager Robinson's players will come home in good physical trim and the Brooklyn leader is pleased over their good showing against the Red Sox. The club had run into bad weather for the last few days, which may have a bad effect on the good results which were obtained during the training season at Hot Springs.

OPPOSE SUNDAY BASEBALL.

Assembly Rules Committee Petitioned to Kill Measure.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 10.—The Rules Committee of the Assembly which has within its power to give at least temporary life or instant death to Sunday baseball was petitioned tonight by sixty-seven up-State Republican Assemblymen to administer the death blow. The Senate already has passed the bill which would lawfully sanction the sport on Sunday. There was no indication from the Rules Committee tonight as to its action on the measure.

The petition states that the signers believe it is against the best interests of the State, and "especially of the Republican Party at this time to pass any measure legalizing Sunday baseball."

JAPANESE PLAYER EASY FOR COCHRAN

Welker Cochran reserved apparently the best of his billiard play for the final blocks of his 1,800-point match against Koji Yamada at Maurice Daly's Academy yesterday. In both the afternoon and evening games he was the winner by a wide margin, and with the close of the night game he had won the honors of the event by a total score of 1,800 to 1,164. The son of Nippon was able to present only a feeble game, as compared with Cochran's, and in the afternoon was defeated by a score of 300 to 80, and in the evening by 300 to 172. The contest with Yamada having been finished, Cochran will begin his 1,800-point match with young Jake Schaefer this afternoon.

During the first two days of the match against Yamada, Cochran was struggling along with only mediocre billiards. He could not get into good stroke, try as he would, and his averages were disappointing. Yesterday, on the other hand, Cochran at one bound went from ordinary billiards to the topmost achievements. His afternoon average was 42 6-7, and he just missed making it an even 50. In the evening, he set a mark of 33 3-9. Both of these are commendable, and more nearly reflect the skill for which Cochran is famed than his earlier performances.

Twice, yesterday, he made runs that mounted beyond the hundred mark. In the afternoon, his best cluster came in the second inning, when he made a run of 132. In the evening game, his high run was 189, the highest that was made in the entire match.

Of more interest, however, from the point of view of the close student of billiards was the consistency with which Cochran clicked off the carroms. In the evening game, for instance, he never once fell below a count of double figures, and only three of his runs were less than 20.

Yamada, who has all along been out of stroke, gave for one fleeting moment in the evening a glimpse of what he really can accomplish in balkline billiards. His run of 114 in the second inning was a cluster ably put together, and this was a source of keen gratification to the Japanese, for no one has been more disappointed in his play than himself. He could not, however, hold up to the face of fast billiards which was necessary to make even a close score against Cochran, and his innings, following the run of 114, were tinged with the same sort of ineffectiveness that has marked his play all during the match.

The scores:

Afternoon Game.

Cochran—27 132 16 48 16 10 51. Total, 300; average, 42 6-7; high runs, 132, 51, and 48.

Cochran—55 189 10 14 0 59 0 8 20. Total, 300; average, 33 3-9; high runs, 189, 59, and 53.
Yamada—2 114 4 18 8 0 23 11. Total, 172; average, 21 5-8; high runs, 114 and 23.

TO RUN PREAKNESS MAY 15.

Conflict Is Thereby Avoided with Kentucky Derby.

There will be no conflict between the running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, and the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico. The Derby will be run at the Louisville, Ky., track Saturday, May 11, and the Preakness at Pimlico the following Wednesday, May 15. This arrangement will give owners of thoroughbreds who are looking for the opportunity, a chance to enter their colts for both events. Last year both races were held on the same day, making it necessary for owners to choose between the events.

Kenneth B. Alexander's Escoba and W. S. Kilmer's Sun Briar will be two of the leading horses in the two races. The owners of these thoroughbreds have already engaged traveling facilities for the animals, it is understood.

The Pimlico meeting will close on May 17 and on May 16 the local season will get under way at Jamaica. The decision of the officials of the Maryland Jockey Club, therefore, in selecting May 15 for the Preakness Stakes will give added financial returns, as many local admirers of the thoroughbreds will be able to make the trip to Baltimore for this race and return to New York for the opening of the metropolitan season. About 140 nominations have been received for the Preaknees, including the premier three-year-olds of the country.

BOXING BILL FAILS; IS RECONSIDERED

Senate Will Vote Again on Measure to Permit Fee for Amateur Bouts.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 10.—Senator Robert F. Lawson's bill which would take amateur boxing contests out of the restrictions now imposed by law on prize fighting and permit admission fees to be charged, was defeated in the Senate tonight, 23 to 16.

The vote, however, was reconsidered and the bill will again be pressed for passage probably tomorrow, when five Democrats absent at tonight's session are expected to vote in favor of the measure and enable its passage.

The penal law which makes it a misdemeanor now to have connection in any way with prize fighting, would not apply to amateur bouts of not more than four rounds of three minutes duration with five ounce gloves, under the Lawson bill.

The measure, however, provides that amateur bouts must be sanctioned by the Amateur Athletic Union or the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes.

Nevada Governor's Advice to Willard and Fulton—Reno Bars Bout.

RENO, Nev., April 10.—In reply to a query from Eastern papers asking if Willard and Fulton would be permitted to fight in Reno on July 4, Governor Boyle sent the following reply this morning:

"Willard and Fulton cannot fight in Nevada on July 4 or any other date. They have my unqualified permission, however, to go to France and fight the Boche any time they are ready."

SANTA FE, N. M., April 10.—"The Willard-Fulton fight cannot be held in New Mexico while I am Governor," Governor Lindsey today answered, when asked what he would do if permission to stage the bout in this State, on July 4, were asked of him.

FORDHAM POSTPONES GAME

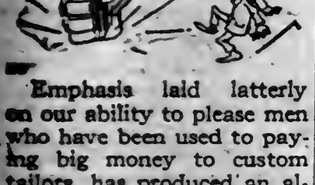
Weather Prevents First Meeting with Columbia Nine.

Because of the inclement weather, which made Fordham Field a mud puddle, the Columbia-Fordham baseball game was postponed yesterday afternoon. It was to have been the first of a three-game series batwsen the old rivals.

It looks now as though Columbia might have no big game this week, for yesterday the Blue and White management received word that Colgate would be unable to meet Coach Conkley's men on South Field Saturday afternoon. So far Columbia has obtained no team to fill the vacancy.

Lewis-Stecher Bout on April 26.

Final arrangements for the wrestling match between Ed (Strangler) Lewis of Lexington, Ky., and Joe Stecher of Nebraska were completed yesterday. The men will meet in a match at Madison Square Garden Friday, April 26. This will mark the third mat meeting between Lewis and Stecher, their previous two matches having ended without a decisive victory for either grappler.



There were so many duties crowded upon W. L. Douglas while he was "bound out" pegging shoes that he did not have much opportunity to play. On one occasion, when he had completed all his tasks and was told to "play awhile," he went out in the yard and dug a hole in the ground—his idea of play was to work at something.

SEES IN WEBB BILL BOON TO EXPORTERS

TO MEET FOREIGN RIVALRY

Proposed Law in President's Hands Expected to Meet After-War Conditions.

The Webb-Pomerene bill permitting export combinations in overseas trade was described yesterday at the monthly luncheon of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, held at the Hotel Biltmore, as putting the United States in a most advantageous position to meet international rivalry after the war, and as an effective means of combating in foreign markets the German cartel system, under which the commercial and financial influence of the empire prospered abroad prior to 1914.

The Webb bill, as it is generally known, is now before President Wilson for his signature, and as the President has been insistent for the passage by Congress of such a measure the bill is expected to become law within the next few days.

George Edward Smith, President of the association, presided at the luncheon, which was attended by 250 members, representing many of the largest manufacturing firms in the country doing an export business.

Gilbert H. Montague, counsel for the association, who had been active in obtaining the enactment of the bill to allow exporters to combine without fear of violating the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws, told of the great benefits to accrue from the right about to be given to shippers to employ "unified tactics" in meeting competition in foreign markets.

Permits Exporters to Combine.

"The bill as we have got it," Mr. Montague said, "represents a really substantial achievement. It will allow two or more exporters to combine for foreign trade without infringing the anti-trust laws. We have got to regard this as an after-the-war measure. At the present time, our manufacturers are in the position of making the goods, throwing down the finished products, and having them grabbed up in a twinkling. Under such circumstances, it can hardly be expected that the manufacturers will reach out for foreign trade. The time, however, will surely come when the need for overseas markets for finished goods will be appreciated, and then we may expect to see the Webb law come to the aid of exporters."

Mr. Montague said the law would be found helpful in certain circumstances, to the larger concerns already engaged in foreign trade, and particularly so to the smaller manufacturers. There was nothing in the bill about to become law, he asserted, to upset usual business methods.

"With all proper safeguards against abuse," Mr. Montague continued, "the Webb-Pomerene bill permits, in foreign markets, a degree of free action to which the American export trade heretofore has been a stranger. Without violation of the anti-trust laws, and without any need, therefore, for the Webb-Pomerene bill, a considerable volume of American export trade has already been attained and will continue to be carried on. Every one has realized, however, that if certain legitimate methods and arrangements, which apparently were forbidden by the anti-trust laws, might be permitted in the American export trade, still greater volume and benefit might be obtained."

Newton Reassures Exporters.

Collector of the Port, Byron R. Newton, who was one of the speakers, said:

"You need have no concern regarding the attitude of Washington toward business. You need have no concern as to the intelligent regard and interest and understanding of our President and those who are in control of affairs in Washington with reference to American business. It was my good fortune to be in Washington through the early stages of the war, and I know something of the task. I know how it was handled, and I know of the solicitude of the President for the business of this country and the way in which it would be affected.

"It seems to me that the course of the manufacturers of this country is very clear now. I have spoken of the new world that is coming. It is going to be a hungry world; a world that needs relief and replenishment, and from our bounty of course, the relief must come very largely at first. So it seems to me that if I were working out a motto for the guidance and policy of foreign trade, I would say, in looking into the future, adopt the Golden Rule, and add to that Yankee enterprise and push, and you will be pretty nearly right, because we must go down to the blue water; we must get back to our former prestige that we held from the War of 1812 until the civil war. The world is going to demand that; the world is coming to us—this new world, and it is just a question as to whether we sluggishly permit them to come after our help, or whether we carry it to them."

O. K. Davis, Secretary of the National Foreign Trade Council, outlined the work of the big foreign trade convention which is to be held in Cincinnati next week.

Women on G. O. P. Committees.

Livingston, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Kings County Republican Committee, announced yesterday amendments to the committee's by-laws providing for equal representation by women with men on Assembly District committees in Brooklyn. It was held to be impossible for women to be represented on the County Committee until after the enrollment at the Fall primaries.

LAND ARMY PRAISED.

President Wilson has expressed his appreciation of the Woman's Land Army of America in a personal letter which was sent out yesterday from its headquarters at 32 Fifth Avenue. It reads:

The White House,
Washington, March 18, 1918.
To the Executive Committee of the Woman's Land Army, Mrs. Henry Wade Rogers, Chairman:

My dear Mrs. Rogers: I am gratified to hear of the plan of the Woman's Land Army to help increase the food supply of our country and the Allies through enrolling active and patriotic young women in self-sustaining groups or units to aid in cultivating crops where the farmers have need of them. I trust that our farmers, like the farmers of Great Britain and Canada, will avail themselves of this aid to the fullest extent practicable, and that the response of our loyal young women to this need, wherever it exists, will be generous and complete.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

GALE DRIVES SHIPS ASHORE IN THE BAY

Sixty-Mile Blow from the East Piles Twelve-Foot Tide Over Piers and Streets.

WARSHIPS DOUBLE ANCHORS

A sixty-mile easterly gale, blowing directly from the sea, pushed a tremendous tide against the whole length of the south shore of Staten Island late yesterday afternoon, submerging piers from four to six feet, inundating streets and business property, and tearing several small vessels from anchorages and throwing them ashore. It was estimated that the property loss would reach $100,000.

The breaking of the storm of wind, rain, snow, and sleet upon the Staten Island barrier moderated its effect on the Narrows and the upper bay.

The first vessel to go aground was the four-masted schooner Ada Brown, with a cargo from Porto Rico, valued at $175,000. Finding it impossible to reach a Manhattan pier during the storm, the Captain of the Ada Brown sought safety by putting out two anchors two miles from Tompkinsville docks. Although the vessel draws twenty feet of water the gale broke her anchorage and carried the schooner broadside to within 200 yards of the shore, where she grounded. Tugs were standing by and the crew were at the pumps, as the schooner was leaking last night, but was thought to be in no danger of going to pieces because of the sandy bottom.

Six other ships, several of them sailers, escaped a similar risk by running to better anchorage off Bay Ridge. Three warships held their ground at Staten Island, but were forced to put out extra anchors. At Tottenville two Pennsylvania coal barges, loaded, went aground. They are being protected by tugs. At Great Kills a fishing schooner and three small boats were thrown upon the beach and wrecked.

All along the waterfront from Simonson Avenue, at Clifton, to Fort Wadsworth, a distance of two miles, the piers were under water, and the ships which had been loading or discharging cargo had to be moved to outside anchorage last night to prevent them pounding to pieces. In Clifton the water was four feet deep in the streets, and boats were used to move about.

Summer hotels and bungalows at South Beach and Midland Beach were damaged severely. The flood swept over the first floors of most of these places. Long stretches of the new concrete walks at both beaches were undermined by the tide.

The storm put the electric lights out of service at Huguenot, New Dorp, and Princes Bay, and the police announced that telegraph and telephone wires were down there and in other towns. At 10 o'clock last night it was said the tide had reached eleven feet above normal high tide, the highest for years.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., April 10.—Row boats were used in Ocean Avenue tonight at high tide. The crest came at 8:30, after which it subsided a little after threatening to inundate several buildings. A small house belonging to Edward Brehm, on the water edge, was undermined. Tonight's blow was the hardest since the memorable storms of the Winter of 1913-14, when the ocean front was all but washed away.

MALONE JOINS HILLQUIT.

Ex-Collector to Assist in Defending Publishers of The Masses.

A statement sent out last night by the National Civil Liberties Bureau of 70 Fifth Avenue said that ex-Collector of the Port Dudley Field Malone would be associated with Morris Hillquit in the defense when the trial of Max Eastman, editor of the suppressed magazine, The Masses, and six of the associate editors, begins next Monday morning before Judge A. N. Hand of the Federal District Court. The defendants are charged with criminal conspiracy in violation of the Espionage act.

Besides Max Eastman those under indictment are Merrill Rogers, business manager of the suppressed magazine; Floyd Dell, managing editor; Arthur Young, cartoonist; Josephine Bell, and John Reed, writers, and H. J. Glintenkamp. Reed and Glintenkamp are not now in this country.

SEND PROTEST TO MAYOR.

The New York City Woman Suffrage Party yesterday asked Mayor Hylan to reconsider any intention he might entertain of abolishing the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the Board of Health. In a letter to the Mayor, Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the organization, said:

It has been reported to the officers of the New York City Women Suffrage Party that in carrying out your commendable program of economy in the administration of the city's affairs, you are thinking of abolishing the Bureau of Child Hygiene of which Dr. S. Josephine Baker is director.

If this is your intention, as Chairman of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party, I would like to express to you the real concern felt by the members of this organization over such a move, which seems inadvisable at this time. The Bureau of Child Hygiene, as a section of the Health Department, seems to us as women, as voting citizens, and as patriots, to be vitally important, since it plays a large part in child conservation. This bureau, the first to be established anywhere, has served as a model for all the large cities of the country, and the reduction of our infant mortality to a point below that of any large city in the world, is due to the excellent work of the bureau.

Dr. Julia Lathrop is urging the establishment of such a bureau in all the cities of the United States as a first step in the national campaign which she is organizing as a war measure for the saving of child life. The Women Suffrage Party therefore believes that the services of Dr. Baker and her bureau are valuable and we urge you to retain both for the benefit of the children in New York City.

The Government Wants Drugs.

Drug and Chemical Markets will say today that Government requirements continue to absorb the bulk of many leading commodities, causing difficulty in filling orders for the trade. Bismuth preparations are higher. Mercury declined $5 a flask. Botanical drugs are firm, particularly barks and berries, but no important price changes have occurred in the last week. Seeds and herbs are in active demand. Celery and sage are higher. Spices showed fractional price gains, and violent fluctuations are predicted during the next few months owing to the unusual conditions governing the market. Essential oils are firm, and many sharp advances have taken place this week.

Ready-to-Wear at Retail.

Though the weather of the last few days has not been particularly favorable for Spring shopping in the local department stores, it is reported that sales are keeping up very well. It seems that dresses, which during the earlier part of the season were not as popular as suits, are coming back strong and some merchants predict that dress sales will shortly be greater than suit sales. The medium-priced garments with lasting qualities are generally preferred. It is said also that the general ready-to-wear trade in the stores so far in April of this year is ahead of the same period a year ago, though in most cases a somewhat different character of merchandise is selling.

No Break in Gray Goods Prices.

The lack of real snap to buying in the local gray goods market is in no way affecting prices, and yesterday they continued rock firm on the bases established on Tuesday. Twenty cents was paid for April-June deliveries of 39-inch 68-72s, while for April-May shipment 39-inch 56-44s and 38½-inch 64-60s were sold at 15¼ and 18¼ cents, respectively. Mills are now asking 17 cents for spot and nearby 38-inch 60-52s, while 60-48s in the same width are being held at 16¼ cents. The selling of 40-inch 2.85-yard sheetings at 31 cents was again the feature of the coarse goods end of the trade, though this time they brought that figure for June and July deliveries. Printcloth prices closed this way:

Gingham Dresses Again?

Gingham dresses for women are said to be gaining a stronger following as the season progresses. Though at first there seemed to be some fear among many buyers that these garments had been pretty well played out last Summer, now it is said that they show real confidence in practically nothing else but gingham for wash dresses. Consequently, many manufacturers in this city have found that buyers will take a normal quantity of ginghams, but, as to other wash fabrics, they are inclined to place only small orders, waiting to see just what the season is going to develop.

Not Worried About Pearl Sales.

There was not much disposition in the local pearl and gem trade yesterday to regard seriously the "story" printed under a Paris date line and telling of the alleged sale of $50,000,000 worth of pearls to German interests by French jewelers, through Swiss agencies. This is what one trade authority said about it: "It would have practically no effect from a trade point of view, even if true. I doubt the report because, about a year ago, gems were being sent out of Germany in order to increase the supply of ready cash, and the chances are that it is still unpatriotic there to spend money for gems of any kind instead of war loans. It was reported on very reliable authority that about a year and a half ago German and Austrian interests were in the Amsterdam market buying large diamonds—too big for use here—as investments, and in order to have taxable assets that could easily be concealed. This could hardly be done with pearls, as they cannot be cut up."

Anticipating Fall Conditions.

Retail merchants who have come to market already for Fall coats and suits for women are not alone in their efforts to anticipate higher prices or any scarcity which may develop later on. It is said that there are quite a few women here and there who have bought heavy Winter coats during the last month or so, which they are putting away to keep for use next Fall and Winter. This practice is, of course, not general among women, but the few cases that have occurred are considered as significant of the widespread feeling that prices will be high and the assortment very limited later on.

Questionnaire to Cloak Trades.

A questionnaire has been sent by the War Department in Washington to manufacturers in the women's-wear industries which is designed to supply detailed information of the capacity of these industries to manufacture uniforms for soldiers. The questionnaire must be filled out by all manufacturers, whether or not they want Government work. Eugene Lezinsky, General Manager of the Cloak, Suit, and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective Association, sent the questionnaire to all association members yesterday with a letter explaining that "this is a war measure, so please give the matter your immediate attention."

Children's Clothes Sought.

Local manufacturers of children's clothes report that the market in this city for the last month has been unusually active. Rompers of many different designs are in great demand, and it is said that the most durable materials, irrespective of price, are wanted. In many quarters it is held that the call for these garments is greater than the supply under present conditions. Consequently, most manufacturers are said to be devoting the greater part of their efforts to the problem of increasing their output rather than to developing new business.

Worried About Deliveries.

Many large local manufacturers of neckwear for women report that they are more concerned just now with the matter of maintaining their deliveries up to schedule than they are with further increasing the amount of orders on their books. Skilled labor in this industry is said not to be any too plentiful, and it is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain certain materials. On top of this, the demand for all sorts of neckwear is said to be unusually large.

Old Shoes Coming in Fast.

About ten days or so ago one of the big local stores notified its patrons, through its advertisements, that a credit of 50 cents toward the purchase of a pair of new shoes would be given for every pair of old shoes brought in, preferably in wearable condition. These shoes, it was said, would be sent to French and Belgian refugees. So far more than 2,000 pairs of old shoes have been brought in by customers, some of whom have come fifty to one hundred miles to "help the good work along," and a shipment of 500 pairs is already headed for Europe. The record individual offering to date was made by a man who brought in twenty-two pairs, some of which had scarcely been worn. One woman brought in eighteen pairs, and accepted credits against them in the purchase of five pairs of new shoes. One interesting feature of the plan is that the new shoes do not necessarily have to be purchased at the time the old ones are brought in. Careful records are kept in the shoe department of the store, and a customer may let several months elapse between the time of his or her contribution and the purchase of the new shoes without losing the fifty-cent credit on the latter.

BUSINESS NOTES.

From April 29, the W. J. Crouch Company, steel exporters of 253 Broadway, will be located in larger and better equipped offices at 88 William Street, corner of Cedar, where they have taken the entire fifteenth floor. The change was made necessary by the rapid expansion of the business.

Dry Goods, a well-known trade paper, will in the future be known as Dry Goods and Apparel, a department devoted to ready-to-wear having been established. Alfred Fantl, the resident buyer, has become associated with this publication and has been elected Vice President of the corporation owning it. Other officers of the corporation are: President, A. C. Jeegerhuber; Secretary, S. E. Ramseyer, and Treasurer, E. A. Paris.

FUR AUCTION PROGRESSES.

The total sales for the first half of the annual Spring auction of raw furs here fell just short of $2,000,000, and this figure would have been exceeded considerably had it been possible yesterday to complete the selling schedule. A fair-sized part of the silver fox collection was held over from the previous day, and this made it impossible to reach the badger and ermine offerings without holding a night session.

Bidding for the silver fox skins put under the hammer was as active as on Tuesday, and some good prices were obtained. The medium-grade skins were again the most sought by buyers. It had been thought that buyers might lose interest in these skins yesterday, the bulk of the collection already having been disposed of, but this proved not to be the case. In fact, the spreading of this selling over two days made quite a hit with the buyers, and it is probable that future lots of "silvers" will be disposed of in this way at the local sale. These skins are the slowest selling of all, being offered in ones and twos unless the quality is not all that it might be.

Mink was the real feature of yesterday's selling, previous trade predictions that this fur was "coming back" being borne out to a considerable extent by the fact that the best one sold to C. G. Gunther's Sons of this city for $10.50. These predictions were further verified by the advances shown by yesterday's prices over those obtained at the January sale. Northern mink was up 15 per cent. and Southwestern mink advanced 25 per cent. The smaller skins were the most actively bid for, due to their marten-like coloring, and some of the small pelts brought nearly as much as the large ones. These skins will be much used in Summer fur garments, and they are well known for their cold-resisting qualities. Among the other buyers of mink were Perlberg & Cooper, Milton Schreiber & Co., N. Sobel, the Ganss Fur Company and Stein & Rosenthal.

Features of the general sale so far include the fact that the larger manufacturers are nearly as active buyers as the dealers, and that there is apparently little speculative buying being done. Both of these things are taken to confirm earlier reports of shortages of the season's most popular furs, as well as that the manufacturers need all the skins they can obtain in order to meet the heavy demands that are being made on them by the retail trade as a result of active consumer buying.

Further subscriptions to Liberty Bonds during the day brought the 3 P. M. total for the fur trade up to $1,919,800. These large purchases were recorded: H. Gaboe & Brother, $25,000; M. Gutschneider, $12,000; A. N. Leventhal, $10,000, and Jacob Babrow & Brother, $8,000. There were several additional subscriptions of $5,000 each.

Today's morning session will begin at 9:30 A. M. After selling the badger and ermine put over from yesterday, Auctioneer J. Gordon Noakes will put these pelts under the hammer: House cats, kolinsky, marmot, American, Australian, Tasmanian and ringtail opossum, marten, Russian sable, squirrel, flying squirrel and beaver.

WOOL TRADING STOPPED.

BOSTON, April 10.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"Chief interest in the wool trade is in the offer to the Government of all the wool on hand or in transit which is unsold. Since April 5 trading has stopped because of this action of the trade. It is felt that the Government will accept the offer. Up to April 5 big sales of wool had been made because of tremendous demand for material for civilian purposes. Lines of domestic wool owned by large holders have been much depleted.

"The woolen goods situation has been upset by the commandeering order of the Government. Little change is expected in the woolen goods market for some time to come. There will be little available production for ordinary distribution.

"During the last week the only change in the cotton goods market has been the comparatively small trading. Altogether the cotton goods market may be characterized as a runaway market. Prices appear to be at or very near the top. The demand for goods is much smaller than it actually appears to be, and existing conditions create high prices."

SEIZE CHLORATE OF POTASH

50,000 Pounds Was Stored Without Permit Downtown.

Acting under orders from Mayor Hylan officials of the Fire Department and the Bureau of Fire Prevention yesterday seized more than 50,000 pounds of chlorate of potash, the property of the Commercial Warehouse, 212 Duane Street, of which E. Russell Valentine is proprietor. Part of the chemical was stored in the upper floors of the buildings at 300 to 306 Washington Street, 176 to 196 Reade Street, 187 to 189 West Street, and 202 to 220 Duane Street.

According to the officials who made the seizure the company had been storing the potash unlawfully, not having received a permit from the city. It was said that the company was ordered last week to remove the chemical because of the danger of explosion, but did not do so. Fire Department repair trucks drew up in front of the buildings and the potash was removed to scows of the Street Cleaning Department. Pending a further investigation it will be held on scows down the bay.

Mayor Hylan yesterday wrote as follows to Fire Commissioner Drennan asking him to conduct an immediate investigation to determine whether explosives or chemicals prohibited by law are stored within the city limits:

"I want an immediate investigation made by you and the Fire Prevention Bureau of all warehouses, storage places, and docks throughout the city to ascertain if there are explosives or dangerous chemicals prohibited by law stored within the city limits.

"Wherever these explosives are found I direct that they be taken out of the city at once. If you will request the Police Commissioner he will gladly co-operate with you in detecting the storage and the transportation of explosives and dangerous chemicals in the city."

Lend Him A Hand

going over the top, his gun in hand, his jaw set, his heart on fire. It is the most dramatic moment in the life of this soldier—and in the life of this nation.

His heart and mind are set on one thing—VICTORY—victory over an enemy who stands for acts and ideas which this soldier despises—which he is ready to give his life to destroy.

We here at home hate these things too. We are pledged to their destruction—to our last dollar and our last man. But this soldier can actually — get - his-hands-on-them—and root them out of the world forever—if we will lend him a hand.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Lloyd George's careful review of the progress of the huge struggle now going on in France cleared the atmosphere of rumors of huge British reserves held in waiting for a counteroffensive, and of opposing stories, less widely circulated, of a great numerical superiority enjoyed by the Germans. His speech was the clearest exposition of the present status of the interrupted drive that has appeared, and was read with the closest attention without, however, producing any change in the attitude which the public has been holding toward the probable effect of the military crisis on the value of securities. On the Stock Exchange the same tendencies that have marked every session for several days past were again in evidence. There was little business, total transactions falling short of 200,000 shares, and prices moved for the most part fractionally. Interest among traders was concentrated upon Distillers, Marine preferred, and Steel.

In Marine the familiar effort to attract speculative interest through the circulation of stories purporting to forecast the board's action upon a further reduction of the accumulated preferred dividend has centred attention upon the meeting scheduled to be held this afternoon. It has been predicted with a considerable degree of certainty that the company will pay another instalment on the 72 per cent. still due stockholders, but in view of the uncertainty of what the company will realize from vessels now operated for Government account the prediction has not been accepted at its face value. On active business that made Marine the market leader the preferred sold up to 94 yesterday, closing with a net gain of ⅞.

The Steel Corporation's decrease in unfilled tonnage, reported yesterday as of March 31, was not unexpected. The total on the company's books on that date was 9,056,000 tons, a decrease of 232,000 tons from the total as of Feb. 28, and of 2,655,000 tons from the corresponding day in 1917. With the return of conditions in the fuel and transportation situation to something approaching normal, for war times, the deliveries have been speeded up, and account for the decrease in unfilled orders. Because the period covered embraced the months of extremely unfavorable weather the quarterly earnings statement of the Lackawanna Steel Company caused favorable comment in the financial district. After allowance for the Federal taxes the Lackawanna earned $8.50 per share for the quarter ended March 31, against $9.85 reported a year ago.

LONDON TRADERS GLOOMY.

War News and Man Power Bill Restrict Trading.

LONDON, April 10.—The stock market opened somewhat gloomily today, being influenced by the weather, the war news, and the Man Power bill, which tended to restrict business. Fears were expressed that the raising of the age limit for military service would not only deplete the staff of the Stock Exchange, but virtually dry up business all around.

First prices were easier. Publication of the War Office report gave a more cheerful tone to the market, which was steadier at the close, although without much recovery. Spanish bonds were strong at 119.

Money was plentiful. Discounts were quiet.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Lackawanna Steel's Quarter.

The Lackawanna Steel Company's quarterly report is significant as the first statement issued by one of the larger steel producers covering the period of the Winter's worst weather. The earnings, issued yesterday, failed to show that deep snows, transportation tieups, and difficulties in obtaining adequate supplies of fuel and raw material cut heavily into income. In the three months ended March 31 the net revenue, after deducting Federal taxes, was $3,750,087, a decline of $608,562 from the total in the same period last year. The reservation for depreciation and mine extinguishment was $42,906 less than a year before, and the balance for dividends was $2,096,747. This was equal to $8.54 a share of stock, compared with $9.85 earned in the first quarter of 1917. It is worth noting that after allowing for presumably heavy Federal war taxes the net before depreciation and charges was $512,400 larger than in the initial quarter of 1916, which was considered highly favorable at the time.

The St. Paul Situation.

The news that the St. Paul, for lack of current funds, must sell some $10,000,000 of equipment trust certificates unless it gets a speedy release of some of the rental owed to it by the Government, was accompanied by further reports of the imminent passing of the semi-annual dividends and by selling pressure against the preferred stock yesterday which carried it down 2⅝ points. Action on the dividends should normally have been taken by the Directors at the January meeting, but both the February and the March meetings have gone by with no decision. So far from there being foundation for the report that this month the Directors will finally pass the dividends, a man well acquainted with St. Paul affairs yesterday pointed out that the only excuse for such long delay on the Directors' part might be that they have good hope of retaining the dividends, and that if they had had to pass them they would have done so in January and had it over with.

Rumor and Marine.

The International Mercantile Marine Company has for a long time had the bad luck to form, apparently, a particularly shining mark for rumors of the speculative sort. It has been unusually inviting in recent months because of the possibilities created by the still unpaid 72 per cent. of back dividends on its preferred stock, combined with the known fact that the company's earnings, even with its whole fleet commandeered, have been sufficient to justify one payment on this back dividend and hopes of another. Yesterday stories were rife all through the Street about another payment on the back dividends, and found enough belief to cause the stock to move up a point and a fraction. There is this much truth, at least, in the reports: There will be a Directors' meeting today. But whether or not they will take any action at all on the back dividends is another story.

The Shipping Stocks' Position.

As a matter of fact, any action on the part of Mercantile Marine Directors is fraught with difficulties, because this company is suffering in a peculiarly aggravated fashion from the trouble which afflicts all the big shipping companies nowadays. They are all making money, but none of them knows how much, and they cannot find out. Their position was never better secured, the prestige of the shipping industry was never higher than it is now; but they are so completely under control of the British and American Governments, and their accounts are so inextricably interwoven with the bookkeeping of Government bureaus and departments, that they cannot tell where they stand, and, when prudent business men do not know just where they stand, their instinct generally is to conserve capital and make no unnecessary disbursements.

Cotton's Tactical Position.

"Don't pay any attention to this market," said one old cotton man yesterday. "In the old days this market ruled the roost, and when they put the price down here all the Southern markets had to follow suit. That was because the Southern grower had to sell his cotton for what he could get to pay his debts. Now they put the price down here, but the Southern markets don't pay any attention. They don't have to sell, but we do have to buy, and they know it, and they're determined to make us come to them. Cotton used to be a buyers' market; now it's a sellers' market. That's all there is to it, and the fact that the buyers are out of this one for a few days won't make any difference."

Sterling "Peg" in Disuse.

Foreign exchange brokers consider that 4.76 7-16 is the "pegged" price for sterling cables. That is, when the rate touches this figure in the offered quotation, supporting orders are immediately forthcoming, and continue in the market until the quotation rises. A broker said yesterday that support buying had not occurred for ten days because offerings have been sufficiently light to be easily absorbed. The rate has held steady at 4.7645.

Japan's Trade Position.

Since the beginning of January the balance of trade has been against Japan, the record of the last year being reversed. The final returns show that Japan's total trade for 1917 amounted to 2,638,797,476 yen, of which 1,603,005,033 yen represented exports and the remaining 1,035,792,443 yen imports. Thus the excess of exports over imports was 567,212,590 yen, as compared with 371,646,208 yen in 1916. The steady ebb in the volume of Japan's exports during the last three months indicates the improbability of anything like this excess of exports for the current year and a general decline in Japan's foreign trade, according to advices from Tokio. Exports show a falling off to the extent of 19 per cent., and there has been a decline of about 22 per cent. in imports, owing chiefly to difficulties in obtaining iron and steel and raw cotton. The biggest decline in Japan's trade is noted in the case of the United States. Japan's total exports to this country last year amounted to 478,000,000 yen, but if the Government restrictions are carried into effect the exports are likely to be reduced to about half, according to a Tokio correspondent, who points out that in the event that the American regulations restrict imports without touching exports, this would, on the basis of last year's figures, leave an unfavorable balance of some 120,000,000 yen in Japan's trade with the United States.

STEEL BOOKINGS FALL OFF.

Unfilled Orders for 9,056,404 Tons as of March 31.

The United States Steel Corporation had unfilled orders for 9,056,404 tons on its books as of March 31, a decline of 232,049 tons during the month. In the preceding month forward contracts receded 189,400 tons. On Dec. 31, 1917, the advance business aggregated 9,381,718 tons and on March 31, 1917, the books showed 11,711,644 tons. The largest showing in the corporation's history was on April 30 last year when the bookings amounted to 12,183,083 tons.

The decline during March this year, as disclosed in the monthly statement yesterday, was not considered a surprise in the trade. Domestic orders have been restricted since the Government became a heavy buyer. While new bookings were checked somewhat by the curtailment of commercial demand, shipments last month presumably gained considerable headway over February's total, due to the better weather and transportation conditions. Increased shipments worked to lower the amount of orders on the books.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

J. P. Morgan & Co. have mailed a circular letter to New York banks and trust companies, requesting that those who have some of the New York, New Haven & Hartford's $44,000,000 of one-year notes, payable April 15, for collection, send in schedules, pending information from the Government as to the manner of payment of these notes.

The National Trade Acceptance Bureau is about to begin publication of The Trade Acceptance Journal.

The Equitable Trust Company has published a booklet on "Acceptances as an Investment."

A committee of stockholders of the Metropolitan Petroleum Corporation, consisting of Howard Wilson, Forrest Kaldenberg, and David U. Page, has been formed. A deposit of stock with Austin Brockmeyer, 111 Broadway, has been asked by the committee.

UNION TANK LINE EARNINGS.

Former Standard Oil Subsidiary Has Net Income of $3,709,516.

The Union Tank Line Company, a former Standard Oil subsidiary, reports net earnings of $3,709,516 in 1917, an increase of $1,627,750 over the preceding year. In terms of the stock the net was equal to $30.91 a share, compared with $17.34 in 1916. The report issued yesterday said that Federal income and excess profits taxes to be paid on the earnings would amount to $859,918.

The Swan & Finch Company, another quondam constituent of the old Standard of New Jersey, announced in its report that a special meeting of stockholders would be held on May 1 to authorize an increase of the capital from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000. Of the increase, $500,000 is to be offered to share owners at par, the proceeds to be used in expanding the company's business. The income from operations in 1917 amounted to $203,468, from which $121,919 was written off as loss on the sale of a plant for the production of fish oil and fertilizer. The balance of $81,549 was $18,487 more than the year before.

The Liberty Loan Smile

YOU seldom see "Jack ashore" nowadays. He dropped in a few days ago "to see how the Liberty Loan campaign was going." We told him it would be over-subscribed. He left, smiling.

He is playing his part in this great war, and a most important part it is. He convoys our soldiers, and our vast shipments of ammunition and supplies, safely across the sea. He is up and aloft in the darkness and storm, watching for the glint of a periscope that betrays the presence of those sneaking pirates, the submarines.

Tense and alert, keen for the fight that may come at any moment of the night or day, cool and resourceful when the torpedo strikes or the shells come screaming over the water, "Jack afloat" upholds the glorious traditions of the American Navy.

GOVERNMENT PLANS LARGER GUN WORKS

INCREASE IN INGOT OUTPUT

Considerable Time Must Elapse Before Commercial Consumption Will Be Encouraged.

The impetus applied to the United States Government's war preparations by the German advance in Picardy is finding marked reflection in the steel trade. As the result of increased demands upon the mills observers of conditions predict that it will be a considerable time before commercial steel consumption will receive encouragement.

"The most significant development of the week," The Iron Age says, "is the definite shaping of Government plans for the immediate building of larger gun works than the United States has today and for a corresponding increase in the manufacture of the largest shells at new plants. The new artillery program will include many 16-inch howitzers mounted on trucks. Their manufacture is likely to be undertaken by a great interest not now engaged on guns, and deliveries are not counted on before late 1919 or early 1920.

"This first week of the country's second year in the war is thus marked by the clearest indications yet given that American steel output will at length be so far taken up by the Government and its allies as to leave little for so-called ordinary uses either at home or abroad."

The name of the company which is expected to undertake the manufacture of the big cannon could not be learned yesterday. Supposition pointed toward the Steel Corporation, which is engaged in making large forgings and has not yet entered the ordnance field, but confirmation was not obtained.

"The vast enlargement of the nation's offensive preparations that has come in the fortnight," The Iron Age continued, "has already stirred the machine tool trade. Great activity is looked for also from the doubling of the output of various shell plants by Government order and the call for large numbers of motor trucks to be sent at once to France.

"Steel mills have been under pressure from Washington in the last week in an effort to have January and February shortages made up, particularly those in plates. The mills have had the help of a better car supply, which in the Pittsburgh district has been especially fortunate in view of the large proportion of output required by the Government. The leading producer there has turned nearly 90 per cent. of its recent production into Government and war contract channels, and several plants in the same district that lately have given 60 to 75 per cent. of their production to such business are now considerably exceeding these figures.

"Great Britain's call for 300,000 tons of ship steel is growing more urgent, and for part of this special consideration has been ordered. A large order of shell steel for the Allies is also awaiting distribution.

"Every week's delay in the placing of the 100,000 cars that have long been scheduled at Washington increases the chances of repeating next Winter the disastrous traffic breakdown of January and February. Should these orders be given out tomorrow, weeks would be required for the manufacture of car appliances on which plants partly idle should now be at work. Precious time is being lost without good reason.

"Steel ingot production in March is estimated at more than 3,525,000 tons, on the basis of returns from twenty-nine companies making 85 to 90 per cent. of the total. This represents an increase of 30 per cent. over the average for January and February, and is parallel with the remarkable recovery in pig-iron production."

SIMS APPEALS TO SHIP MEN.

BOSTON, April 10.—Copies of a letter from Vice Admiral William S. Sims, commander of the United States naval forces in European waters, urging workers to do their utmost to speed up ship construction are to be placed tomorrow in the pay envelopes of the 15,000 men employed in the shipbuilding plants at Quincy and Squantum.

The letter is addressed to Joseph W. Powell, Vice President of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company, and the writer declares that the matter of supplying more ships, particularly destroyers, is of the greatest importance.

"Do the men who actually build the boats understand how vitally important is speed of building?" Admiral Sims asks. "Do they understand that we will win or lose according to whether we beat the submarine or it beats us? That we must depend chiefly upon destroyers for this? That destroyers on this side now are worth their weight in gold?"

The Admiral urges that each man speed up his own work and save every second of time, in order to hasten the end of the war.

"The point," he writes, "is that every man should feel that every blow of his own hammer is a blow at the enemy, that a certain number of blows will put him down and out, and that the sooner all these blows are struck the more valuable lives will be saved and the sooner we shall have peace and plenty. If your people will rush the ships and destroyers, you may rely upon the allied navies and armies to do the rest."

THE COTTON MARKET

Prices Drop 18 to 21 Points as News of Washington Conference Is Awaited.

No news has been received from Washington regarding the conference there between cotton spinners and the War Industries Board up to the time of closing, and consequently the local cotton market yesterday was largely left to the venturesome, with everybody else waiting for something definite to go on. There were various vague reports, and after the session was over telegrams were received by several firms indicating that the board within the next ten days will state definitely what price it proposes to pay for some very big orders of cotton goods. In the meanwhile, however, as is usually the case with the professional element, they had marked prices down, and after some backing and filling the session closed with the entire list down from 18 to 21 points net.

There were some substantial basis for the downward tendency in new crop months, in the shape of continued favorable crop and weather news, but there was nothing from Southern centres to indicate that dropping futures prices here had had any effect on the determination of the Southern grower to extract the maximum profit from what was left of the old crop. None the less, the market opened unsteady from 11 to 23 points off, and sold nearly 20 points further down in the morning.

There was not only further liquidation by speculative longs, but indications were that more cotton was being sold short of the market at favorable points than on previous days. However, to counterbalance this, as soon as prices had worked down, some trade buyers, bargain hunting, ventured into the field to a limited extent, after having been almost entirely absent on Monday and Tuesday. They caused a temporary revival early in the afternoon, but most of it was lost again in a rather weak close.

The first weekly weather report of the new season was issued yesterday, and was one of the best opening reports ever received by the trade. If the weather continues as fine in the South as it has so far, apparently nothing but labor and fertilizer shortage stand in the way of a record crop. Exports yesterday were 18,053 bales, a total of 3,066,143 for the season. Southern spot markets were unchanged, to 25 points lower.

WHEAT.

Leading authorities in the grain trade believe that the present outlook for the new wheat crop is exceptionally favorable. The Winter wheat has passed through the Winter with little or no loss and recently the Southwestern States, in fact the whole Winter wheat belt, has been visited by splendid rains which should prove of untold value to the crop. The season is early in the Spring wheat States and the crop has gone into the ground under exceptionally favorable conditions. The continuation of the fight in Washington over the Gore bill to increase the price of wheat to $2.50 is still discouraging the sale of wheat by farmers and receipts at primary points continue small.

RYE.

The local market for rye was unsettled and nominal. Chicago houses were asking as high as $2.93 for Western rye, cost and freight, New York, but buyers were not interested especially as the Minneapolis market was 15 cents lower, making a loss of 24c in two days.

CORN.

Operations in the new corn contract will be inaugurated today and, in consequence, trading yesterday in the May position consisted largely of evening-up outstanding accounts. The new contract calls for the delivery of No. 4 mixed corn as a basis, and it was expected that the price would start around $1.45 to $1.50 for the July position. No limitations will be put on the price, but the rule prohibiting any one interest from controlling over 200,000 bushels will still be in force. Food Administrator Hoover sent a telegram to the local Exchange warning against any attempt in the direction of manipulation and urged operators to prove the economic value of Exchanges by showing that the objectives of the new contract can be accomplished voluntarily without the interference of Federal authority. In the local cash market kiln dried No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at $1.90½, No. 4 yellow $1.83½, No. 3 white $2.20½, cost and freight, New York.

OATS.

It seemed to be the prevailing opinion in the oats market that operations in the new contract in corn are likely to exert a bullish influence on oats values. At any rate, prices were higher, with a good demand from shorts, and at the close the market showed net gains of ⅛c to 1c. The Chicago Board will act on the new oats contract, and it will be voted upon by the members on next Tuesday. The export demand was not in evidence, but the cash position was firmer. In the local cash market natural was quoted at $1.04@$1.05 and clipped white, $1.16@$1.07½, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was only moderately active, but prices showed fair gains, owing to light offers and covering prompted by an advance of 5 to 10 points in the hog market and in sympathy with grain. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 31,000 head; estimated for Thursday, 22,000 head; Kansas City received 14,000 head and Omaha 17,500 head.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was lifeless and in absence of interest no prices were made. The spot position was steady to firm, but business was of a routine character.

COFFEE.

Prices in the coffee market at the start yesterday showed continued weakness. Liquidation was prompted largely by recent developments in the spot situation, although trading was quiet and the market was without special feature. First prices were 4 to 10 points higher, and the market closed at a net loss of 3 to 9 points. The local spot market was dull and nominally unchanged.

The daily cable from Brazil to the Exchange reported the Rio and Santos spot markets unchanged, with Santos futures 25 to 50 reis lower. Receipts at the two ports were 26,000 bags, compared with 15,000 bags a year ago. Clearances from Santos via Seller were 14,000 bags. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

There has been a little letup in the distribution of refined sugar the last day or so, although one or two of the local refiners have been able to meet the demands of the brokers in a fairly moderate way. Refiners are finding it difficult to keep working at full capacity, owing to non-arrivals of raw supplies in sufficient quantities. Shipments of raw sugars from Cuba and Porto Rico are being speeded up, and it is believed that shortly the situation here will be greatly relieved. The International Sugar Committee reported purchases of 118,000 bags of Cuban raw sugar, April shipment, at 4.985c, cost and freight.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 5,672 packages. The market has developed further strength on the better grades of fresh creamery, with sales of extras at 41½@42c and some of the fancier lots up to 43c. There was pretty good call for fine cars of centralized around 41c. Seconds and poorer qualities are still having very slow sale. Renovated, ladles, and packing stock firm, but market dull. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 42½@43c; extras, (92 score,) 41½@42c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 40@41½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 38@39½c; thirds, 36½@37½c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 43½@44c; extras, 42½@43c; firsts, 40½@42c; seconds, 38½@40c; creamery, held as to quality, 34@40½c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 41½@42c; good to prime, 38½@41c; common to fair, 34@38c; renovated, extras, 38½@39½c firsts, 37@38c; lower grades, 34@36c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35½@36½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 34@35c; seconds, 33c; lower grades, 31@32½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33@33½c; No. 2, 32@32½c; lower grades, 28@31½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 32,974 cases. Arrivals are still larger, but they are showing a material decrease as compared with last week; advices indicate lighter shipments in transit. Much of the accumulation here is still held above a prompt selling value and is going into the warehouses, and with more confident buying the market is showing a firmer tone, with some improvement in prices of most grades. We hear of no ability to place storage packings at any higher price than heretofore quoted, but the finer qualities of regular packed eggs are bringing some advance, and the medium and lower grades are also doing better. High grades of dirties and checks are reported sold in some cases a little above present quotations, but the market is irregular and prices fully sustained, according to quality. Nearby white eggs are still in liberal supply, and the storage houses often the chief outlet; regular distributing trade is dull, and only fancy selections reach top quotation in original condition; most of the business is in bunches of mixed marks at 38@39c. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 37@38c; storage packed firsts, 36@36½c; regular packed extra firsts, 35@36c; regular packed firsts, 33@35c; seconds and poorer, 31@32½c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 31@32c; No. 2 and poorer, 28@30½c; fresh gathered checks, ordinary to choice, dry, 27@30½c; State Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 38@40c; ordinary to primo, 37@38c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 36@38c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 36@38c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 37@38c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 33@36c; duck eggs, 40@55c; goose eggs, 60@70c.

REPORTS WAR BILLS FOR NIAGARA POWER

Committee of Legislature Acts on Plan for Consolidation of Three Companies.

PLEA BY WAR DEPARTMENT

General Keller Explains That Step is Necessary to Realization of Federal Project.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 10.—Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara today got backing from the Federal Government for two power bills which, at a hearing before the Committee on War Measures, were denounced as "grabs" and a "stock jobbing game." The bills provide for the consolidation of the Hydraulic Power Company, the Niagara Power Company, and the Cliff Electric Distributing Company, which is a subsidiary of the Hydraulic Company.

The Federal Government came to the support of the scheme because consolidation would place the new corporation in a position to develop 170,000 horse power in excess of what is being developed by the two companies now without using any more of the water from Niagara River than is being used at present.

The War Department sent General Charles Keller to appear before the War Committee as its spokesman. After listening to what he had to say the committee went into executive session, amended the bills to eliminate objectionable features and safeguard the public interest and reported them. They will be passed as war measures under an emergency message from Governor Whitman, probably tomorrow.

General Keller told the committee that the United States Government was facing an exceedingly bad power situation that would be more acutely felt toward the middle of next Winter than it was now. He said that the Government had commandeered the entire power output of the two corporations it was proposed to consolidate, but was short 136,000 horse power in the energy required to keep war industries at Niagara Falls and in the frontier district moving.

Importance of Niagara.

"Niagara Falls is the only place in the country where the Government can undertake to make provisions for increased power production and get quick results," said General Keller. He urged that consolidation of the corporations was essential to the realization of the Government's plans.

Senator Ross Graves of Buffalo raised objections, although admitting that the Federal Government was entitled to all the help the State could give. He made a sensational attack at the last session on similar measures introduced by Senator Thompson, then as now amid the rush and confusion of the closing days. He suggested that General Keller and the Secretary of War could not possibly have studied the measures, or they would not have supported them.

General Keller hastened to explain that it was the project, not any particular bill for its realization, that he had been sent to advocate.

"No bill ever gave such broad powers," said the Senator. "It is giving away valuable franchise rights without a cent of return to the State. There is no provision to limit capitalization that will serve as a basis for rates, and we on the American side are paying now for power from the falls twice what they are paying in Canada. There is no provision for State supervision. It is outrageous, scandalous. The people would stone us if we dared to pass bills like these."

Objection was made to the bills by spokesman for other power interests at Niagara Falls on the ground that realization of the project might render the new corporation an invader of their rights. The bills, it was pointed out, embodied no limitation to prevent the new company from monopolizing all the power possibilities latent in the river from the heads of the falls to Lewiston, at the end of the lower gorge.

Congress to Protect State.

General Keller assured the committee that, while the State would practically cede its right of control to the Federal Government, Congress would afford the State an opportunity to get all the revenue possible out of the power project. He said that $60,000,000 would be a fair capitalization for the proposed new corporation.

Senator Thompson pleaded that the amount of capitalization be not fixed in the bill, and said he would rather abandon his measures than have the Public Service Commission called in to advise the committee in the drafting of them.

The bills were amended to provide that the outlet of the water used by the enlarged company be situated not more than 1,000 feet below the intake point. This amendment was made to prevent the invasion of existing power rights of other corporations. Another amendment gives the State power to establish rental on all waters taken up to 15,000 cubic feet a second. The Public Service Commission for the Second District is given supervision over capitalization and the conditions under which the stock of the new corporation shall be issued.

NEW EFFORT TO REVIVE PROHIBITION FIGHT

Move to Bring About a Caucus of Republican Senators on Ratification Resolution.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 10.—A fight over prohibition may enliven the closing moments of the present legislative session. The proposal for immediate ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment, embodied in a resolution introduced by Senator Hill of Broome, may be revived and again brought before the Legislature.

A movement is on foot to bring about a caucus of the Republican Senators on the Hill resolution. Eighteen votes in the caucus would make the resolution a party measure and insure its adoption by the Senate. In the event of favorable action by the upper house, the Assembly would be more than likely to follow suit, Speaker Sweet being openly committed to immediate ratification.

The plan was decided upon in Buffalo last Saturday, when Senators Thompson of Niagara, Wellington of Rensselaer, Gibbs of Erie, and Knight of Wyoming met accidentally in the room of the Appellate Division, where all had cases to argue. They talked the matter over and decided to call a meeting of Republican Senators friendly to prohibition. This meeting was held today in the committee room of Senator Thompson, with Senator Towner of Putnam, Republican whip of the Senate, presiding.

It was learned tonight that the following Senators had signed the petition: Hill of Broome, Graves and Gibbs of Erie, Towner of Putnam, Thompson of Niagara, Wellington of Rensselaer, Stivers of Sullivan, Fowler of Chautauqua, Marshall of Franklin, Whitney of Saratoga, Mullan of Monroe, Burlingame of Kings, Carson of Wayne, and Knight of Wyoming.

LEEWAY FOR TAX DODGERS.

Collectors Here Will Not Begin Roundup Until June 15.

The report from Washington that Commissioner of Internal Revenue Daniel C. Roper had issued instructions to Collectors throughout the country to run down tax dodgers was received with interest in New York revenue circles, where it was acknowledged that plans were being formulated for an intensive drive to ferret out income and other tax slackers.

Joseph F. Prendergast, Chief Deputy of the Third, or Upper Manhattan District, who was in charge of the office yesterday in the absence of Collector Mark Eisner in Washington, said his office was about to start a drive to round up persons who had evaded the payment of the various classes of taxes, other than the income and excess profits tax. First attention will be devoted, it was said, to running down those who had declined to pay excise, tobacco, and the commodity taxes carried in the War Revenue act. The drive for the apprehension and probable arrest of this class of offender will probably start here next Monday.

From what was said by officials in New York yesterday, it was apparent that the roundup of income tax dodgers will not begin here until after June 15, when all payments for taxes of this kind must be in. Following the date mentioned, energetic measures will be adopted to punish shirkers.

"Up to the present," Collector William H. Edwards of the Second, or Wall Street District, said, "I have been accepting everyone's word as being as good as the Government's. In my district we have between 125,000 and 150,000 income tax returns to inspect, and when we have ascertained just who have filed returns, we can start out to run down those who haven't. Up to date, I haven't found a single slacker. We are, however, working on a double check basis, and later on will be in a position to get after those who have not filed returns. We will do this through a process of elimination."

It was learned that both Collectors Edwards and Eisner have received numerous anonymous letters from taxpayers giving the names of persons, alleged by the writers, as not having filed income tax returns. Inspectors are now investigating these cases.

Collector Edwards yesterday notified owners of places of amusement in his district that they, as well as ticket brokers, must register at the Custom House on or before April 15. Originally, the date of such registration was set for April 1, but was postponed two weeks.

DISMISS OLD CUSTOMS MAN.

Daniel O. Sprague Had Been in Service 28 Years—No Explanation.

His associates were puzzled yesterday by the dismissal from the Customs Service of Daniel O. Sprague, an acting Deputy Collector with an office in the Custom House. Sprague had been in the service for more than twenty-eight years. He was removed by Collector Byron R. Newton on Tuesday, but the fact did not become known until yesterday.

Beyond confirming the fact that Sprague's dismissal was the result of charges growing out of the arrest and conviction of Edmond Rousselot, who called himself the Marquis de Castillo, Collector Newton declined to discuss the case. It was said that Sprague entered a general denial of the charges. Before becoming Acting Deputy Collector, Sprague had been on duty on steamship piers, where he supervised the examination of passengers' baggage. He was transferred after an investigation conducted by Collector Dudley Field Malone of the manner in which Mrs. Elizabeth Gordon Pelton, daughter-in-law of the late Senator Mark Hanna, had brought twelve trunks into the United States. Mr. Sprague was not found last night.

DENIES DELEHANTY PETITION

Supreme Court Justice Sawyer, assigned by Governor Whitman to hear the quo warranto suit brought by James A. Delehanty to oust Judge John F. McIntyre from General Sessions, yesterday denied the application by the latter's counsel to set aside the verdict in favor of Judge McIntyre on the ground that it was against the weight of the evidence. John W. Hannon argued that the evidence showed clearly the election of Delehanty. Herbert R. Limburg, for Judge McIntyre, insisted that the ballots were not in the same condition at the trial as they were on the night of election.

Counsel for Mr. Delehanty announced that an appeal would be taken, and the court gave a month's time for the preparation of the papers. He directed that the Corporation Counsel take charge of the ballots pending the appeal.

SINCLAIR OIL PASSES QUARTERLY DIVIDEND

Head of Corporation Says Conservation of Earnings Was Deemed Best in Present Conditions.

Important dividend announcements were made by several corporations yesterday. The New York Central Railroad Company declared the usual quarterly disbursement of 1¼ per cent., payable May 1 to stockholders of record April 13. At the normal time for the dividend meeting in March, action was postponed, and for this reason the declaration was considered as indicating that the management had received the approval of the Railroad Administration for the continuation of the return to shareowners.

The Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America declared its initial dividend of 5 per cent. on the capital stock, due Aug. 1 to stockowners of record July 15. The last report on earnings showed that the company's income was expanding favorably. The corporation's plants are under Government control as a war measure.

Burns Brothers, the retail coal firm, declared a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. on the common stock, this being an increase of 1 per cent. Since last May the stockholders have received quarterly 1½ per cent. in cash and 1 per cent. in stock. The stock dividend has been discontinued, it was learned, until a date in the future, when a substantial disbursement may be made. The dividend will be paid May 15 to stockholders on the books May 1. The usual preferred stock disbursement of 1¾ is due May 1 to stock of record April 15.

Directors of the Sinclair Oil & Refining Corporation passed the quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share. The action had been forecast by the recent decline of the stock from around 40 to under 27 on the Stock Exchange. H. F. Sinclair, President, said in a statement after the meeting that it had been deemed best, in view of present conditions, to follow a conservative policy and conserve earnings.

Mr. Sinclair asserted that the corporation had become to a large extent independent of railroad transportation through the laying of a pipe line from the Oklahoma and Kansas fields to Chicago, which delivers oil to the refineries at Kansas City and East Chicago. The Directors authorized yesterday the extension of the pipe line seventy miles further, to the properties in the Garber, Okla., field, and also arranged to subscribe to $500,000 Liberty bonds of the Third loan.

The corporation was formed two years ago, being a combination of a number of refining and producing concerns in the Southwest. There are 1,000,000 shares of stock outstanding. Net earnings in the last fiscal year were equal to more than $8 a share, after allowing for charges and depreciation.

MAYOR OPPOSES CITY BILLS.

Going to Albany to Ask Whitman's Aid Against Mandatory Measures.

Mayor Hylan and several heads of departments will go to Albany today to confer with Governor Whitman regarding a number of bills affecting the city. The Mayor is particularly interested in the latest pension bill affecting city employes. The Mayor will ask the Governor to oppose all bills providing for mandatory increases in salaries or for the creation of new jobs. He is also expected to express to Governor Whitman his strong disapproval of the Ottinger West Side bill.

A delegation of Brooklyn officials, headed by President Riegelmann and Commissioner of Public Works Joseph A. Guider, will also go to Albany today to support measures affecting Brooklyn. The principal measure is the Coney Island Canal bill, which has passed the House and is now in the Senate, where it is being piloted by Senator A. W. Burlingame. It provides for distributing the expense among the Federal Government, the State, and the city.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

In an active close yesterday the market on the Exchange was subjected to a heavy selling pressure, and sold off sharply. The general list showed fractional net losses for the day. Irregularity and a yielding tendency were evidenced throughout the day, despite the fact that at midday the market for a time gave the appearance of buoyancy.

TRIBUTE TO PADEREWSKI.

Rare Print Presented to Pianist for His Patriotism.

As a tribute to Ignace Paderewski and his work for Poland, a testimonial meeting was held last night at Carnegie Hall by the Civic Forum. Its proceeds will go to the Polish Relief Fund. Following an address by Dr. John H. Finley, who presided, the artist spoke of the ideals and ambitions of the Polish people and the important part they must surely play in making up the future map of Europe. He said his people were heart and soul with the Allies and were hoping and praying for the decisive victory of the ideals for which America stands.

"It is Poland that has stood between Germany and the treasures of the East, which she so greatly covets," said he, "and it is prejudice and years of doubting that have kept Poland from taking its place among the important nations of the world. Among its 35,000,000 inhabitants there are fewer dialects than in any country of Europe."

Robert Underwood Johnson read a poem, "Paderewski, the Patriot." Frederick C. Walcott of the Food Administration at Washington told of his personal observations in the ... ridden country. A rare print, showing the crowning of the first King of Poland was presented to the pianist as a "token of the love and esteem of a legion of friends in this country who desire to honor him as a man and patriot."

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Quick resale of a Bronx apartment by an operating syndicate to an investor was the feature of a quiet realty market yesterday.

The Morgenstern Brothers Syndicate sold to an investing client of A. Lions, for cash, the five-story apartment house at the northeast corner of Vyse Avenue and Home Street, known as 1,202 Vyse Avenue and covering a plot 53 by 100. The building, which contains thirty apartments and three stores, shows an annual rent roll of $11,000 and has been held at $80,000. The selling corporation acquired the property recently from the builder, the Galveston Building Company.

Buyers for Tenements.

James H. Cruikshank has purchased from Fannie M. Keppel, Washington, D. C., the five-story single flat, 6 Bradhurst Avenue, near 143d Street, on a lot 23 by 60. The property is assessed by the city for taxation at $11,000.

An investing client of Harry Sugarman purchased from Morris Siegel 1,699 Lexington Avenue, a four-story tenement, with stores, on a plot 27 by 80.

East 104th Street Sale.

Land Estates, Inc., associated with the New York Title and Mortgage Company, sold to an investor 64 East 104th Street, a three-story and brownstone building, on a lot 18.9 by 100.11.

Bronx Sales.

D. S. Crakow sold, through the Samuel Cowen Agency, the three-family brick dwelling at 1,533 Hoe Avenue, on a lot 25 by 100.

An investing client of H. A. Kelber purchased from the Lawyers Mortgage Company 2,665 Briggs Avenue, a two-story frame dwelling, on a lot 25 by 99.11.

Edyth K. Fields bought from the Parkridge Realty Company the vacant lot 25 by 103, at the southeast corner of Perry Avenue and 207th Street. The purchaser plans to build a dwelling for her own occupancy. J. Clarence Davies was the broker in the sale.

Plans were filed yesterday for a one-and-a-half-story frame dwelling on the site to measure 22 by 38. The architect, B. Ebeling, placed the cost at $2,500.

Old Church Sold.

Announcement was made yesterday of the sale of the Old Bushwick Reformed Church, at Humboldt and Conselyea Streets, Brooklyn, to the Catholic Diocese. An Italian Catholic church will be built on the site. It is reported $15,000 was paid for the property. The Old Bushwick congregation is expected to merge with another church. It was organized in 1664.

SEDITION BILL PASSED BY SENATE

NOW GOES TO CONFERENCE

Early Agreement by the Two Houses Expected — Heavy Penalties Provided for Disloyalty.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The Sedition bill, prohibiting, under penalties of twenty years' imprisonment, and $10,000 fine, language or acts of disloyalty, or obstruction of the army draft and Liberty Loans, was passed today by the Senate without a record vote. The bill now goes to conference between House and Senate, and final enactment is expected soon.

Protracted and bitter debate marked consideration of the measure, the passage of which had been strongly urged by Administration officials, to permit the Government to deal with disloyal agitators and check the growing danger of mob violence.

Although modified to meet the objections of Senators who contended that the original draft would curb legitimate freedom of speech, the bill retains the broad inhibition of words or acts which "support or favor the cause of the German Empire or its allies • • • or oppose the cause of the United States." It also would punish willful and "disloyal, profane, scurrilous, contemptuous, or abusive" language about the American form of government, Constitution, military or naval forces, flag or uniform," and willful utterances designed to curtail production of essential war materials.

The Senate adopted an amendment by Senator Jones of New Mexico providing for dismissal of Federal executive employes making disloyal statements. This was a substitute for one introduced by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania several days ago after attacks had been made on George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, and other officials on account of their writings in the past.

Senator Overman of North Carolina accused the Pennsylvania Senator of "having some official in mind" in introducing his amendment. Senator Penrose replied that he "had several men in mind." Senator Nelson of Minnesota said he understood the proposed amendment was to apply to cases like that of George Creel.

Senator Lodge, after he and other Senators had denounced alleged disloyal publications in the German-American press, withdrew his amendment prohibiting German language publication unless paralleled by English translation. Senator Nelson opposed the amendment, declaring it an "insult" to loyal Americans of German blood. Senator Borah of Idaho did not press an amendment he had offered to repeal the Postmaster General's press censorship authority conferred in the original Espionage act.

With an intimation that it might be stricken out in conference, an amendment by Senator France of Maryland providing that the bill shall not impair liberty to speak "what is true, with good motives, and for justifiable ends," was adopted.

QUOTE BRYAN AS AIDING GERMAN PROPAGANDA

WAHINGTON, April 10.—The Senate Committee investigating the German-American Alliance had read into the record today a translation of a publication in the official bulletin of the German-American Alliance which purported to be a German version of a speech delivered by W. J. Bryan before a German organization in Chicago, in 1914, when Mr. Bryan was Secretary of State. The article quoted Mr. Bryan as urging Germans to obtain greater representation at primaries and elections.

Another article read to the committee from the alliance bulletin quoted the President of the Alabama alliance as urging, in a speech in 1912, the increasing of the State membership as a means of enlarging the State organization's political influence.

Charges that German language newspapers in the United States had tried to stir up bad feeling between this country and Japan were made by Professor E. E. Sperry of Syracuse University in his testimony today.

Professor Sperry declared German propagandists had urged the use of the German language and the reading of German literature in the United States to prevent the assimilation of German immigrants and to retard their adoption of American customs. He read articles published in Germany which asserted that within 100 years the United States would be completely controlled by Germany.

Professor Sperry said the German Reichstag in 1912 appropriated one million marks for furthering the teaching of German in schools in foreign countries. The German Secretary of Foreign Affairs arranged for sending teachers from Germany to foreign nations, and those who were particularly successful in this propaganda were decorated, he said. He had no record of any decoration of teachers in the United States.

TWO MORE GERMANS EXPELLED BY N.Y.A.C.

G. B. Kulenkampff and F. Stallforth Accused of Being Enemy Plotters.

EXONERATE BASIL RUYSDAEL

Governors Also Decide Charge of Pro-Germanism Against H. Lampe Was Unfounded.

The Board of Governors of the New York Athletic Club voted early yesterday morning, after a session of several hours, to expel Gustave B. Kulenkampff and Frederico Stallforth for being pro-German and to exonerate Basil Ruysdael, the basso of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, and Henry Lampe, formerly connected with the North German Lloyd line.

Stallforth is a German who was connected with the plots of Captain von Rintelen, who spent several million dollars on German enterprises in this country. He was sent to jail for refusing to answer questions regarding his connections with Captain von Rintelen, David Lamar, Hugo Schmidt, and others.

Kulenkampff, who figured in several German plots, escaped arrest until last month, when he was put in the Tombs on suspicion of communicating with Germans carrying on propaganda in South America. In 1917 the Department of Justice discovered that $750,000 had been mysteriously placed to his credit here, and traced $350,000 of it to German plotters in South America.

The Board of Governors also decided to investigate several other members of the club and to take measures to prevent any further such incidents as the alleged celebration of the German offensive in the bar of the club, which led to the present investigation. One thing which had made many members of the club indignant, according to President Jeremiah T. Mahoney, is the fact that those in charge of the purchase of books and periodicals for the club had provided a rich store of pro-German publications. Mr. Mahoney said that the head of the Library Committee for a time was pro-German, and had tried to arrange to keep Teuton apologetics always at the elbow of members of the club. A resolution was recently adopted to purge the library of all matter putting the blame for the war on Belgium, England, or other nations and of anything tending to justify Germany.

The official account of the proceeding of the Board of Governors was given out by President Mahoney as follows:

Basil Ruysdael is of Dutch parentage, has always been known as strongly Ally, and has asserted repeatedly that the charges against him were the spite work of an individual.

A general meeting of members of the club has been called for next Monday, to expel all pro-Germans and enemy aliens.

FIND CODES ON PRISONER.

Dealer in Chinese Curios Arrested as an Enemy Alien.

Suspected of being in communication, through secret channels, with the Austrian Government, Gustavo Martini, a member of the Sino-American Trading Corporation, dealers in Chinese curios, at 37 East Twenty-eighth Street, was arrested by officials of the Department of Justice yesterday and locked up in the Tombs pending further investigation. Martini was born in Kiel, Germany. He insisted yesterday that he was loyal to the United States.

According to the Federal agents certain codes found on Martini purported to show that he was in communication with an Austrian officer, Fritz Materna by name, who left the United States on the same steamship with ex-Ambassador Dumba. Martini admitted that he had known Materna and that he was on friendly terms with him, and that he had on one occasion loaned the Austrian officer $5,000, which the latter repaid.

Martini said he was a dealer in Chinese curios, and that he was in China at the time the United States entered the war. There he met a German merchant, who died leaving a request that he look after certain matters in this country relating to the disposition of the merchant's estate.

The Federal Grand Jury yesterday indicted Onofray Makarenko, a Russian, on a charge of violating the Espionage act by trying to induce Russians in this countryto oppose the war. Makarenko was arrested at Hastings-on-the-Hudson. He was formerly employed at a plant of tho National Conduit and Cable Cnmpany.

Thomas Welsh, 23 years old, who was convicted last Monday under the Trading with the Enemy act of bringing a communication into this country outside of the regular mails, was sentenced by Judge Hand in the Federal District Court yesterday to one year and a day in the Atlanta Penitentiary. The communication had to do with the Sinn Fein movement in Ireland, and was intended for the Sinn Fein leadere in the United States. Welsh was employed on the steamship Celtic.

The personal effects of Dr. Karl Buenz, former German Minister to Mexico, who was sentenced to an eighteen-month term in Atlanta for conspiring to make New York a base for German ocean raiders, will be auctioned off today at the Fifth Avenue Auction Rooms, at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street. Dr. Buenz has not yet been taken to Atlanta, the final disposition of his case being still dependent upon the outcome of an appeal for a pardon which has been made to Washington.

Seditious Soldier Gets Ten Years.

CHICAGO, April 10.—Ernest F. Zuschlag, private in the 345th Infantry, Camp Pike, Ark., formerly of Chicago, has been sentenced to ten years on the rock pile at Leavenworth, Kan., by court-martial. The prisoner, at the time of the sinking of the Tuscania, expressed the wish that the U-boats would sink every American transport.

Pacifist Tarred and Feathered.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 10.—William Madison Hicks, President of the World Peace League, was tarred and feathered at Elk City, Okla., last night and ordered to leave the county. Hicks is under Federal indictment on disloyalty charges.

GEN. F. E. RESCHE DROPPED FROM ARMY

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Discharge from the Federal service of Brig. Gen. Frederick E. Resche of Minnesota, a German-born officer commanding a brigade of the 34th National Guard Division at Camp Cody, New Mexico, was announced today in army orders.

Failure to maintain his command on an efficient footing is the cause officially announced for giving the officer an honorable discharge. Certain remarks attributed to him, however, have drawn attention to the question of his loyalty, and while no overt act of disloyalty has been charged his utterances are being investigated.

The primary desire of the War Department, it was said at the department today, was to get out of the service an officer of high rank who was shown by the reports of inspectors to be lacking in zeal and enterprise in preparing his command for conflict with the German Army. For that reason he was promptly discharged and the question of his loyalty left to be passed upon by the civil branch of tho Government. The discharge makes a civilian of General Resche. Had he been a regular army officer, the War Department's course would have been different.

The 34th Division is composed of troops from Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, and Nebraska. General Resche's successor has not yet been selected.

DULUTH, Minn., April 10.—Brig. Gen. F. E. Resche, discharged today from the Federal service, was born in Germany and received his early military training in the Prussian Army. Some years ago he was Captain of Police here. He was active in National Guard circles and rose rapidly from the ranks to command of the Minnesota brigade.

GERMAN PUT IN DOUGH BIN.

Americans Fire at His Feet While He Gasps for Breath.

SALT LAKE CITY, April 10.—Because of alleged pro-Teutonic utterances, William Frisse, 51 years old, a registered German, was thrown into a dough bin at a bakery by two Americans today, according to a story told the police by Frisse. He added that while he was nearly smothered in dough the men fired several shots at his feet, but failed to strike them.

Frisse came to the United States several years ago. He has a brother in the German army, according to the police.

How much do your clothes cost?

THE clothes are the answer to that question, not the price. If you figure cost by the month or year, you'll find that a suit of all-wool cloth, finely tailored, and well designed, gives long wear and in the end costs less than one that doesn't last long or look right.

Our clothes cost enough to be very economical. Be sure of our label, a small thing to look for, a big thing to find.

EMPEROR CHARLES, IN PEACE OFFER TO FRANCE, UPHELD "JUST CLAIMS ON ALSACE-LORRAINE"; HAIG YIELDS LITTLE IN DAY OF HARD FIGHTING

ENTIRE NATION IN RACE TO TAKE THIRD WAR LOAN

$275,919,000 Reported to Washington, with Two Districts to be Heard From.

OVER 35,000 SUBSCRIBERS

Bondholders Expected to Exceed in Number Those Who Bought Previous Issues.

LYNN FIRST TO PASS QUOTA

Honor Flag Claimed by More Than 700 Communities — $500,000,000 Treasury Notes Oversubscribed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—With two districts not reporting the total amount of Liberty bond subscriptions at the close of Wednesday, April 10, for the entire country as shown by official statements from Federal Reserve banks was $275,919,000. This amount had been taken by 35,000 individual subscribers. The figures represent subscriptions reported to the Federal Reserve banks by member banks and trust companies as having been filed with them. Only part of the subscriptions had been received by the Federal Reserve banks in tingling form.

By districts the subscriptions were as follows:

Boston	$35,500,000
New York	141,400,000
Cleveland	7,100
Richmond	3,610,650
Atlanta	1,500,500
Chicago	33,910,000
St. Louis	1,894,100
Kansas City	1,811,200
Dallas	11,762,700
San Francisco	1,123,650
Total	$275,919,000

The Minneapolis and Philadelphia Districts have made no report. Their subscriptions, it is expected, will send the total over $300,000,000, and register the placing of one-tenth of the entire loan. No conclusions can fairly be drawn from the figures for the first four days of the campaign. It is observed that the interior districts, as in previous campaigns, have taken comparatively small subscriptions, but this is regarded as having no special significance, any more than the fact that the Cleveland District, which in both previous loans went very far ahead of its quota, is credited with but $7,150 of subscriptions so far.

Treasury Notes Big Success.

The issue of a minimum of $500,000,000 Treasury certificates of indebtedness dated April 10, 1918, in anticipation of the Third Liberty Loan, was largely oversubscribed. The returns are being tabulated and figures by districts will be announced tomorrow.

Reports from all parts of the country to the Treasury Department state that great enthusiasm prevails among solicitors, and there has been no abatement of activity because of forbidding weather.

The fact that stands out in all reports is the increasing proportion of individual subscribers. This is steadily growing as the reports come in. The number is now likely to be far greater than in either of the other loans.

An encouraging feature of the campaign is the apparent determination of solicitors to continue their work up to the closing hour of the drive regardless of whether their quotas have been reached. Practically every one of the 700 or more communities that have claimed the right to fly the honor flag by virtue of having obtained their quotas is reporting increasing enthusiasm and fixed determination to go forward and win the additional star that is awarded to a city every time it oversubscribes to the extent of its quota.

An example of the efficiency of local organizations is contained in a report to the Treasury Department from Lynn, Mass., showing how that city reached its goal even before the gong sounded the opening of the loan on April 6. To Lynn had been allotted $2,917,800. It organized a committee of 700 business and professional men, which met with full attendance every night for six weeks in advance of the opening of the campaign. On the night before the loan opened Lynn newspapers announced that all business houses, theatres, and banks in the city would remain open all night, and that the committee would begin a house-to-house canvass at midnight. Every household was asked through the newspapers to keep a light burning in the front hall, the committ-

France to Send Officers to Aid in Training Here

WASHINGTON, April 11.—France has been called upon to aid in hastening the movement of American troops across the sea by sending additonal officers for the training camps in the United States. General Vignal, Military Attaché of the French Embassey, after a conference tonight with Major Gen. March, acting Chief of Staff, cabled his Government suggesting that any officers that can be spared be detailed for duty in America.

WILSON TAKES COAST SHIP LINES

McAdoo to Control Clyde, Mallory, Southern, and Merchants & Miners Properties.

SOME TO BE TRANSPORTS

President Directs All Vessels Suitable Shall Be Used to Carry Troops and War Supplies.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—In an effort to relieve transportation congestion, provide for the rapid movement of coal, cotton, and other commodities, and add to the overseas fleet, President Wilson issued a proclamation today giving William G. McAdoo, as Director General of Railroads, control of the principal coastwise steamship lines.

As cited in the proclamation, the lines affected are: "Clyde Steamship Company, a corporation of the State of Maine; Mallory Steamship Company, a corporation of the State of Maine; Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company, a corporation of the State of Maryland, and Southern Steamship Company, a corporation of the State of Delaware."

The properties taken over include "all steamships, tugs, lighters, barges, ships, boats and marine craft of any and every kind or description, and all the tackle and appurtenances to and appliances thereof, together with all wharves, docks, warehouses, and other property of every kind or nature, real or chattel, owned, leased, chartered, controlled, or used by said companies or either of them, in conducting, or in connection with said transportation systems."

The President further specifies that such properties shall as far as possible be used in connection with the transfer of troops, war materials, and equipment "to the exclusion so far as may be necessary of all other traffic." This is taken here to indicate that any vessels now engaged in coastwise trade which are available for overseas service will be used, and that, so far as is possible, the tonnage of the companies named will be concentrated to release other shipping which may have been used in coastwise trade.

The question of taking over the coastwise shipping has been under discussion for some time. The Railroad Administration has held to the belief that the most effective service could be obtained if the coastwise shipping, or the greater part of it, was placed under its jurisdiction, so that the transportation efforts could be co-ordinated. In this Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board, who has been bending every effort to add to the overseas service, agreed. The decision as expressed in the proclamation by President Wilson today was the result of these conferences.

"It is hereby directed that the possession, control, operation, and utilization of such transportation systems, hereby by me undertaken, shall be exercised by and through William G. McAdoo, who has been duly appointed and designated Director General of Railroads. Said Director General may perform the duties imposed upon him, so long and to such extent as he shall determine, through the Boards of Directors, officers, and employes of said system of transportation. Until, and except so far as said Director General shall from time to time by general or special orders otherwise provide, the Boards of Directors, officers, and employes of said transportation systems shall continue the operation thereof in the usual and ordinary course of the business of common carriers, in the names of their respective companies.

"Until and except so far as said Director General shall from time to time otherwise by general or special orders determine, such systems of transportation shall remain subject to all existing statutes of the United States and orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission

WISCONSIN FORCES SUFFER

234 CASUALTIES IN 2 DAYS

The lists received from General Pershing yesterday, reporting 234 casualties among the American forces in two days, show that the famous Rainbow Division, the first of the Guard army commands to cross the Atlantic, has again been in action, and that among the units that have been in the thick of the fighting are the troops from New York and Wisconsin.

The 150th Machine Gun Battalion, which is made up of guardsmen from the old Second Wisconsin Infantry, appears to have suffered most in the engagement, for of the sixty-eight men who are named as severely wounded, fifty-six have been identified as members of the Wisconsin machine gun unit. The names of the remaining twelve may also be those of Wisconsin recruits not in the directory of the Rainbow Division. Lieutenant George W. Behrand is among the Wisconsin wounded.

Of the New Yorkers named in the list the best known is perhaps Lieutenant Patrick J. Dowling of 170 West Ninety-eighth Street. Lieutenent Dowling belongs to Company K of the 165th Infantry, (the old 69th New York,) the company to which all of the identified New York casualties reported yesterday belong. Lieutenant Dowling was slightly wounded. His mother was notified of this in a telegram from the War Department yesterday.

Lieutenant Dowling is 31 years old. He attended the preparatory department of the University of Dublin before he came to this country from Ireland at the age of 16. He was on the Mexican border during the mobilization of 1916 with the 69th Regiment. He attended the first Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburgh, from which he was commissioned and sent to Camp Mills at Mineola, L. I.

Mrs. Agnes Connely of 2,325 Third Avenue received a communication from the War Department yesterday stating that her son, Private Thomas Connely, 22 years old, a member of the 165th regiment, was missing. Before he enlisted in the regiment Connely was a machinist in this city. Mrs. Connely described her son as a "real fighter."

"He was a happy-go-lucky sort of boy," she said, "but in a fight I feel certain that he would give every ounce of him toward the defeat of the enemy."

Major Kimble a West Pointer.

Major Edward R. Kimble, Engineer Corps, United States Army, who died on April 9 of wounds, was the son of Mrs. E. V. H. Kimble, whose address is 2,318 Broadway, Galveston, Texas. Major Kimble was graduated from West Point as an honor man in the class of '15, and was commissioned a Second Lieutenant of the Corps of Engineers. His promotion had been rapid, and he was recently commissioned a Major. He was born in Oregon and was appointed to the Military Academy from Texas. He served about a year at the Washington Barracks and accompanied a batalion of engineers to France with one of the earliest expeditionary contingents.

Sergeant William B. Montross, reported slightly wounded, is from Fort Washington, L. I., where he has been a well-known citizen for years. Sergeant Timothy J. Sullivan, also wounded, formerly lived at 314 East Fifty-second Street.

Corporal John Farrell, reported slightly wounded, lived when in New York at 317 First Avenue, while Thomas J. Fleming, who is listed as a mechanic in the Rainbow directory, came from Phoenicia, Ulster County. Private John L. Sullivan lived with his parents at 350 East Fourteenth Street when he became a Rainbow man. The home of Private Lawrence Finnerty is given as 459 West Thirty-fifth Street. Private Robert

Report Hindenburg Wounded Slightly by Bomb of Airman

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

REPORT U.S. MARINES ARE IN VLADIVOSTOK

Harbin Advices Regarded as Not Improbable by the State Department.

NO POLITICAL SIGNIFICANCE

Consuls at Port Tell Russians Forces Will Be Withdrawn When Order Is Restored.

HARBIN, April 5, (Associated Press.)—American marines have been landed at Vladivostok, as well as British and Japanese forces, according to advices from that place. The Americans are in control of the docks, while the Japanese are guarding the railway and ammunition depots.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Positive statements were made in official quarters tonight that neither the State Department nor Navy Department had received any official confirmation of the report from Harbin that American marines had been landed at Vladivostok. However, if American lives or property were endangered at Vladivostok, the commanding officer of the American warship there would have the same right to land for their protection as did the Japanese and British armed naval forces, and it would not cause surprise if the report should later be officially confirmed that American marines have landed.

The State Department attaches no political significance to the landing of the British and Japanese forces, which is known officially to be the usual method for the protection of lives and property. It is clear, therefore, that it would not regard as of political significance any landing of American marines deemed necessary by the ranking American naval officer on the scene.

LONDON, April 11.—The British Government has no reason to suppose the American Government does not approve of the landing of British and Japanese forces at Vladivostok, Lord Robert Cecil, Parliamentary Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said in the House of Commons today in replying to a question.

The foreign Consuls in Vladivostok officially have informed the President of the local Zemstvo that the landing of allied marines there was due to anarchy and that the forces will be withdrawn as soon as the Consuls consider that order has been restored, according to a Vladivostok telegram received in Petrograd and forwarded by Reuter's correspondent.

The Russian Foreign Minister, M. Tchitcherin, has informed the Chinese Government that the Russian Soviet Government will regard relations between the Chinese authorities and former Russian diplomats as interference in Russian internal affairs and as assistance to the enemies of the Council of People's Commissaries.

[The Russians referred to are representatives of the former Russian régime who are supporting the movement in Eastern Siberia and Mongolia to overthrow the Bolsheviki.]

PEKING, April 6, (Associated Press.)—A high telegraph official of the Government has investigated reports that Germans are enlisting Chinese, Japanese, and Korean telegraphers at Harbin and Chang-Chun for service on the Chinese Eastern Railway. He declares that no telegraphers have left their posts recently in China except possibly in outer Mongolia, where the offices are not under Government control. Strict orders have been issued against the granting of permission to leave the telegraph offices without fullest investigation.

TOKIO, April 6, (Associated Press.)—Special dispatches received here today from Vladivostok say that the proclamation issued by Admiral Sadakichi Kato, member of the Japanese Admiralty Council, giving reasons for the landing of Japanese created a good impression among the Russians. Japanese marines are guarding the foreign settlements. An armed guard of 300 Japa-

Charles's Telegram to William Before Letter Was Produced

VIENNA, April 11, (via Paris.)—An official statement giving the text of a telegram from Emperor Charles to Emperor William relative to the claim of Premier Clemenceau that the former recognized the claims of France to Alsace-Lorraine, was issued today. The telegram reads:

"I accuse M. Clemenceau of piling up lies to escape the web of lies in which he is involved, making the false assertion that I in some manner recognized France's claims to Alsace-Lorraine as just.

"I indignantly repel the assertion. At the moment when Austro-Hungarian cannon are firing alongside of the German artillery on the western front, no proof is necessary that I am fighting for your provinces."

The telegram concludes that no intrigue can endanger the perfect solidarity between the two empires.

PARIS, April 11.—The following official note was issued tonight:

Once caught in the cogwheels of lying, there is no means of stopping. Emperor Charles, under Berlin's eye, is taking on himself the lying denials of Count Czernin, and thus compels the French Government to supply the proof. Herewith is the text of an autograph letter communicated on March 31, 1917, by Prince Sixtus de Bourbon, the Emperor of Austria's brother-in-law, to President Poincaré, and communicated immediately, with the Prince's consent, to the French Premier:

"My Dear Sixtus: The end of the third year of this war, which has brought so much mourning and grief into the world, approaches. All the peoples of my empire are more closely united than ever in the common determination to safeguard the integrity of the monarchy at the cost even of the heaviest sacrifices.

"Thanks to their union, with the generous co-operation of all nationalities, my empire and monarchy have succeeded in resisting the gravest assaults for nearly three years. Nobody can question the military advantages secured by my troops, particularly in the Balkans.

"France, on her side, has shown force, resistance, and dashing courage which are magnificent. We all unreservedly admire the admirable bravery, which is traditional to her army, and the spirit of sacrifice of the entire French people.

"Therefore it is a special pleasure to me to note that, although for the moment adversaries, no real divergence of views or aspirations separates many of my empire from France, and that I am justified in hoping that my keen sympathy for France, joined to that which prevails in the whole monarchy, will forever avoid a return of the state of war, for which no responsibility can fall on me.

"With this in mind, and to show in a definite manner the reality of

British, Outnumbered, Fight Fiercely To Hold Foe at Messines Ridge

Wounded and Women Refugees Move Past Reinforcements Rushing Up on Roads Behind Battle Area—Civilians Gassed in Pethune and Shelled in Many Villages.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, April 11.—Yesterday afternoon and today the enemy exerted all his strength in men and guns in the battle now raging from the River Lys to Wytschaete, and the British troops have been fighting without respite to hold him on their main defensive positions and thrust him back from important ground by repeated counterattacks.

Once again the British are outnumbered, and it is only by the courage and stubborn will of battalions weakened by losses and of individual soldiers animating their comrades by acts of brave example that the enemy has been unable to make rapid progress and, as at Wytschaete and Messines, has been flung back with most bloody losses.

The British had to give ground along the Lys canal south of Armentières, blowing up bridges behind them and the railway bridge at Armentières, and the enemy is now trying to thrust forward south of Merville by bending back the British line from Lestrem and getting his guns across the Lys.

This he has been able to do in some places by temporary bridges, which were shelled to pieces as he crossed, and under the British fire his engineers are trying to build a stronger bridge southwest of Erquinhem, where in happier days there was a British Red Cross hospital.

The defenders had to fall back from Armentières, holding the line from Nieppe to Ste. Enwerck and the city of Armentières, where once there was gay life even in time of war, with many bright little restaurants and tea spots, until the enemy poured shellfire over them and filled all the houses and cellars with poison gas. He is now King of No Man's Land between the lines.

Ceaseless Tumult of Gunfire.

This morning there was a ceaseless tumult of gunfire, loud and terrible, over all this countryside. There were strange and terrible scenes on all the roads leading to the battle zone where British infantry and gunners were going forward to stem the tide. Masses of transport moved and civilians passed them in retreat to villages outside the wide area of shell rangs, and wounded men came staggering down afoot, if they could walk, or were brought down by ambulances, threading their way through all this surge and swell of war.

If not badly hit no man who had any strength to walk would use an ambulance. He walked for weaker comrades, and I saw little groups of English and Scottish soldiers with bandaged arms and heads standing about for a rest on the way back and chatting quietly to villagers, old women and girls, mixed up in the most tragic way with the scenes of war which had suddenly engulfed their homes.

Here and there stretcher bearers waited with their burdens on the roadsides. Among them were men of the Black Watch, with the red hackle in their bonnets, calm and grave like statues beside their wounded comrades lying there with white, upturned faces and never a murmur or groan. They were the heroes who yesterday, with gallant hearts, came up at a great pace when the enemy was in Wytschaete and Messines, and in a fierce counterattack drove him off the crest of the ridge and dealt him a deadly blow there on that high ground, which was won in the battle of last June, when English, Irish, and New Zealand troops stormed the ridge and captured thousands of prisoners.

The enemy yesterday fell in great numbers and his dead lie thick, and though he came on wave after wave, after all his day's agony and struggle he had not gained a yard of the crest, but was beaten back.

Lancashires Again Hold Foe Off.

I have already told how south of Armentières, between Neuve Chapelle and Fleurbaix, the centre of our line was pressed back by an attack against the Portugueee, but how Lancashire men of the 55th Division held firm on the right wing by Givenchy, in attacks and counterattacks in which that patch of ruined earth changed hands several times yesterday.

Today the enemy renewed his attacke there without succeee, and though those Lancashire lads have been hard pressed, they have never given up and have killed uncountable numbers of German storm troops. They wiped out wave after wave and company after company, but always more men came, as though with inexhaustible reeerves.

The enemy, repulsed here, tried yesterday to drive further north, where he had gained ground, and to cross the Lys Canal north and south of Estaires. In parts it is shallow enough for his troops to wade. They tried to do this, but the machine-gun fire of the Scottish caught these men in a ditch and heaped it with their bodies. In the passage of the Lys he was more successful, striking south of Estaires toward Lestrem while pressing forward higher up by Armentières.

Yesterday afternoon the situation was anxious for the British up there. Some Northumberland Fusiliers and Royal Scots, after desperate fighting against overwhelming odds, were

GERMANS ENTER ESTAIRES

But on the Lawe, After Early Success, They Are Thrown Back with Heavy Loss.

LONDON, April 11.—All day long the Germans have been hurling great masses of troops at the British lines on the northern battlefront, from La Bassée to the Ypres-Comines Canal, southeast of Ypres.

As the result of the heavy assaults the British troops have been forced to give ground at some points, notably at Estaires (seven miles southwest of Armentières) and Steenwerck, (five miles west of Armentières,) where Haig's men were pushed back to just north of these places.

At other points the British held fast against terrific pressure. In the region along the Lawe (south of Estaires) the 51st British Division by conspicuous bravery defeated the Germans in counterattacks and recovered ground previously lost to superior numbers.

The evacuation of Armentières was announced in the day report of the War Office, which gives as a reason that the city was "full of gas."

Particularly hard fighting took place in the area north of Armentières. Here the Germans made some progress in the neighborhood of Ploegsteert Wood.

Still further north the British lines were the object of a heavy attack this morning near Wytschaete and Hollebeke, but the foe was "completely repulsed," according to Haig.

There was practically no fighting on the southern portion of the battlefront today.

The enemy pressed his attacks strongly throughout the day on the whole northern battlefront.

Heavy and continuous assaults have been delivered by fresh German divisions in the region of the River Lawe, between Loisne and Lestrem. In this fighting the Fifty-first Division has beaten off incessant attacks with great loss to the enemy, and by vigoroue and successful counterattacks has recaptured positions into which the enemy had forced his way.

Heavy fighting has taken place at Estaires and between Estaires and Steenwerck. In this sector also the enemy attacked in strength and succeeded in pushing back our line to just north of these places.

North of Armentières a determined attack developed this morning against our positions in the neighborhood of Ploegsteert Wood, and the enemy made some progress.

Further north a heavy attack was launched this morning against our lines in the neighborhood of Wytschaete and Hollebeke, but was completely repulsed by the Ninth Division with great loss to the enemy.

On the remainder of the British front the day again passed comparatively quietly.

The battle is continuing on the

Severe fighting has taken place in the neighborhood of the Lawe and Lys Canals, from about Lestrem to Armentières. Our troops have been withdrawn from Armentières, which is full of gas.

North of Armentières, there is little change in the situation. Heavy fighting was continuing at a late hour last night in the neighborhood of Ploegsteert, Messines, and Wytschaete.

On the remainder of the British front there is nothing to report.

British Holding Messines Ridge.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, April 11, (Associated Press.) — Fighting was continuing this morning north of Armentières, with the British still holding Messines Ridge and Wytschaete, which yesterday changed hands several times.

During the day the enemy succeeded in entering not only these positions, but La Creche, Nieppe, and Hollebeke. Vigorous counterattacks forced the enemy from all these places.

The Germans this morning were in possession of about half of the village of Ploegsteert and Ploegsteert Wood, just north of Armentières.

The Germans are particularly desirous of capturing Messines Ridge and Wytschaete, and pressed their attacks there hard throughout the day. Much sanguinary hand-to-hand fighting took place at these places, the tide of battle surging back and forth for many hours before the enemy finally abandoned temporarily his attempts here.

The heavy enemy attacks north and south of Armentières yesterday resulted in the advance of the German positions until the town was in a deep and narrow pocket, the mouth of which was on a line drawn approximately north and south through Steenwerck.

The enemy artillery was active in the Somme region this morning.

Entered Lestrem, Then Driven Out.

LONDON, April 11.—A Reuter dispatch from British Headquarters says that yesterday noon the enemy occupied Lestrem, but in the course of the afternoon the British drove him out and across the River Lawe.

BATTLE GOING WELL, BERLIN DECLARES

Successes at Estaires Reported—Hollebeke Stormed Wednesday, It Is Stated.

BERLIN, April 11, (via London.) —That the offensive operations near Armentières are taking a "favorable course" is the statement of the headquarters report tonight. It adds that "the suburbs of Armentières" have been penetrated.

The day bulletin stated that between Armentières and Festubert, (three miles west of La Bassée,) General von Quast's army took positions on the southern bank of the Lys and on the eastern bank of the Lawe.

The night communication is as follows:

The battle near Armentières is taking a further favorable course. We have penetrated into the suburbs of Armentières.

The day report from headquarters reads:

The battle of Armentières has been in full swing since April 9. Between Armentières and Festubert General von Quast's army has captured English and Portuguese positions on the southern bank of the Lys and on the eastern bank of the Lawe.

After storming the Grenier Wood and Neuve Chapelle in its first assault across the swampy crater field, it overpowered the wide plain prepared for stubborn resistance, with its innumerable farms and houses and clusters of trees, which by the labor of years had been constructed into strong points of support.

The crossing of the Lys was forced by the 370th Infantry Regiment.

Yesterday the attack was continued on an even wider front. General Sixt von Arnim's troops captured Hollebeke and the first English line adjoining to the south. They stormed the heights of Messines and maintained it against strong enemy counterattacks.

To the south of Waasten-Warneton they pushed forward as far as Ploegsteert Wood and reached the Ploegsteert-Armentières road.

General von Quast's army crossed the Lys at several points between Armentières and Estaires and is engaged in battle with freshly brought up English troops on the northern bank of the river to the south of Estaires. We fought our way to the Lawe and to the region northeast of Bethune.

The number of prisoners has increased to considerably over 10,000, including a Portuguese General.

FIRED 400 MINE THROWERS.

AMSTERDAM, April 11. — Describing how the Germans crossed the River Oise, south of La Fère, at the beginning of the offensive on the Somme front, the war correspondent of the Cologne Gazette says:

"Four hundred heavy mine throwers were brought to one spot and joined together so that they could be fired by electricity at the same time. Immediately after the mine throwers had been discharged, bridges, which had been

The first stage of the battle was begun on the front from La Bassée to a point south of Armentières and the second saw an extension of the fighting northward to Hollebeke on the Ypres-Comines Canal.

In yesterday's operations the Germans made gains in the region from Estaires north to Steenwerck, west of Armentières. The latter place, given up on Wednesday according to the British official report because it was full of gas, had also become untenable because it was at the point of a long and narrow salient.

Apparently the heaviest conflict of yesterday took place in and near Hollebeke, the Germans suffering a severe repulse with great slaughter. The whole line in this area, except in the neighborhood of Ploegsteert, seems to be holding well.

As was to have been expected, the British were forced yesterday to give up the town of Armentières. In the attack of the day before, which was generally summarized yesterday, it was seen that the German advance between Warneton and the Lys on the north and their advance to the south of Armentières threw around the town almost a three-quarter circle. It was therefore subjected to attack from three sides. It would have been dangerous in the extreme to have tried to hold it in the face of this condition. It would in addition have been a useless sacrifice of troops, as the town was entirely without military significance. As a base for supplies of men it ceased to exist in 1914, when the Germans threw their lines close to the southern and eastern outskirts of the city. The Germans therefore gained but little, if anything, when they took it other than that much additional territory.

The important element in this region is the Messines-Wytschaete ridge and the Passchendaele ridge to the north of it. As long as this position holds out the British lines are safe. The Germans are confronted here with the same identical situation which prevails on the Somme front. As has been stated in previous summaries, the entire success of the Germans toward Amiens and the sea is held up and has been held up for the last ten days by the British hold on the Heights of Vimy and of the Notre Dame de Lorette. They acted as the hinge upon which the entire British line swung as it moved westward under the German pressure.

Now we have a repetition of this in the north. The Germans pushed in the British centre, both flanks holding fast. What little ground was lost on the southern flank at Givenchy was immediately regained by an attack which netted in addition to the ground gained about a thousand prisoners. On the north, the Messines ridge acted as the stumbling block. Thus the Germans, in case of a westward advance, would have both flanks in the extreme danger of a bastion overlooking their entire field of manoeuvre, and from which artillery could pour its fire into their rear as well as against their front and flanks.

The danger of such a position is obvious. It would be the same as in the case of the Somme, only doubled, since both flanks would be affected, whereas in the Somme case it is only the northern flank which is involved. The fighting in the north has, therefore, centred about this ridge.

Messines forms the southern tip of this ridge, which from Messines curves around in a crescent as it goes north, the crescent passing through Wytschaete, which is the centre, to a point due north of Messines, the line joining these two points being almost exactly the chord of the curve. Between Messines and Wytschaete, a heavy branch of this ridge breaks off to the westward, this branch being connected with the main ridge by a saddle which is about two miles across. Beyond this saddle the ground rises to the crest of a decided hill, about 250 feet higher even than the main Messines ridge. East of the ridge, however, there is nothing but the absolutely flat unbroken country so characteristic of Flanders lowlands. As to the ridge itself, at Messines it is low, the ground rising decidedly from Messines toward Wytschaete. In order that the southern flank, which is the vital flank, may be affected the northern flank must go. Otherwise, instead of gaining anything, the Germans have only placed themselves in a most precarious position.

The fighting of the last twenty-four hours has for the most part been for the possession of the Messines-Wytschaete positions. The Germans have made attack after attack against this ridge, have even entered the British lines in the village of Messines but have been promptly ejected by counterattacks so that the important positions are still intact. The British have, moreover, now had time to summon reserves to the vital point, as the Germans themselves report fresh British divisions thrown into the attack. The British should be able to hold out as long as the Germans, holding the advantages they do.

At the same time we must remember that the greater portion by far of the German strength is centered on the British front. The French have been relatively inactive in the fighting in this attack. In the region of Montdidier and immediately to the north as far as Hangard they have been engaged heavily. But only a few divisions have been affected. The Germans are therefore holding the portions of their line east of Noyons with the minimum number of troops while the concentration of the greater portion is against the British line. It is very probable, therefore, that the British are seriously outnumbered, even though the Allies as a whole outnumber the Germans in the west. But even so it is a question how long the Germans can keep going with their present rate of loss.

kept in readiness, were thrown across the Oise and troops stormed the southern suburb of Chauny, killing or taking prisoners the enemy troops there."

GUNS BUSY NEAR MONTDIDIER.

French Beat Off Two Attacks Near Noyon.

PARIS, April 11.—Only minor operations took place on the French front today. There was some violent gunfire north of Montdidier and near Lassigny, and two German attacks near Noyon were beaten off.

The War Office announcement tonight reads:

There was violent artillery fighting at certain points on the front north of Montdidier and in the region of Lassigny last night and this morning.

We repulsed two enemy attacks, which were quite spirited, in the sector of Noyon.

There was intermittent cannonading on both banks of the river and around Le Prêtre Wood.

The day bulletin reads:

French artillery developed activity in the course of the night along the front between Montdidier and Noyon. A German detachment was caught under the French fire in the region of Orvillers-Sorel, and dispersed before it was able to approach our lines.

Northwest and east of Rheims the French made successful raids, bringing back a dozen prisoners and one machine gun.

In the Champagne the Germans attacked advanced French posts east of Souain. They were repulsed after a spirited engagement. Another effort in Apremont Forest was broken up by the French fire.

There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front.

On April 10 two German airplanes were brought down by the fire of French machine guns.

SLAUGHTER AT HOLLEBEKE.

British Rifles and Machine Guns Mowed Down the Foe.

OTTAWA, April 11. — Telegraphing from British Headquarters in France this evening, the Reuter correspondent says:

"The situation in Flanders is regarded today as fairly well in hand, but the fighting continues on a heavy scale and is likely to continue.

"What success the Germans have achieved developed out of an advance in the centre of the original front of attack, helped by the misty weather. The territory which the enemy overran was very sparsely populated by civilians, and as regards the character of the country it is a barren gain. Moreover, the enemy communications are lengthened across long tracts of clay.

"The weather has improved, and at 10 o'clock this morning the enemy made a formidable attack against Hollebeke. Fighting of great intensity followed. Masses of the enemy advanced in waves over the heavy ground flanking Roosebeek, making a great target for the riflemen and machine guns, which wrought what is described as terrible execution.

"Comparatively few of the enemy got to grips with the defenders, and eventually the attack was completely repulsed, the straggling retreat being followed by the field guns until the enemy disappeared in the mist.

"Around Ploegsteert Wood and Estaires there has been continuous fighting. The enemy has brought up more reserves and we have also thrown in reinforcements.

"Northwest of Armentières, in the direction of Ploegsteert, large bodies of German infantry are reported by our airmen as massing. Artillery, heavily concentated there on the evacuation of Armentières, carried out very successful firing on these bodies. The enemy is not attempting to press our retirement. The whole place is a vast pit of mustard gas and our soldiers welcome the release from the place."

WASHINGTON WONDERS WHAT GERMAN AIM IS

WASHINGTON, April 11.—In today's reports from France on the battle north of La Bassée, military observers here read with satisfaction of the British counterattacks which overcame much of the advantage gained by the Germans in their first rush.

The situation has not sufficiently clarified, it is said, however, to determine whether the German effort is a separate movement aimed at the channel ports or an extension of the Amiens onslaught, designed to widen the base of the wedge aimed at that town.

In any case, the British have not allowed the new thrust to gain great momentum, despite the evacuation of Armentières itself. The town has been constantly under gunfire, and had no strategic importance. Its evacuation was made certain by the extent of the first penetration of the British lines on both sides, leaving it at the apex of a narrow and dangerous wedge.

Some officers think that the whole movement in this region is designed by German strategists to offset a similar danger on a greater scale to their own main front of operations to the southward. The advanced German troops in the Amiens region are, roughly, twenty-five to thirty miles beyond the line which they assaulted when the drive began three weeks ago. The width of the break in that line is fifty to sixty miles.

The situation fulfills to a remarkable degree the forecasts of the Versailles military experts that the German drive might succeed in penetrating the lines to the extent of one-half of the width of the sector assailed, and it is assumed that the allied council calculated with confidence when the prediction was made that having driven in thus far the enemy would be compelled to seek to widen his battlefront.

What considerations entered into the formulation of the Versailles prediction are unknown. Some officers think, however, that experience has taught the Generals who form the council that no attack against a fortified line can be safe if the base of the triangle at the front of attack is less than double the length of the distance penetrated.

The extremes of the allied line now assailed from south to north are more than 100 miles apart, if the whole German movement is regarded as one action. It was suggested today that the Germans might plan to transfer the weight of their assault northward so as to throw the apex of their wedge toward a point on the coast west of Boulogne and Calais, the main British bases, at the narrowest point in the Channel.

The only other theory advanced in explanation of the Armentières thrust was that it might be a wholly separate operations, aimed directly at those ports.

WOUNDED POUR INTO AIX.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 11.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail from The Hague says that according to reports from an usually reliable source, Bulgarian and Austrian troops are replacing German troops in some of the German garrisons.

The following account of the arrival of wounded at Aix and at certain Belgian places has been received at The Hague:

"The transport of German wounded now takes place in large, ordinary closed trucks, as the supply of Red Cross cars is totally inadequate, and even the trucks are not always marked with the Red Cross. The flooring of the trucks is usually covered with a thin layer of straw, but not always. In some cases wounded men have been seen lying on bare boards in the same filthy clothing which they wore when wounded.

"By way of concealing the facts from the civil population the doors of luggage vans and other trucks in which the wounded are conveyed are often left half ajar, but in such a manner that it is impossible to see inside. By the doors stand Red Cross bearers or members of the ordinary train personnel laughing, chatting, or smoking, so that the ordinary observer would hardly imagine that the trucks were full of badly wounded men.

"At Aix thousands of wounded arrive daily, and many have not even had their wounds properly bound up. As far as possible they are transported from the station to the hospitals in closed cars, and the neighborhoods of the hospitals are completely barred to the public. The big civil hospital at Aix was emptied some weeks ago and is now packed with wounded men.

"Despite all precautions, facts regarding the losses leak out and the obvious anxiety to conceal them only arouses increased anxiety among that part of the public which has an inkling of the truth. Hence there are rumors of great defeats, to which the local press calls attention. In Aix it is said that during the early days of the offensive the severely wounded were brought through the city, the majority being sent on further, after at most one or two days."

AMERICANS LOOK TO FOCH TO WIN

PARTISANSHIP A PERIL

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 11.—Among Americans with good information on military conditions I find in the last few days a growing belief that the Germans can only succeed by dividing the French and English, and that every Hun blow is struck with the deliberate plan of creating a situation in which each nation would be drawn in the direction of its own self-interest and preposessions.

As the offensive proceeds the German objectives become clearer. From the enemy viewpoint the most desirable possible development would be a menace to Calais that would absorb British attention simultaneously with a drive toward Paris that would similarly alarm the French and divert them from their common objects. The forces which work toward such ends are both subtle and potent. So powerful were they that only after the retreat of the Fifth Army was it possible to bring the French and English together under a single leadership.

Until then the Germans enjoyed the overwhelming advantage of being able to choose either of two antagonists against whom to launch an attack. Both the French and English were confident that the German attack would be aimed at them and dispositions were made accordingly. Meanwhile the Germans were able to select the weakest point at the most favorable moment for themselves.

The appointment of General Foch cured these faults for the time being, but observers here are disquieted by the discussion in London, appearing in the same journalistic quarter, and apparently having the same inspiration as the attacks of two months ago, which embarrassed the efforts of the Versailles Council to bring about unity of command. Their are veiled protests against control over the British Army by a foreign General and attacks on the civilian government for the shortage of men, for which, if the facts could only be told, the responsibility lies in a different quarter.

The Allies look confidently to America which is far removed from strongly local considerations, and is able to take a clear and nonpartisan view. America has consented to set aside individualism and permit her troops to be brigaded with the French and British. She is rushing her infantry over with no thought of anything but saving the allied cause.

She is therefore in a position to bring great influence to bear for securing a big, broad spirit of co-operation.

All Americans here are agreed regarding the necessity of making General Foch's authority absolute. They trust him entirely. As a man and General he is fitted for the great task which the circumstances have laid upon him. He has the ability and the forces to win. But he must be supported solidly by all the Allies. He must be made to feel that he can safely plan far ahead and that in these supreme hours he can take measures on his own judgment without accounting to Parliaments or peoples.

Germany can be beaten, but only by depriving her of the advantage of opposing her unity to our disunity. In these last weeks or months national boundary lines must disappear and we must fight for all we are worth under one man who can and will boss the whole job.

PARIS VIEWS DRIVE IN NORTH AS FEINT

Believes That the Main Objective of the German Armies Is Still Amiens.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 11.—The immediate main objective of the Germans is still Amiens, for it is through the capture of that position that the enemy hopes best to effect the separation of the French and British armies. Experts here consider that the German attack in Flanders is a diversion, which is not likely to be pushed very far, but it is not overlooked that if the enemy can find a weak point in that part of the line he would, thanks to the excellent communications he possesses in Belgium and Northern France, press the attack toward the sea with all his energy.

All depends, as Marcel Hutin points out in the Echo de Paris this morning, on the rapid arrival of the British reserves to break the enemy effort to outflank Amiens both north and south. Major de Civrieux, in the Matin, foresees that the Germen attack will extend still further northward, in the direction of Calais and Boulogne, with the object of breaking in the Anglo-Belgian centre.

Recently taken prisoners, without exception, say the officers are assuring German troops the war will be ended this month. This may be evidence of German confidence, but it is more probably merely another piece of bluff, like Hindenburg's boast that he would be in Paris on April 1 and Ludendorff's promise to capture the French capital on or before Monday next.

forced to withdraw from Houplines, owing to the enemy's capture of Ploegsteert, and at the same time the enemy's pressure was intense south of Armentières, and he crossed the Lys below Erquinghem.

The Northumberland Fusiliers and their comrades, grievously few compared with the hostile hordes about them and almost, though never quite, out of touch with the troops on the right and left, took up the line from the junction of the Armentières railway with Le Bizet, while at the same time some of them holding around Nieppe were very isolated because the enemy at that time had penetrated into the village of Ste. Enwerck behind them.

At 7 o'clock last evening the enemy attacked all along this line, and after desperate fighting succeeded in forcing the British back a little northeast of Lestrem, and a few hundred yards back between Steenwerck and Armentières. But the gaps were filled up by gallant men, among whom were a trench mortar company, who made a fine counterattack and beat back the enemy. At a critical hour on the previous day a similar act had been done by 250 men of the Cyclist Corps, who reinforced the centre of the Portuguese lines and checked the enemy when his drive was a grave menace.

In the afternoon the battle spread northward into Flanders, the enemy opening with a more intense bombardment and attacking in heavy forces almost as far as Gheluvelt. There was fierce fighting around the White Château at Hollebeke, and the enemy worked from Hollebeke and up from Warneton and Ploegsteert in his rush for Wytschaete and Messines Ridge, which were his chief objectives.

It was then that some of the British troops made a great charge, hurling the enemy out of Wytschaete village, while other English battalions stormed the whole crest of the ridge and cleared it from end to end, though possibly the enemy still remained in the village of Messines, on the other side.

One thing in this new phase of the war is very cruel, and makes one's heart ache, however steeled it may be to war's inevitable brutalities. This is where poor people, noncombatants, are stricken by the enemy's ruthless methods.

It is not to be helped that as the German tide flows over new ground the menace and horror of this advance should travel ahead and cause the evacuation of the old people, women, young girls, and children from the villages where for nearly four years of war they had lived within sound of the guns but unhurt.

It was, however, brutal of the enemy to fling hundreds of gas shells without warning into a town like Bethune, crowded, as he knows, with civilians, just as last June he did into Armentières, and to scatter harassing fire of shrapnel and high velocity shells into little hamlets, remote from his fighting lines.

From Bethune there are many women and children in the hospitals suffering from gas poisoning, and today and yesterday I have been in villages where shells had fallen before the people had any chance to escape.

Through one village yesterday passed a man carrying a baby with its arm blown off. Many old men and women have been wounded.

All these people are very brave, astoundingly gallant. I have seen only a few women weeping today, though to them there is great cause for tears.

GERMANY OBJECTS TO WILSON'S TONE

Press Sees Baltimore Speech as New Attempt to Alienate the People.

RESENTS OUR PROPAGANDA

Charge That President's Addresses Were Garbled Is Untrue, Says Frankfurter Zeitung.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 11.—The Frankfurter Zeitung says President Wilson and the American press have adopted every conceivable means to hinder the German Government and to spread propaganda in Germany, especially to make known the Wilson speeches and messages. It says THE NEW YORK TIMES some time ago asserted in a long article that the German people were being kept uninformed and that they were beaten long ago, although the government had not allowed them to know it. After that, the paper says, it was proposed to spread information by dropping pamphlets and bombs from airplanes in the trenches and behind and that this was done in March with Mr. Wilson's speech of Jan. 8. French airmen distributing the pamphlets.

"The document we saw," the paper continues, "and which was brought from the front for inspection, shows that Wilson still believes that his utterances will affect the German people, for at the head of the note it is stated that passages unpublished in the German press are underlined."

The paper adds that, apart from its presumption, it is untrue, at least as far as the Koelnische Zeitung, the Frankfurter Zeitung, and some other German papers are concerned, whose text was identical with that distributed by the airmen.

"Mr. Wilson and Chief Censor Mr. Creel, who is certainly responsible for the statement, can reassure themselves, as the German press desires no better collaboration than the author of the peace message," the Frankfort paper comments. "It will be remembered that a few papers, such as the Koelnische Volkszeitung, refused to publish the whole of the speech, giving only a summary.

Discusses Baltimore Speech.

With respect to Mr. Wilson's Baltimore speech, the Frankfurter Zeitung, which often finds good points in Mr. Wilson's speeches, adopts an entirely different tone, conforming with that of most of the liberal press. The paper says Mr. Wilson's speech was forecast immediately after the German Chancellor's last utterance, but that a month and a half has elapsed since.

"This," says the Zeitung, "may be by chance, but it is more probable that important material reasons may have obliged the President to postpone his speech so long."

The paper says Dr. Hertling declared that he agreed with Mr. Wilson's four points as a basis for negotiations, but made it a condition that these points be recognized by the Entente Powers, as well as by America, and suggests that this has perhaps formed obstacles. It is asserted that the American press especially has given the impression that Washington had asked the Entente to make a thorough revision of war aims before the offensive, but failed.

The paper refers to Count Czernin's recent unusual friendliness toward the President, and says Mr. Wilson has not uttered one conciliatory word in reply, although he again talks of honorable peace.

"But are they more than words?" the paper asks." Czernin again asked him to negotiate on Feb. 25, proposing a practical basis. The President could have agreed to these proposals or offered counterproposals, but he did neither. Perhaps he will, on no account, make peace with an undefeated Germany. Perhaps he can go no further, because bound by the Entente's aggressive policy. The practical solution of this question leaves us indifferent. We can only state that the President's new speech does not make peace nearer, but obliges us to continue war."

The paper says that, as before, Mr. Wilson tried to separate the people from the Government, he now declares the German policy is directed by the military.

"Shall we continue to allow such interference, such denouncing of our interior politics?" the Zeitung asks. "It is natural that the German people should object to these methods."

The President, the paper says, cannot object to the Russian peace, as, it declares, Germany earnestly strove for a peace of understanding, but the Russian Government shattered this when Trotzky openly declared for force as a basis for peace.

The paper also objects to Mr. Wilson's statements about Germany wishing to rule supreme in Europe and even be master of Asia. It says the last word has not yet been spoken in regard to the future of Russia's border countries, and asserts Germany was even opposed by Russia in obtaining self-determination for these States. The Zeitung declares Mr. Wilson has no right to speak in such a tone of what is now happening in Russia, the Ukraine, and Finland, and argues that Mr. Wilson is careless enough even to speak of Persia and India.

"This American speech again shows us that Germany's duty at present lies on the battlefield of the west—Germany's duty and Germany's peace hopes," the paper concludes.

Tone More "Brutal" Than Ever.

The Vossische Zeitung, commenting on Mr. Wilson's recent speech, says it is still doubtful whether Germany has received the full text of the speech, as it was sent by the Reuter Agency, which, it alleges, may have intentionally left out passages. The paper declares the speech much more brutal in tone than the former ones and says Mr. Wilson made the Brest-Litovsk peace an excuse for this tone.

This sudden interest in Russia's fate, the paper declares, is not new, as the President evinced an interest in Russia by his telegram to the American Consul in Moscow.

"At that time," says the Zeitung, "we remarked that Wilson doubtless would intervene for a revision of the Brest-Litovsk peace at a general peace conference, after having driven Germany ta her eastern policy. We reminded our readers that through ex-Ambassador Gerard Mr. Wilson had opposed annexation in the east, promising to make good what the Western Powers took away. • • • Wilson's latest speech is proof that our assumption was right, and that Wilson will make the eastern peace the reason for a diplomatic campaign, the result of which will be to stir up the Allies, especially France, against Germany, and to insist on revision of the Brest-Litovsk agreement."

Count zu Reventlow in the Deutscha Tageszeitung says the Wilson speech is a chain of lies and that the leading motive is: "Under no circumstances must Germany win, but must be brought to her knees and be made to disappear as a continental power, as a sea power, and as an economical world competitor. • • • The German Empire and the Kaiser must be strafed."

Reventlow says there is nothing new in this speech, except that Germany must disappear, if possible at little cost, but if necessary at any price.

Telegraphed Even the Commas.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 11.—With reference to the Vossische Zeitung's allegation that parts of Mr. Wilson's speech may have been suppressed by the Reutar Agency, Sir Roderick Jones, General Manager of Reuter's, told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent tonight that every word of the President's speech was telegraphed abroad, "even to the commas," Sir Roderick added smilingly.

Emperor Charles's Admission of France's Right to Alsace-Lorraine

these feelings, I beg you to convey privately and unofficially to President Poincaré that I will support by every means, and by exerting all my personal influence with my allies, France's just claims regarding Alsace-Lorraine.

"Belgium should be entirely re-established in her sovereignty, retaining entirely her African possessions without prejudice to the compensations she should receive for the losses she has undergone.

"Serbia should be re-established in her sovereignty and, as a pledge of our good-will, we are ready to assure her equitable natural access to the Adriatic, and also wide economic concessions in Austria-Hungary. On her side, we will demand, as primordial and essential conditions, that Serbia cease in the future all relation with, and suppress every association or group whose political object aims at the disintegration of the monarchy, particularly the Serbian political society, Narodni Ochrana; that Serbia loyally and by every means in her power prevent any kind of political agitation, either in Serbia or beyond her frontiers, in the foregoing direction, and give assurances thereof under the guarantee of the Entente Powers.

"The events in Russia compel me to reserve my ideas with regard to that country until a legal definite Government is established there.

"Having thus laid my ideas clearly before you, I would ask you in turn, after consulting with these two powers, to lay before me the opinion first of France and England, with a view thus to preparing the ground for an understanding on the basis of which official preliminary negotiations could be taken up and reach a result satisfactory to all.

"Hoping that thus we will soon be able together to put a limit to the sufferings of so many millions of men and families now plunged in sadness and anxiety, I beg to assure you of my warmest and most brotherly affection.

"CHARLES."

The French note adds:

"Count Czernin, having recognized by his note of April 8 the existence of this negotiation due to the initiative of a personage of 'a rank far above his,' the Austrian Government is now summoned to give an explanation of the 'attempt' avowed by it and of the details of the conversation of its delegates."

'ANDERSON' HAD PARLEY WITH COUNT APPONYI

Unauthorized Talk, Called "Negotiations" in Vienna, Is Explained by Lansing.

LONDON, April 11.—Negotiations regarding the possibility of peace between the United States and Austria-Hungary have been carried on between Professor Anderson of Washington and Count Stephen Tisza and Count Julius Andrassy, former Hungarian Premiers, according to a Vienna dispatch to the Berliner Tageblatt, as quoted in an Exchange Telegraph message from Copenhagen.

The dispatch also says that the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Office admits that various attempts have been made to obtain a general peace, and that Emperor Charles has had negotiations with several persons who have international connections.

The Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, Count Czernin, has returned unexpectedly to Vienna from a visit to German Headquarters, where he conferred with Emperor William. The dispatch says that the sudden return of the Count caused a sensation in Austrian political circles.

The stand taken by the Czechs against Count Czernin, the dispatch continues, overshadows the controversy between the Count and Premier Clemenceau of France. In Prague on Saturday a Czech meeting of protest against Count Czernin will be held.

The position of Count Czernin is said to be much less secure since his recent speech and the publication of the French official statement that Emperor Charles considered the French demand for Alsace-Lorraine just, according to the dispatch from Copenhagen. There is also growing dissatisfaction in Germany with Imperial Chancellor von Hertling and Foreign Secretary von Kuhlmann and efforts are being made to replace von Hertling with Dr. von Helfferich, former Vice Chancellor.

The Austrian Embassy in Berlin officially denies the French statement attributed to Emperor Charles, but does not insist that there was never any talk of an acknowledgment by the Emperor of the justice of the Alsace-Lorraine demands.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Secretary Lansing today denied that any "Professor Anderson" of Washington had been authorized to carry on negotiations with Count Stephen Tisza and other Austrian or Hungarian officials on behalf of this Government looking toward peace or for any other purpose. From a high official source it was learned that a Mr. Anderson had talked with Count Apponyi at Budapest, but that he acted under no authority or instructions from the United States Government.

It was officially stated that the facts in the case, so far as this Government was aware, were that about the time that the United States declared war on Austria-Hungary an American named Anderson, who was in Europe, was invited by Count Apponyi, the Hungarian statesman, to visit him in Budapest. Anderson, it was explained at the State Department, went, without the assent of the State Department, to the Hungarian capital, listened to what Count Apponyi had to say, and reported what he heard from the Count to the United States Government.

It was further asserted at the State Department today that it was not the understanding there that Anderson saw Count Czernin, or Counts Tisza and Andrassy, as asserted in a dispatch to the Berlin Tageblatt.

It was made very plain at the State Department that Anderson was not authorized by the United States Government to conduct any peace negotiations or to act for it in any capacity in connection with his acceptance of Count Apponyi's invitation. The department declined to say what information it had received from Anderson as a result of his talk with Count Apponyi, and the full name of the "Mr. Anderson" was withheld.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 11.—The "Professor Anderson" mentioned in connection with alleged peace negotiations is thought here to be Hendrick Christian Andersen, the sculptor, who now resides in Rome. Mr. Andersen was born in Norway, but was brought to the United States in infancy. In recent years he has advocated in Washington and various European capitals a plan for a world centre, at The Hague or elsewhere, in which all the nations of the earth might come together for peaceful negotiations. He is the founder of an organization called the World Conscience Society.

About a year ago Mr. Andersen explained the details of his plan for a world city to Edgar Ansel Mowrer, Roma correspondent of The Chicago Daily News. Andersen said at the time that his project had been indorsed by Vice President Marshall, David Starr Jordan, King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, King Albert of Belgium, Lord Curzon, Leon Bourgeois, and many others.

His plan embodied building a monumental international city in a neutral country, with centres for sciences, arts, religion, and commercial exhibitions, the cost to be borne by the various nations.

AN AUSTRIAN PROTEST.

Congress of Oppressed Nationalities Adopts Platform at Rome.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—An official dispatch received from Rome today states that the Congress of Oppressed Austrian Nationalities, which was inaugurated by the Mayor of Rome, has ended its sessions. The representatives of the various nationalities approved a memorandum setting forth the aspirations of the races held under Austro-Hungarian rule. This memorandum runs:

"1. Every people proclaims it to be its right to determine its own nationality and national unity and complete independence.

"2. Every people knows that the Austro-Hungarian monarchy is an instrument of German domination and a fundamental obstacle to the realization of its rights to free development and self-government.

"3. The Congress recognizes the necessity of fighting against the common oppressors.

The representatives of the Jugoslavs agree:

"That the unity and independence of the Jugoslav nation is considered of vital importance by Italy.

"That the deliverance of the Adriatic Sea and its defense from any enemy is of capital interest to the two peoples.

"That territorial controversies will be amicably settled on the principle of nationality and in such a manner as not to injure the vital interests of the two nations; interests which will be taken into account at the peace conferences."

The Polish delegates added their declaration that they consider Germany as the principal enemy of Poland, and that they believe that the disintegration of the Austro-Hungarian Empire is the only way through which they can obtain their independence from Germany.

EMPEROR WROTE IN CRISIS.

Several influences may have combined to give Emperor Charles not only a moral but a political pretext for his letter of March 31, 1917. It was twelve days after the German retreat to the Hindenburg line and seventeen days after the Russian revolution, which had received its incipient inspiration from the belief by members of the Duma that the Imperial Council of Ministers was meditating a separate peace.

As contemporary press opinion in Vienna and Budapest shows that the subjects of the Emperor, statesmen and Generals, believed that Russia was on the point of renewing the war where the great offensive of Brusiloff, June 4-Nov. 15, 1916, had left it.

Then, too, on May 31 the Emperor would be forced to convene the Austrian Parliament, which had not met since the war began. The Bohemians as well as the Croatio-Slavonians and Poles were clamoring for autonomy, and the prospect was that the 222 German Nationalists, Social Democrats, and Christian Socialists on whom the Government could count in the Reichsrat would be overwhelmed by Bohemians, Poles, Ukrainians, Croatio-Slavonians, and independents with a solid vote of 294.

NEW GERMAN WARSHIPS.

Two Dreadnoughts Added to the Navy Since War Started.

AMSTERDAM, April 11.—Two new dreadnoughts have been added to the German fleet during the war, according to the Vossische Zeitung, and have participated in the bombardment of the fortifications of the islands of Oesel and Dago.

These vessels are the Baden and Bayern, which were launched in 1915 at Kiel and Danzig. They fire thirty-eight-centimeter shells.

HOW CAREY CLOSED THE GAP TO AMIENS

Got His Orders at 2 A. M. and Proceeded to Gather Men of Every Kind to Fight.

ONLY KNEW HE HAD TO HOLD

So the Mongrel Force Held far Six Days, Inspired by Their Leader, Tireless and Fearless.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 11.—Brig. Gen. Sandeman Carey, to whose splendid achievement during the first phase of the great battle now raging in France Premier Lloyd George paid such a high tribute in the House of Commons, is one of those fortunate individuals to whom chance has come after years of preparation and who has proved himself equal to it.

An old regular officer, sprung from a well-known Guernsey family, he commanded a battery of field artillery in the South African war. In the present war he had won a Commandership of the Bath before his recent feat, and he had been promoted to be a Brigadier, but he was only an artillery General, and he had no reason to hope for an opportunity of specially distinguishing himself.

His chance came suddenly on the sixth day of the German offensive. The enemy had entered Albert and Roye and were advancing rapidly along the Somme River. The weak spot in the British front, from near Sailly-Laurette to the little stream, called the Luce River, was right ahead of them, but no troops could be found at the moment to reinforce it. Only some details and odds and ends of the various supply forces were within reach and never had a British Army greater cause to bless the efficiency of its flying-men than when they beat off the hostile scouts and prevented them from discovering it.

Somehow such men in khaki as these were must be collected. Somehow they must be organized into a fighting unit and thrown into the breach, and somehow they must hold on, and keep the enemy back until they could be relieved.

At 2 o'clock in the morning of March 26 orders came to General Carey. He must leave his guns, conjure up a force of infantry from the waste around him, and hold on. He went to work at once, and by use of the telephone, by messenger, by flag signals, he rounded up every available man.

First there were labor battalions of sturdy middle-aged men, the despair of the military martinet but strong as oxen, and mighty bruisers at close quarters. An infantry training school near by provided some members of the fighting force, and machine gunners, electricians and signalers were quite ready to take to the rifle again. Royal engineers, field companies, and last, but by no means least, a party of American engineers were thrown into the line.

By the middle of the next morning Carey had found a considerable number of men and by the early part of the afternoon he had organized them into some sort of force and had selected and marked out the position it must hold.

For a time he had some guns, but these were hurried away to another point that was even more seriously threatened. He had fifty cavalrymen to do a little scouting, but in the main he had to depend entirely on the sheer grit of his scratch force who lay in their shallow trenches, firing almost point blank at the gray hordes of Germans, and at every moment of respite seized their shovels to improve their shelters.

For nearly six days they stuck to it, and, as Lloyd George said, "they held the German Army and closed that gap on the way to Amiens."

After a time they got some artillery behind them and things were easier, but at first it was just a ding-dong fight, with soldiers taking orders from strange officers, officers learning the ground by having to defend it, and every man from enlisted man to Brigadier jumping at each job as it came along and putting it through with all his might.

During all that six days General Carey was the life and inspiration of the entire force. Careless of danger, he rode along the hastily entrenched line giving an order here and shouting words of encouragement there to his weary and hard-pressed men.

His staff was as hastily recruited as his men. He had no knowledge of how long he must hold out. He was not even certain of getting supplies of ammunition and provisions.

All he had to do was to hang on and hand on he did against in almost endless series of formidable attacks. He never lost heart no wavered, and so the Germans are still outside of Amiens.

BOLO TELLS MORE, BUT EXPECTS TO DIE

Haunted by Belief That His Revelations of Intrigue Will Not Save Him.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 11.—Bolo Pacha's revelations on this fourth day since he began to talk continue to be wrapped in more impenetrable mystery than has ever surrounded any affair in Paris during the last ten years at least. The secret has been marvellously well kept. It is evident from the face of Lieutenant Jousselin, who has had a long interview with the condemned man every day this week, that the statements are regarded as of the greatest importance, but so far not a word has leaked out.

It is known that Jousselin spent three hours yesterday in Bolo's cell when six different persons were confronted with Bolo, but not a single name has become known.

Commissions to take evidence have been sent to Italy, Southern France, and elsewhere. Sensational developments were expected yesterday, but so far nothing has occurred.

Meanwhile Bolo is haunted with the belief that he will be put to death, in spite of the statements he has made. Every day he begs his guards in the cell to call him early when the dread summons comes, so he will have time for the last preparations.

"I know I can't escape my fate, and I shall go to Vincennes," he said to one of his guards yesterday, "but there are some others who will also stand before the firing squad after I'm gone."

He appears largely recovered from the state of collapse into which he fell last Sunday, and spends a good deal of time walking up and down his cell, hands behind him. By an absolutely unprecedented favor Bolo is allowed to have the newspapers every day. Tuesday evening he devoured no few than five journals, scanning every column feverishly.

Bolo's wife and brother have again visited him. Parisians are discussing the probable disposal of Bolo's fortune in case of his execution. It is pointed out that he has not yet been able to obtain a divorce from his discarded first wife, Mme. Soumaille. Therefore, under French law, the money would go to her, and not to the woman who brought him an income of $15,000 a year and figured so brilliantly in society as his wife since his bigamous second marriage some years ago.

On the other hand, if Bolo dies the death of a traitor the law may demand the surrender of his property to the state on the ground of its enemy origin.

NEW DRIVE IN EAST AFRICA.

LONDON, April 11.—Allied troops are advancing on the remnants of the German forces which escaped from German East Africa to Portuguese East Africa. The following official account of these operations was given out here today:

"In Portuguese Nyassaland, despite the difficulties caused by heavy rains and flooded rivers, our columns from the coast and from Lake Nyassa are approaching Medo and Msalu, respectively, and their advanced troops are in contact with those of the main enemy forces concentrated in these localities."

OUR MEN BEAT OFF BIG RAIDING FORCE

Germans Bombard Americans 72 Hours Near Toul, and Then Fail in Heavy Attack.

CUT DOWN BY RIFLE FIRE

Force of 800, Including Shock Troops, Caught in Barrage and Suffer Heavily.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Wednesday, April 10, (Associated Press.)—The Germans attempted an attack against the American positions northwest of Toul just before sunrise this morning and were completely repulsed. Two German prisoners said the enemy planned the attack with a force of 800 men, but that it was stopped in its full strength by the effective fire of the American artillery.

Brilliant work by American gunners dispersed the German infantry before they reached the wire entanglements, and those of the enemy who got into the wire were accounted for with machine gun and rifle fire. The German attack came after a violent artillery bombardment of three days. A large number of the enemy are believed to have been killed or wounded during the attack, which continued for nearly two hours.

For seventy-two hours before their effort, the Germans had been firing an increasing number of shells at the American positions and making extensive use of gas shells. At noon Monday the enemy began a harassing fire against one of our strong points and kept it up throughout the night, dropping hundreds of shells of all calibres on both front and rear positions. The American artillery replied vigorously, the men in some batteries working with their gas masks on for two or three hours at a stretch.

About 5 o'clock this morning German infantrymen in the front line signaled their batteries for a barrage, and started for the American front line. The American gunners laid a counterbarrage almost immediately.

Charge Behind Shock Troops.

The attackers, who were especially trained for this operation, were selected from among the best men in three regiments. They were preceded by shock platoons, but the American barrage caught them before they were able to reach our wire entanglements.

A terrific fire against the advancing enemy was kept up by the American batteries. The Germans probably suffered severe casualties, as several bodies were seen hanging across the barbed wire after the enemy retired. The attack was made in a heavy morning mist, but the American gunners did wonderful work considering the poor visibility.

As soon as the American barrage lifted American infantrymen climbed from their shelters and attacked the enemy with heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, driving back those who had not been dispersed by the artillery fire.

The attack was followed by a violent artillery duel, which was still going on at a late hour tonight.

BASE IN THE AZORES FOR AMERICAN NAVY

Will Also Be Homing Station for Naval Planes, Some of Which Are Already There.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—For the protection of the Atlantic trade routes in southern Europe, the United States, with the consent of Portugal, has established a naval base in the Azores Islands.

Guns have been landed to begin fortification of the station, which in addition to being used as a naval base for American submarines, destroyers, and other small craft, will also serve as an important homing station for American airplanes, a number of which have been assembled there already.

Negotiations are in progress between the State Department and the Portuguese Government to insure full cooperation between American naval forces and the local authorities of Portugal on the islands for the adequate defense of the station. The action taken will simplify the task of protecting the great trade routes not only to southern Europe and the Mediterranean, but also returning traffic to South America and southern Gulf ports in the United States.

Portugal was not only willing to enter the arrangement, but was eager to see it perfected in order that her own lines of communication to her colonial possession would be covered. The value of the new station as a base for the replenishment of supplies for American submarines, submarine chasers, and destroyers on the voyage to Europe has already been demonstrated.

It is permissible to disclose these facts now because it is known to the Government that Germany is aware of them.

The Azores lie in the Atlantic, about 750 miles west of Gibraltar and 1,400 miles east of New York. Many of the islands are uninhabited, and since the German unrestricted submarine warfare began there have been several reports that one of them had been used as a submarine base by the Germans. Numbers of vessels have been sunk by submarines in the vicinity of the Azores.

The chief ports on the islands are Horta, on Fayal Island, and Ponta Delgada on Sao Miguel Island. Horta is frequently used by vessels running short of coal and supplies, and is the stopping place of some vessels trading between the Mediterranean and the United States, as well as steamers trading between Europe and South American and South African ports.

The Azores are the landing place of the only cable line which connected Germany directly with the United States before the war. Shortly after hostilities began this cable was cut, presumably in the English Channel, through which it runs, thus stopping messages between New York and Emden, Germany. There are four wireless stations on the islands.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The War Department today gave out two casualty lists, received from General Pershing, containing 234 names, bringing the total casualties of overseas forces from the beginning to date up to 3,311, so far as has been disclosed by official announcement.

The first of the lists given out today came last night, and contained 124 names, showing 1 was killed in action, 2 died of wounds, 5 died of accident, 13 of disease, while 30 were slightly wounded, 69 severely wounded, and 4 missing in action. The second list arrived late this afternoon, and contained 110 names, representing 22 killed in action, 1 dead of wounds, 1 dead of accident, 4 dead of disease, 11 wounded severely, 68 wounded slightly, and 3 missing in action.

Twenty-two is the greatest number reported killed in action since March 11, when the total was 28. On March 9 16 were reported killed in action, and 12 on March 14.

The names of 18 commissioned officers appear on today's lists. They are those of a Lieut. Col. Thomas J. Rogers, wounded slightly; Major Edward R. Kimble, died of wounds; Captains Robert M. Deming and Francis J. Cahill, missing in action; Captain Richard F. Meyers, wounded slightly; Lieutenants Perry S. Gaston, Alfred S. Milliken, and Edward H. Perry, all killed in action; Lieutenants Georgs W. Behrend, Leonidas B. Faulk, and James Frederick Leslie, all severely wounded; Lieutenants Patrick J. Dowling, Eugene C. Hamill, and Daniel F. Christie, slightly wounded; Lieutenant Charles D. Seward, died of accident; and Lieutenants Thomas B. Mern and James E. Quigley, missing in action.

The War Department does not announce the addresses of officers and soldiers appearing in its casualty lists. But in order to relieve apprehension of relatives and friends of soldiers whose names appear in the casualty lists issued by the Adjutant General, it is explained at the War Department that telegraphic notice is immediately sent to the next of kin of the soldier named, and if persons most directly concerned regarding soldiers of like names fail to receive such notice, it is "final evidence that they are not the soldiers whose names appear in the casualty lists."

RAINBOWS IN HARD FIGHT IN FRANCE

Johnson's home was at 301 East Forty-fourth Street.

Private John Tracey is a Canadian who is fighting in the ranks of the 165th. He came to New York from St. Chrysostome, Canada, to cast his lot with New York's famous Irish command. Private Neil Meurlin is a Brooklyn lad who is not yet 19 years of age. He was transferred to the 165th from the old 14th Infantry of Brooklyn. He is a son of David Meurlin, an electrician of 154 Garfield Place, Brooklyn. Mr. Meurlin is now in the Government service and is employed at the embarkation station in Hoboken. It was said at Mr. Meurlin's home last night that Neil, when last heard from, said nothing about his company being in the front line trenches. The boy is a graduate of the Emanuel Training School.

Many Brooklyn Men in List.

Additional reports of men from Brooklyn and Queens, whose names appeared in the casualty list, were received by their relatives yesterday. All of the soldiers were members of the 165th Infantry. Among those concerning whose condition the War Department yesterday wired their relatives are John T. Vogel, 226 Cedar Avenue, Richmond Hill, L. I.; Lewis Formhals, 354 Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn; Captain John P. Hurley, 8 Eighth Avenue, Brooklyn; Second Lieutenant Arthur H. Martin of Brooklyn; First Lieutenant John Rudolph Quinn, 324 Greene Avenue; Sergeant Hyman Solish, 113 Moore Street, Brooklyn; Private John Frank Sauer, believed to be a Brooklyn man; Private Oscar C. Lindquist, 561 Warren Street, Brooklyn; Private Joseph J. Jones, 2,212 East Eighteenth Street, Brooklyn; Privats Christian J. Groth, 552 Nineteenth Street, Brooklyn; Michael J. Hannon, 410 Seneca Avenue, Brooklyn; Private George C. Sicklick, 102 Keap Street, Brooklyn.

Donald Simpson, 23 years old, a private in Company K, 165th Infantry, whose name appears in the list of wounded, lived at 8 South Fifteenth Street, Flushing, with his mother, Mrs. Colin C. Simpson. He enlisted in the Seventh Regiment in June of 1917 and was later transferred to the 165th Infantry. He was married to Miss Dorothy Coope eighteen months ago. He has a brother, Captain Colin Simpson, now in France.

Two Long Island City boys listed on the casualty lists were Corporal James P. Begley of 396 Sixth Avenue and Private Mortimer A. Clark of 35 Stevens Street.

Corporal Begley enlisted in the 69th Infantry in June, 1916, and saw service on the Mexican border. He was promoted to the grade of Corporal while with the 165th Infantry at Camp Mills, where he was assigned to Company K. He is 18 years old and formerly attended Bryant High School. His brother Andrew is now in Texas with the 19th Aero Squadron. His mother received a telegram from the War Department yesterday notifying her of her son's injuries.

Private Mortimer A. Clark of 35 Stevens Street, Long Island City, lived with his brother, Eugene Clark, a clerk in the Queens County Court. He also enlisted in Company K of the Sixty-ninth Infantry for service on the Mexican border in June, 1916, and continued in that company when the regiment went to France as the 165th Infantry. His address was listed in the casualty list as 537 Lockwood Street, Long Island City, where he lived at the time of his enlistment. He failed to change his address on the War Department records, and it is believed that is the reason why his brother has not been notified of his injuries.

Griffith McCarnegie, reported wounded in Wednesday's list from General Pershing, lived with his parents at Jamaica. He was in the 7th Regiment when transferred to the 165th last Spring.

Long List from 165th.

Other Long Island men whose names appeared in the wounded list and all of whom are in the 165th Infantry, are: Sergeant Patrick J. Byrne, 63 Freeman Street; Sergeant Geo G. McGovern, 3,610 Toma Avenue; Corporal John Gallagher, 238 Fifth Avenue; Corporal Raymond E. Jackson, 170 Bay Thirty-first Street; Corporal George Meyer, 924 Flatbush Avenue; Private George P. Crouch, 360 Gates Avenue; Private Ralph Cuccioli, 1,711 Seventy-eighth Street; Private Amos H. Dow, 188 McDonough Street; Private Thomas A. Feeley, 293 Seventh Avenue; Private Walter R. Nolan, 862 Gates Avenue; Private William L. Meyer, 171 Calvert Street; Private Otto Off, 1,461 Flatbush Avenue; Private William H. Kroenke, 481 Rogers Avenue; Private Thomas Lee, 882 Franklin Avenue; Private Thomas A. Lyden, 344 Sayanty-ninth Street; Private John J. McKay, 4,016 Meeker Avenue, all of Brooklyn; Sergeant John F. McKenna, 351 Jackson Avenue, Long Island City; Corporal John T. Vogel, 226 Cedar Street, Richmond Hill, L. I.; Private Howard Baker, Bayside, L. I.; Private Frank J. Roney, 1,121 Hollywood Avenue, Rockaway Beach; Private James E. Begley, 396 Sixth Avenue, Astoria; Private Albert Tengstrom, Forest Hills, L. I.; Private Martin A. Clarke, 437 Lockwood Street, Long Island City; Private Charles J. Flood, 93 Hobson Avenue, Laurel Hill, L. I.; Private Frederick J. McGill, Glen Cove, L. I.; Private John F. McKenna, 351 Jackson Avenue, Long Island City.

Mrs. Kate Watts of Cedarhurst, L. I., received word from the War Department yesterday that her son Ralph, who was in the New England Division, has been killed in action. He met death fighting in the first-line trenches on April 1, and is the first Rockaway man, so far as is now known, to be killed in the war. He was in one of the Connecticut units.

SLACKERS RAISE RED FLAG.

Deserters and Draft Evaders on Island Defy Canada.

OTTAWA, Ontario, April 11.—Two deserters from the Canadian Army, with several draft evaders, and eight enemy aliens, said to be Germans, have taken refuge on an island in the Ottawa River, opposite the Petawana military camp, and are defying the authorities.

The party, which is said to be headed by James and Cahill Coughy, deserters from Military District No. 3, have raised the red flag. They are said to be well armed and provisioned.

The authorities are keeping a close watch on the island, but have not yet been able to apprehend the party, as the ice on the river is unsafe for travel.

Several other gangs of draft resistants are reported in hiding near Pembroke. They have gone into the wildest section of the country, and expressed defiance of the authorities. It is reported they will be unmolested until the weather clears sufficiently to enable the police to capture them.

140,000 LAWYERS IN HUNT.

Will Help Government to Uncover Enemy Property in This Country.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—An army of 140,000 lawyers in the United States was enlisted today in the campaign to uncover enemy property. A. Mitchell Palmer, Alien Property Custodian, in a letter sent to attorneys in every State, called on them to locate and report to his office all funds held by the enemy in the vicinities in which they live.

"Property aggregating in value many millions of dollars has been reported and taken over, but it is confidently believed that at least as much, if not more, is still unreported," his letter said. "The duty of locating and reporting such property is placed by law not upon this office, but upon the individual citizen. It is here that I need your help."

CLEVELAND, April 11.—The Waechter und Anzeiger, Cleveland German daily, according to Attorney Harold T. Clark, Chairman of the City War Board Americanzation Committee, may soon be converted into a United States Government publication, working for the Americanization of Germans in this country.

Mr. Clark said today he was writing a letter to A. Mitchell Palmer, Custodian of Enemy Alien Property, suggesting such a plan.

"I have written to suggest that Mr. Palmer, in the event he takes over the Anzeiger and all other foreign language newspapers controlled by alien enemies, assume active control, and appoint Americans as editors," said Mr. Clark. "With such management, I believe these papers could be made a valuable force of Americanization work."

Union Jack Companion Flag.

LONDON, April 11.—On behalf of the British Army the Earl of Derby, Minister of War, has presented to the City of London a Union Jack to be displayed alongside the American flag which Ambassador Page handed to the Lord Mayor on Saturday on behalf of the American officers in England.

LOAN TOTAL HERE TOPS $180,000,000

$15,000,000 FOR EQUITABLE

Yesterday's Additions $23,141,650 —Jews on East Side Launch Drive at Two Big Meetings.

The Bond Division of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York recorded yesterday $23,141,650 in subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan reported by all commercial banks and trust companies in this district. This brought the total up to $180,239,000, which is about one-fifth of the $900,000,000 quota assigned to the district by the Treasury Department. It is the aim of the committee, however, to obtain subscriptions aggregating $1,500,000,000.

Of yesterday's additions $16,687,950 was credited to New York City and the balance, $6,453,700, to the remainder of the district.

The figures made public last night are those compiled by the Reserve Bank from reports sent in by the banks, and represent subscriptions in the hands of the 1,275 reporting institutions at the close of business Wednesday night. In other words, the total $180,239,000 is the accumulation of applications filed in the first four days of the four weeks' campaign. It is more than double the total for the first four days of the Second Liberty Loan drive. The following table gives a comparison of the two loans:

	Third Loan.	Second Loan.
First day	$100,254,650	$10,166,550
Second day	25,042,400	28,647,750
Third day	28,700,900	17,908,700
Total	$180,239,000	$87,326,900

Analysis of Subscriptions.

The following table gives the quotas and subscriptions to date for the five boroughs of New York City and the remainder of the district, which takes in all of New York State, twelve Northern counties of New Jersey, and Fairfield County, Conn.:

New York City—	Quotas.	Four Days' Subscriptions.
Queens	4,364,400	1,192,300
Bronx	3,317,100	102,500
Richmond	1,932,900	47,600
	$667,125,300	$152,638,350
Total for dist.	$900,000,000	$180,239,000

Members of the Liberty Loan Committee said yesterday that the returns thus far received were encouraging, and indicated their belief that as the campaign proceeded it would gain in momentum. The desire to win honor flags has stimulated hard work on the part of the committees of the smaller cities and towns, and everywhere the improved organization is being demonstrated by practical results.

Among the large subscriptions announced yesterday were $15,000,000 by the Equitable Life Assurance Society, $2,000,000 by the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company, and $1,500,000 by the International Mercantile Marine Company. The Equitable's subscription will probably be distributed among a number of the Reserve districts, inasmuch as it maintains bank deposits in all parts of the country.

Leading Subscriptions Yesterday.

Following are some of the other subscriptions announced yesterday, but their totals cannot be added to the Reserve Bank figures, for some of them may be already included in the totals:

To Open War Exhibit.

The Publicity Department of the Liberty Loan Committee announced last night that a war exhibit under the name of "Liberty Land" would be opened tomorrow in the armory of the "Fighting Sixty-ninth" Regiment, at Twenty-eighth Street and Lexington Avenue. The exhibit is made possible by the courtesy of the British, French, and Italian Governments, who have gathered from the various battlefronts the fighting accessories displayed. Governor Whitman has promised to attend the opening, if possible. There will be no charge for admission, and it is the desire that as many persons as possible visit the exhibition, in order that the public generally may have a better idea of the war, and how it is being fought. As an adjunct to the exhibit, five French "75s" and twenty-five machine guns arrived yesterday from a French port, and more will come to supplement the show.

If the weather permits Lieutenant Joseph C. Stehlin will begin today his aero flight through the State. He should have started yesterday, but the storm prevented this. Likewise the Barnum & Bailey parade in the interest of the Liberty Loan will take place today if the weather is favorable.

The programme for today's exercises at the Sub-Treasury calls for addresses by the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity Church; Bishop Luther B. Wilson of the Methodist Church, Mgr. John P. Chidwick, and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue.

Ex-Senator O'Gorman Speaks.

Ex-United States Senator James A. O'Gorman spoke yesterday at the Liberty Bell in City Hall. "We are approaching the most critical period of this dreadful war," he said. "There is no turning back. We shall go on to a victorious peace or to an inglorious defeat. In this supreme hour of the nation's peril American patriotism will be put to the test. If all Americans stand shoulder to shoulder in support of our Commander-in-Chief, the future is secure; but to win this war the American people must hearken to the call of patriotism, of service, of sacrifice, of duty. Let every one share in the honor of making the Third Liberty Loan the success the President hopes it will be."

Representative Meyer London, the only Socialist in Congress, when asked yesterday for his opinion about the Third Liberty Loan, said:

"The Government of the United States having called upon the people for a loan, there would be no better way of helping the enemy than to refuse that loan."

The Third Liberty Loan Committee of the Eastern Railroads, which is acting by authority of Director General McAdoo, has opened headquarters at 50 Church Street, and has already begun an energetic campaign. This organization is one of the three railroad committees operating in the United States. John W. Adams of the Erie Railroad is Secretary.

Act at Request of McAdoo.

This committee has been formed at the request of Mr. McAdoo to aid in providing the machinery that will enable the men employed by the railroads to subscribe for the bonds and pay for them in installments out of their future earnings in a manner that will promote their general welfare. In the first and second war loans nearly 650,000 railroad employes subscribed for bonds.

Eugene M. Travis, Controller of the State of New York, spoke last night at a Liberty Loan rally held at the East Side Y. M. C. A.

"Competent authorities," he said, "estimate that the savings of the nation available for reinvestment amount to $15,000,000,000 a year. The five billions are, therefore, easily obtainable here. But the obtaining of this sum in a month's time is not quite so simple as it might appear.

"The business of the country out of which all of its must live, and which is the basis of industry as well as of national expenditure, of peace as well as of war, is maintained upon these savings. As a matter of fact, we do not want to deplete our savings now in the banks, nor to stop saving altogether. The loan must be raised out of our incomes. We cannot kill the goose that lays the golden egg. The money lent to the Government must come without any jar to business."

Mrs. John T. Pratt, Chairman of the Woman's Liberty Loan Committee of the Second Federal Reserve District, believes that the Third Liberty Loan will be greatly oversubscribed, and she reaches this conclusion by comparing the work of the women making up the various branches of the committee in this campaign with that done in the Second Liberty Loan drive.

The Liberty Loan drive among the Jews of the east side was launched last night at two meetings held in the Bank of the United States Building, 77 Delancey Street. The first wes of the United Hebrew Trades, which represents more than 300,000 Jewish workers in the Greater City. Immediately following, the Retail Clothing Salesmen, Louis Schradnik, President, opened their campaign. The Clothing Salesmen's Union is one of the many organizations making up the United Hebrew Trades. The Jewish actors, following their midnight supper which ended at early dawn yesterday, began their drive among the theatre-goers. The whole profession has pledged its support to the Government.

Edwards Urged to Aid.

Collector William H. Edwards of the Second or Wall Street District yesterday received a letter from Daniel C. Roper, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in which he urged the Collector to devote as much time as possible between now and May 4 to the selling of Liberty Bonds. The Commissioner wrote:

It is my desire that you shall devote as much personal attention to the selling of Liberty bonds between now and May 4 as the proper administration of your office will permit. I hope you will also impress upon all of the officers and employes under your direction their duty in this respect, in so far as it does not interfere with their regular work.

The members of the Internal Revenue Service must not be found lacking in that fine spirit of intense patriotism and willing sacrifice which should characterize all true Americans at this time, and very earnestly hope that every member of the service will subscribe to the loan to the limit of his means, besides encouraging and urging others to do likewise.

Although many towns are tied in the race for the first honor flag, peculiar sentimental interest attaches to the joint raising of five honor flags at Lawrence, L. I., this afternoon. The towns of Lawrence, Cedarhurst, Hewlett, Woodmere, and Inwood, which make up the Lawrence district, have each won a flag. Lewis B. Franklin, Director of the War Loan Organization of the Treasury Department, will represent Secretary McAdoo at the celebration.

Will Appeal to Italians.

CHEMICAL TRADES BUY $10,000,000 OF BONDS

Interior Furnishings Committee of Rainbow Division Will Hold Grand Rally Tonight.

Service flags of all the firms represented will spur the Liberty Loan workers of the six trades included in the Interior Furnishings Committee of the Rainbow Division to make their grand rally at Carnegie Hall tonight one of the biggest events of the city campaign among business men. Included in this group are the decorators, furniture men, upholstery and curtain dealers, wall-paper men, art dealers and publishers, picture frame and mirror makers, and the carpet and rug dealers.

Speakers at the meeting will include Major Francis R. Stoddard, Jr., U.S.A., who was sent abroad to study the aircraft defenses of London and Paris; the Rev. Thomas Travis, known as the "Fighting Parson," because of his work in France with the Y. M. C. A., and Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Company. William Fellowes Morgan, President of the Merchants Association, will preside.

At a luncheon of the Chemical and Allied Trades Committee yesterday, William S. Kies, Vice President of the American International Corporation, called attention to the fact that the public should not expect corporations to do more than their share in subscribing to the loan, but that business men should endeavor to convince every man and woman of their duty to subscribe to the fullest extent of their ability.

Among the others who made addresses were the Chairman, William S. Gray; William Hamlin Childs, George de B. Greene, and Lieut. Col. Herman A. Metz. At the close of the meeting it was announced that the total subscriptions to date of this industry were $10,000,000.

Six thousand employes of John Wanamaker attended meetings Wednesday evening in both stores of this company. One meeting was held in the auditorium in the new store and the other in the rotunda of the older one. It is expected that the amount of bonds that will be bought by the workers in this department store will total more than $300,000.

Sergeant Guy Empey is to be the principal speaker at James McCreery & Co.'s today. This store has been contributing $1 to five war charities for every bond bought. The purchaser of the bond designates to which particular fund the dollar that his bond made available should go.

Among the reports submitted by the committees yesterday was one from the Hardware, Metals and Allied Trades Committee, showing that the subscriptions from these industries up to date were $4,320,950.

Announcement was made that the Jewelry Committee, of which August Goldsmith is Chairman, has passed its $1,000,000 mark, and that the campaign was being carried on more vigorously than ever.

More than $750,000 in bonds sold was reported by the Women's Silk and Cotton Underwear Committee at its luncheon at the Hotel McAlpin. Among the names of buyers reported at the meeting were:

A. F. Iserson	$60,000	S. Stern & Co.	15,000
A. Gussow & Co.	50,000	Newmark & Dan-
D. Fischer & Co.	50,000	iszer	10,000
M. Morton & Co.	50,000	Joseph Smith	10,000
D. Rosenberg & Co.	20,000	J. Gold	5,000

A subscription of $24,500 from E. Hecker was reported by L. J. Goldberger, Chairman of the Children's Dress, Coat, and Headwear Committee. This was in addition to the $104,000 subscribed at the meeting held last week.

The Tobacco Committee's subscriptions to date amount to more than $2,000,000, and, according to Edward Wise, Chairman of the committee, these is every prospect of the Tobacco Committee exceeding even its sales of the Second Liberty Loan bonds, which amounted to $10,916,000, about three times the amount of its quota. Mr. Wise announced that Friday, April 19, has been fixed as the Tobacco Day for the Liberty Loan campaign, and he expects that at least $5,000,000 worth of bonds will be sold then. Among the subscriptions received by the Tobacco Committee yesterday were the following:

H. Duke & Co.	$100,000	S. Ruppin, Inc.	$5,000
M. Stern	30,000	E. M. Schwarz & Co.	5,000
H. Neuberger & Co.	10,000	Univ. Tob. Mach. Co.	5,000
E. Spingarn & Co.	10,000

Chairman Albee of the Theatrical Allied Interests Committee of the Liberty Loan announced subscriptions from theatre men last night: William Morris, $2,000; Frank Vincent, $1,000, and J. W. Jacobs, $1,000.

The luncheon of the Rotary Club at the Hotel McAlpin yesterday was turned into a Liberty Loan rally. In about ten minutes after William H. Brady, the President, called the meeting to order, the members signed up subscriptions amounting to about $140,000. Following is a list of the larger applications:

J. J. Goldman	$5,000	W. J. Reamish, for Mecca Temple	$25,000
Park T. Winslow	5,000	Minnie Goldman	5,000
Morris Cane	5,000	N. Nicolai	2,000

The speakers at the luncheon included the Rev. Isaac J. Lansing of Ridgewood, N. J., and A. B. Leach of the Metropolitan Canvass Committee of the Liberty Loan.

DESTROY PRUSSIANISM, JACOB H. SCHIFF URGES

Banker Says Our Impoverishment Would Not Be Too High a Price to Pay for Peace Guarantee.

Jacob H. Schiff, speaking at noon yesterday from the steps of the Sub-Treasury in Wall Street, strongly urged everybody to buy Liberty Loan bonds. He said that peace could not be assured except by the utter destruction of the Prussian military power, and that in prosecuting the war for the freedom and peace of the world it was necessary to make sacrifices. Even if the war lasted so long that the country was impoverished, both in material resources and in young manhood, the sacrifices would prove worth while if it ended in victory which guaranteed freedom and peace to the generations to come, declared the banker.

"As men meet each other these days," Mr. Schiff said, "one of the subjects they generally discuss is the probable duration of the war. At least I am frequently asked this question, and the only answer I am giving is, 'This war will cease when we shall have won it,' and it is not likely to cease until the German people say to their Government: 'We have had enough—and you must propose a peace that is acceptable to America'—and nothing will be acceptable to us except a peace that will vouchsafe lasting peace for all mankind. Nor can such a peace be assured except by the utter destruction of Prussian military power, which forms a constant threat to the freedom and peace of the nations of the world.

"We are fighting for the same cause our ancestors battled for at Lexington in 1776, our fathers at Bull Run, and Gettysburg and throughout the Civil War. In 1776 our sires fought in order that the American Colonies should henceforth enjoy true freedom. In 1861 to 1865 our fathers shed their blood so that our country should no longer be half free and half slave, and thus we are now prepared to bring every sacrifice, in blood and treasure, that the world shall henceforth not continually tremble because of autocracy, absolutism and militarism, but that the cause of freedom and democracy shall triumph and be safe throughout.

"It may be that this war will last so long that we shall become impoverished, both in material resources and, in what would be worse, our young manhood. But, be it so if it must; it will be better if we give up everything to succeed, for the hidden resources of our country are vast enough, and the energies of a great and free people are sufficient to recover what we may lose, then the generations which will follow us are certain to enjoy greater material wealth than even we have enjoyed, even if we give up everything at the present time, so that our children may be free and happy.

"And therefore I say—sacrifice freely all you have, give your possessions and your savings to our Government, which is a Government of the people, so that the armies we are sending overseas shall have all they need, munitions, proper clothing, and nourishment. All of this will require vast sums, and we must not stop and think how much the interest will be the Government pays us, whether bonds previously issued are at a discount or not; that all does not concern us.

"We must give our Government dollar for dollar for every bond it issues, and we must give it at any interest that the Secretary of the Treasury, in his wisdom, thinks he should pay. And the Secretary is right not to make too high a bid for the money he asks from the people, for the higher the rate he pays the more difficult it will be to carry on the industries and the commerce of the country, which must pay still higher interest than the Government offers. For commerce and industry must go on without hindrance, so that the Government can readily, and at not too high a price, procure the large supplies it needs for its army.

"One word more, and I shall be done. I want to take this opportunity to say something about 'the Kaiser's God,' with whom he constantly claims to be in partnership.

"I should like to look at this partnership agreement, for I am sure if it exists we would find in it many provisions which this brutal autocrat is violating every day. No, God enters into no such partnership, and punishment is sure to follow this blasphemy the Kaiser loves to utter upon every opportunity.

"We, too, claim that God is fighting on our side, but it is a God of whom the Prophets of old have said: 'Not with might and not with power, but in my spirit sayeth the Lord of the legions.' It is in this spirit we are battling for the right, and it is in this spirit we shall win in the end."

Following Mr. Schiff's address, Martin Vogel, Assistant Treasurer of the United States, spoke briefly, and then Mary Pickford stepped out in front of the statue of George Washington. She said she had come 3,500 miles to talk about Liberty bonds, and referred to the fact that her brother had enlisted. The moving-picture actress, who had previously subscribed to $100,000 of bonds, signed up for another $10,000 on a blank handed her by Mr. Vogel.

Despite the rain and the howling wind, a large crowd turned out to hear Mr. Schiff and to see Miss Pickford.

NATION IN RACE FOR THIRD WAR LOAN

To the early part of the evening a carnival setting was given. A military parade, in which one of the features was a British tank, was held at 11:30 o'clock. Bands played, singers appeared on the streets, and a hundred curbstone speakers talked for the Liberty Loan. The committee started its canvass at midnight and reported before 9 A. M. with individual subscriptions totalling 10,490 and total subscriptions of $3,279,000, or $300,000 in excess of the city's quota. Lynn has since raised this total to nearly $4,000,000, and does not expect to stop until the $5,000,000 mark has been passed.

Foreign Settlement's Fine Record.

The Village of Standish, N. Y., near Plattsburg, which has 300 population, reported today that it had oversubscribed its quota about six times. Most of the residents of the village are foreigners, and one of them, an Italian laborer, bought a $1,000 bond.

One hundred and eight of the 167 towns and 18 of the 34 counties in the State of Oregon reported that they had subscribed their quotas.

Ninety-five honor flags have been officially awarded in the San Francisco district.

Thurston County, Washington, was the first to receive a two-star flag. Among the subscribers in this county were several ranch hands who receive wages as low as $25 a month.

Sioux City is planning a celebration to accompany the raising of its honor flag on April 19. Governor Hardy will speak, and scores of floats, a hearse carrying the Kaiser, followed by the Ku-Klux-Klan of the Sioux City Press Club, cowboys, Indians, and soldiers, will participate in the parade.

Seventy-one towns in the Cleveland district had claimed the honor flag last night and several others hope to have it awarded to them soon.

Cincinnati has started a contest in the residence portion of the city for 100 per cent. Liberty Loan blocks. In order to become a 100 per cent. block every person in it must buy a bond.

Cleveland's Total $16,106,450.

CLEVELAND, April 11.—Cleveland's total subscriptions in the Third Liberty Loan campaign up to last night amounted to $16,106,450, the city Campaign Committee announced today. No figures for the Fourth Federal Reserve District are available other than the official announcement of $35,000,000 reported for the first day of the campaign.

CHICAGO, April 11.—As the result of four days' drive in the Third Liberty Loan campaign as shown by figures given out today, Chicago has reached the $40,000,000 mark, which is one-third of the distance to the goal.

REBUKE BY CREEL RESENTED IN HOUSE

LONGWORTH QUOTES TIMES

Says Creel Should Resign or be Removed—Committee Named to Pass on Alleged Insult.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Members of the House again today attacked George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, assailing him in particular for having questioned the veracity of Representative Allen T. Treadway of Massachusetts.

This matter came about through the medium of a letter attached to a report made by Postmaster General Burleson in responding to a House resolution requesting information as to the amount of mail matter dispatched to American soldiers abroad by the Committee on Public Information.

Discussing his resolution at the time of its presentation, several weeks ago, Treadway asserted that the mails were clogged with pamphlets issued by the Committee on Public Information, which prevented soldiers from getting first-class mail from their friends.

In his reply, after giving figures and saying that pamphlets on war risk insurance, a speech or two by Secretary McAdoo and several other documents had been sent overseas by the Committee on Public Information, Mr. Burleson attached the letter from Mr. Creel. The letter, which was denounced by members as flippant, insolent and a "gratuitous insult to the House," contained this sentence:

"When Mr. Treadway stated in the House that he was reliably informed that there has been a very large amount of that class of mail matter sent over, and it is a well-known fact that great quantities of that class of matter have been placed in their hands overseas, he made an assertion the absolute baselessness of which could have been ascertained by a telephone inquiry."

Committee on Censorship.

No sooner had the letter been read than Representative C. B. Miller of Minnesota moved to reject the report, with a request that the criticism of Mr. Treadway be eliminated. A motion to table this motion was defeated by a tie vote, 165 to 165.

Mr. Miller then modified his motion to read that the communication be referred to a committee of five with instructions to report whether it should be censored. A motion to table this motion was defeated, 173 to 172. After further debate the motion was adopted without a roll call.

Speaker Clark appointed as members of the committee Representatives Carraway, Arkansas; Humphreys, Mississippi, and Bocher, Missouri, Democrats, and McKinley and Madden, Illinois, Republicans. Mr. Humphreys voted with the Republicans on the votes to table, and is expected to vote for censoring the Creel communication.

Representatives Treadway, Miller, and Longworth led the Republican forces in the debate, which was waged for more than two hours, while action on the Army Draft bill was delayed. Representative Garrett of Tennessee directed the opposition.

Discussing the Creel letter, Mr. Treadway referred to the term "absolute baselessness," and said:

"I challenge Mr. Creel's veracity in making that statement. I can produce evidence here in this House that there has been placed in the hands of the soldiers abroad tons of these Creel reports, whether sent over by him or the Secretary of the Treasury I know not. I read a statement from a soldier in which he said 'Mr. Hurley could get a good deal of tonnage space if fewer tons of Secretary McAdoo's speeches were transferred to us. We do not want them.'

"That is evidence from the front, from a boy in the trenches today. Therefore I say Mr. Creel impugns the motives and the statements of a member of this House."

"I would like to inquire if the gentleman has any information as to how this soldier could know there were tons and tons of literature coming over," Mr. Barnhart of Indiana asked.

"I can satisfy the gentleman," Mr. Treadway replied, "that such a statement has been made by a soldier. I am finding fault with two things. First, that the Post Office Department has stopped the sending of necessary comforts to our boys from their home people; second, the statement by Mr. Creel, which I challenge him to prove."

Longworth Quotes The Times.

In his speech Mr. Longworth read an editorial from THE NEW YORK TIMES of today, entitled "Mr. Creel," in justification of certain remarks of his in debate earlier in the week. He said he had no apologies to make for his remarks about Mr. Creel after he had read what THE TIMES said about him.

THE TIMES editorial, which Mr. Longworth quoted, read:

MR. CREEL.

Actual or inferential responsibility for the doings and utterances of Mr. George Creel cannot any longer, consistently with the public welfare and comfort, be borne by the Administration. It is the general impression that when he speaks he speaks for the President, an impression he has not very energetically sought to dispel. His declaration that he should be proud to his dying day that there was no rush of preparation in this country prior to the day the President went before Congress could not have been made at a more inopportune time, but that is not the worst of it. It is an avowal never to be made by anybody at any time. It has aroused public indignation to a degree which is only faintly reflected by the denunciation directed against it in Congress.

The usefulness of the Bureau of Public Information has never been satisfactorily demonstrated, but the demonstration that, if the bureau is to be continued, it should have a new head is complete and conclusive.

"If I have any apologies to make for the opinion I enunciated of this man who the day before yesterday insulted the patriotism of the American people and today insults this House, it is that my language was far too temperate," said Mr. Longworth.

"Shortly after I had finished my expression of opinion, couched in very temperate language, on a speech made by Mr. Creel, representative Rainey of Illinois arose in defence of the Chairman of the Committee on Public Information the other day—and he made the best he could of a rotten case, I will say. His first sentence was: 'I regret that on a serious occasion like the present, when bills are being considered which have for their object the creation of efficient armies, the observing of our treaties, the execution of undertakings and contracts with other nations, a member of this House finds it necessary to indulge for partisan purposes in a criticism of an official of this Administration.'

"I am well aware," Mr. Longworth went on, "that if any member of my party, either here orelsewher, undertakes the slightest criticism of any action of any official of this Administration, he is invariably accused of doing it for partisan purposes. If my criticism of Mr. Creel involved Republican partisanship, the criticism by THE NEW YORK TIMES today also involves Republican partisanship. And yet, as every man here is well aware, THE NEW YORK TIMES is perhaps the leading Democratic newspaper of this country, and, if not, it is at least the most prominent supporter of all the policies of the present Administration."

Mr. Longworth had THE TIMES editorial on "Mr. Creel" read, and asked: "Is any gentleman going to rise and say that that is a Republican Party statement?"

"Are you serious in the statement you make that it is a Democratic newspaper?" Representative Ayres of Kansas asked.

"Why, certainly," Mr. Longworth replied. "Does the gentleman deny it?"

"Why, certainly," Mr. Ayers replied.

"I might respond by asking the gentleman by what authority he speaks on that subject; but I am not interested in it, because it is so patently absurd," Mr. Longworth retorted. "THE NEW YORK TIMES says, precisely what I did, that if this Administration does not believe that it is a matter of boast that this country went into this war inadequately prepared and intends to see to it that, after the war is over, it is at once reduced to a condition of impotence, to preserve all enduring and just peace, then Mr. Creel must resign or be removed at once. I said that yesterday. It is repeated today, in exact phraseology, nearly, in THE NEW YORK TIMES.

"My one hope is that when this motion of Representative Miller's shall have passed and a committee shall have found that that language is insulting to a member and inimical to the privileges of this House, in the Bureau of Public Information, or whatever it is called, to which this matter will be referred, one present member of it, Mr. Creel, shall not then be a member."

Assault on Dignity of House.

Representative Miller declared there was no partisan feeling behind his motion, simply a proper desire to protect the dignity of the House.

"I ask the membership of this House to observe the peculiar phraseology in which the gentleman (Creel) sees fit so generously to indulge when speaking of one of the most reputable members of the House of Representatives," said Mr. Miller. "The resolution that asked for a reply from the Post Office Department contained no reference to Mr. Treadway, no reference to any remarks he had made upon the floor of the House, but was confined absolutely to a request that the Postmaster General furnish the House with certain information in order that the House might be advised how to act intelligently on a matter pending here. Mr. Creel gratuitously goes out of his way to mention a member of the House and the work that he is doing in this House in a manner flippant, disrespectful and defiant.

"I have no criticism of Mr. Creel or anybody else in private conversation speaking of the members of this House in any way they see fit, but when, in response to a resolution passed by the House, a public official goes out of his way to mention a member, not necessary to refer to at all, and speaks of him in a way that is slighting, that is flippant, that is objectionable from every standpoint, if the members of the House have a proper respect for their dignity and the reputation of the House before the country, they will insist that this language be cut out.

"There is no animus back of my motion, no partisanship, simply a desire to protect the dignity of the House and preserve us from these insulting remarks, these belittling observations that characterize this episde.

"Just observe, not alone the language that is used, but the setting around the language! What right has the member of Congress from Massachusetts to stand on the floor and criticise me or my work? is apparent in every word he uses. It is precisely defiance of the legislative branch of the Government for presuming to criticise the activities of a bureau of the Government.

"He said: 'He made assertions the absolute baselessness of which could have been ascertained by a telephone inquiry.' I would not use that language toward any one for whom I had an atom of respect or toward any one from whom ever again I expected an atom of respect. If language could be found in the English tongue calculated to convey a biting, stinging, belittling rebuke to Congress and its membership, it is this.

"I believe this vote we are about to take will, in a measure, express our opinion as to whether the House, as a part of Congress, deems itself a body of sufficient dignity, sufficient honor and respectability, to be immune from an insulting communication like this, which comes from a subordinate individual in a bureau capacity.

"The Speaker will appoint the committee provided in this resolution, and a majority of them doubtless will be members of the Democratic Party. We do not care for that. The members of the Democratic side of the House must be and they are as jealous of the reputation, and the dignity, and the prerogatives of this House as the members of any party that ever sat in it, and I call upon you today to manifest that spirit which I feel confident you possess."

THREE DIE IN SHIP'S HOLD.

Two Workmen and Sailor Who Goes to Their Rescue Overcome.

Felix Taskowsky, a Quartermaster on the U. S. S. Frank H. Buck, lying off Charles Street, North River, and two other men, pipe fitters, whom he attempted to rescue, lost their lives yesterday in the hold of the vessel. All apparently were overcome by fumes in a compartment separating the engine room from the oil tank.

The two pipe fitters, Henry Tierce of Barrow and Bedford Streets and William Carson of 2,637 Creston Avenue, the Bronx, were employed by Stephen Ransom, 401 West Street, and had been sent to the vessel to make repairs. They were lowered into the compartment, and as they did not reappear after a time Taskowsky requested the workmen to lower him into the compartment. After a few minutes he signaled to be pulled up. Just as Taskowsky was nearing the top his strength gave way and he slipped out of the noose of the rope.

Fire Rescue Squad 1 was called, and after fifteen minutes brought up the bodies.

GERMAN SHIPS AT LOVISA.

Russian Fleet Said Still to be Lying Off Helsingfors.

LONDON, April 11.—A German squadron with several transports is reported to have arrived at Lovisa, midway between Helsingfors and Viborg, Finland, according to a Reuter dispatch from Petrograd. The squadron came from the direction of Reval, and a small force was said to have landed and occupied Lovisa.

Owing to the military situation, the Council of Finnish Commissioners (Revolutionary Government) has announced its intention of installing itself in Petrograd.

STOCKHOLM, April 11.—German troops numbering 15,000 are now operating along the southern coast of Finland, where they already have had several small battles with the Finnish rebels, according to information received by the Swedish Government.

Entente diplomats here have received reports that thirty to forty Russian submarines and destroyers and four or five battleships are still off Helsingfors, the capture of which is probably part of the German aim. It is believed, however, that the warships have all been rendered unserviceable by their crews.

American Minister Morris has had a conversation with M. Linda, a Finnish capitalist and a brother-in-law of General Mannerheim, military leader of the Finnish Government forces. The Minister asked M. Linda what America should consider as the attitude of Finland toward Germany. M. Linda declared emphatically that the Germans merely had been asked to assist in restoring the Government's power and that no vassalship was implied. He said:

"Our whole history has been one long tale of hardship and bloodshed. Now, when freedom is in sight, nobody, Germany or any other country, will be permitted to dominate Finland."

ANOTHER PROTEST TO BERLIN.

Bolsheviki Object to Germanization of Yuriev.

MOSCOW, April 10, (Associated Press.)—M. Tchitcherin, the Bolshevist Foreign Minister, has protested to Berlin against turning the university in Yuriev Province, Livonia, into a German institution, declaring that so important a measure cannot be taken without an expression of the people's will.

ROMANOFFS IN WANT; AMERICAN AID ASKED

MOSCOW, April 10, (Associated Press.)—Members of the Romanoff family, most of whom are residing in the Crimea, are suffering want, according to the Moscow papers.

The Dowager Empress Maria Feodorovna, who is there with the Grand Duke Nicholas, the Grand Duchess Xenia and her children, and other members of the family, is allowed to spend only 400 rubles a month, while the expenses of all of them cannot exceed 10,000 rubles. They have five servants, but many of the former Court noblemen who are staying with the Romanoffs do their own washing or work in the vineyards, earning occasionally 4 rubles a day.

STOCKHOLM, April 11.—A personage in high authority has requested American Minister Morris to endeavor to send money and other relief to the Dowager Empress Maria Feodorovna of Russia, mother of the ex-Czar, who is said to be living in actual destitution at the Crimean bathing resort of Yalta.

The Empress is reported to be receiving not more than 150 rubles monthly. A number of other formerly prominent Russians also are living at Yalta in needy circumstances. Minister Morris will try to get money to the Empress through Americans now in Russia.

The Dowager Empress applied to the Bolshevist Government for assistance early in March, saying that she was destitute. She is the widow of the Russian Emperor Alexander III. and a sister of Queen Mother Alexandra of Great Britain. Her father was the late King Christian IX. of Denmark.

32% OF POPULATION TAKEN FROM RUSSIA

780,000 Square Kilometers, with 56,000,000 Inhabitants, Lost Through Peace Treaty.

PETROGRAD, April 10, (Associated Press.)—Under the terms of the peace treaty, the Commissioner of Commerce announces Russia has lost 780,000 square kilometers, (301,000 square miles) of territory, with 56,000,000 inhabitants, or 32 per cent. of the entire population of the country. The announcement says Russia has also suffered the following losses:

One-third of her total mileage of railways, amounting to 21,530 kilometers, (13,350 miles).

Seventy-three per cent. of the total iron production.

Eighty-nine per cent. of the total coal production.

Two hundred and sixty-eight sugar refineries, 918 textile factories, 574 breweries, 133 tobacco factories, 1,685 distilleries, 244 chemical factories, 615 paper mills, 1,073 machine factories.

These territories, which now become German, formerly brought in annual revenue amounting to 815,238 rubles, and had 1,500 savings banks.

LONDON, April 11.—Reuter's Petrograd correspondent reports that the Germans have occupied Lgov, 120 miles northwest of Kharkov, which they recently captured. After taking Lgov they sent an ultimatum demanding the surrender of Kursk, capital of the Government of that name, 36 miles west of Lgov. The local Council of Workmen's and Soldier's Delegates decided to resist.

BESSARABIA VOTES UNION WITH RUMANIA

Diet of Russian Province, by 86 to 5, Decides in Favor of the Step.

BASLE, Switzerland, April 14.—The Bessarabian Diet, according to a telegram from Bucharest, has decided in favor of the union of Bessarabia with Rumania.

COPENHAGEN, April 11.—An official Berlin dispatch reports that the vote in favor of the union of Bessarabia with Rumania was 86 to 5.

The Russian province of Bessarabia borders Rumania on the east. The northern part is almost wholly inhabited by Rumanians, and Rumania has long desired that these people should be united with her.

Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, in explaining the Rumanian peace treaty recently, said that Rumania would be compensated for the loss of territory on the Transylvania border by taking the southern part of Bessarabia, which, however, has no great percentage of Rumanian population.

SPAIN BLOCKADED; OTHER NEUTRALS AWED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—German submarines have put a blockade of Spanish ports into effect as a result of the commercial agreement recently entered into with the United States by the Spanish Government. Spanish vessels are being held in their harbors, and there is a possibility that Spain may not be able to meet all the terms of her arrangement with this country. The blockade was put into force without any notice.

Spain has consented to furnish the supplies for General Pershing's army that she undertook in the agreement to deliver, but latest advices received here say she has failed to carry out the provision under which France would obtain credits in Spain for the purchase of commodities needed for the prosecution of the war.

The German offensive on the western front has affected all the negotiations being conducted by the United States and the Allies with the neutral European countries. Spain was believed to be postponing the ratification of the arrangement for the financial accommodation of France until the results of the drive are known.

Sweden, likewise, was believed to have been greatly influenced in her negotiations with the associated Governments by the enemy drive, and it is thought that Holland also has been affected. Political effects of the battle were said to be felt in the negotiations upon several matters going forward with the Swiss Government. Norway is less influenced, but the negotiators, although on the threshhold of an agreement for several weeks, have not been closed.

Spain is inclined to treat seriously the German threat against her merchant shipping because of the agreement entered into with the United States. Germany was said to be seeking to prevent the fulfillment of the agreement, but, lacking a German decision in the west, it was considered probable that the extreme need of cotton in Spain would bring out her ships.

Under the agreement, the United States and the Allies do not obtain the use of Spanish bottoms, although their employment would benefit the Atlantic shipping situation. Some Spanish vessels have been chartered to neutral Governments for the transportation of grain. Switzerland being principally affected in this respect by the non-sailing of Spanish ships.

YORK'S ARCHBISHOP PLEADS FOR LOAN

His Valedictory to the United States Is Appeal to Its Patriotism.

SAYS NATION IS AROUSED

Will Take Word to England That America Is Entering War with All Her Strength.

"You will not fail us. We, please God will not fail you. I know that when I leave this country I am going back to my own, and, meeting it in the hour of its greatest experience, I can tell it 'the spirit of that mighty Republic is rising. It is coming; and when it has come, it will stand by you till the last.'" With these words, the Most Reverend Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of York, closed his speech for the Liberty Loan at the mass meeting in Carnegie Hall last night. The Archbishop is returning to England in a few days and his words last night were in the nature of a valedictory to the American people. He emphasized the fact that in the last few days when the allied world was breathlessly watching the bulletins from the Flanders front, America had seemed to settled more determinedly and more grimly to the task of winning the war.

Carnegie Hall was packed from the floor to the topmost gallery, and applause punctuated by the waving of myriads of tiny American flags, greeted every point made by the speakers. In addition to the Archbishop, Mrs. August Belmont and George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia, pleaded the cause of our army and our nation itself as a reason for backing the loan to the last penny. Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of this district, and Chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee of New York, presided. A detachment of soldiers and sailors of the regular, fighting forces of the United States were on the platform, together with members of the Liberty Loan Committee.

In opening the meeting Mr. Strong read the message which General Pershing sent to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo regarding the Third Liberty Loan, asking every man, woman, and child "at home" to "stand by" the army to a victorious end. He laid stress on the obligation America owed to her allies, Belgium, France, and England, for holding the world's foe at bay through four bitter years.

The Archbishop first expressed his gratitude to America for its overwhelming kindness to him as an Englishman.

"When I think of all that I have seen and felt since I last spoke upon this platform," he said, "I must needs give liberty to my heart and speak out to this last assemblage of American citizens that I shall address until, please God, this great struggle is once for all over and done. I must needs give liberty to my heart and express the depth of its gratitude to the American people. I do not think I ever realized how strong the friendship was until a few days ago I crossed that splendidly undefended border between you and the British Empire in Canada. It was almost impossible to realize that I had passed a border line.

"When I first landed here, I will confess, I felt a difference of atmosphere. This world of yours in New York seemed to me very different from the grim, gray world of nearly four years of war which I had left behind. But since then I have felt rising up, almost as if you could see it, this great tide of enthusiasm, determination and conviction in the heart of this great people.

"I know, I have always known, that you have great reserves of patriotic force, and I am certain that once these reserves are stirred and moved they will have the effect of the waters of Niagara. They will advance with ever-growing volume and force and fall, please God, with decisive effect upon this great and terrible struggle.

"I beg of you not to say any more about the war, the word 'wait,' but to put all your strength and determination into the single word 'now.' I don't think anything has ever so clearly and palpably impressed the imagination and heart of any people as this great and awful battle has proven the heart of the American nation.

"And it is because you realize as you never could have realized before the solemnity of this war, that you will put that spirit in to your response for the appeal for this Liberty Loan. You will not make it, I know, a matter of profit. You will feel that it is a matter of pride—pride that any of you can have the honor of giving any of your substance to a cause so great and at this moment so desperately in peril.

"England, for all that she has suffered, sees, I think, that she must still stand. You have read the speech of our Prime Minister. It touched my heart; it almost wrung my heart, for I have been absent from her these nearly two months in this hour of stress, but I could read between the lines. I saw there—I ask you to see there—that country stripping itself for the last struggle, showing that it is willing to make any sacrifice.

"But suppose—God forbid that it should be so—that England was unequal to the task, and the spirit of her people failed; suppose that France would have, with all her pride, to bow her head before the enemy—at least these two great countries would fall with a great task behind them, and able in the hour of their shame to think with pride of the memories of the great days that were gone; but America, the land of the future, if she were to fail, there would be no great past to sustain her, there would be nothing but the loss of a great future.

Mrs. August Belmont told of her experiences on the battlefront and in hospitals behind the lines, tending to show the indomitable spirit animating the forces standing in Flanders against the German legions. Mr. Pepper, who closed the speaking, urged that in this war, this time of crisis in the affairs of the nation, lessons forced on us by the war should be taken to heart. Chief among these lessons, he declared, was the need for universal and compulsory military training for all the young men of the country. Rudyard Kipling's "Hymn Before Action," which has been set to music and sung on European battlefields, and which has been taken as the rallying song of the Liberty Loan workers, was rendered by the four minute men.

YORK'S ARCHBISHOP HONORED BY COLUMBIA

The Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of York, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Columbia University yesterday afternoon. The degree was conferred by President Nicholas Murray Butler in the Trustees' room of the university, where not quite a year ago Columbia had greeted Marshal Joffre, René Viviani, Arthur James Balfour, and Lord Cunliffe, before conferring upon them the same honorary degree with ceremonies.

The Archbishop entered the Trustees' room at 3:45 o'clock escorted by Dr. Butler. Among those in attendance were Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts, Bishop Harding of Washington, J. Pierpont Morgan, August Belmont, ex-Senator Chauncey M. Depew, Brig. Gen. George R. Dyer, Sir George R. Parkin, Samuel W. Fairchild, Abram I. Elkus, John H. Finley, Commissioner of Education in New York State, and James Speyer.

The Archbishop was escorted to the Columbia campus by Bishop David H. Greer, representing the Trustees, and by Professor Bedinger Mitchell, representing the Faculties. President Butler received the Archbishop in the hall of the big library and immediately the academic procession moved to the Trustees' room.

Bishop Greer presented the Archbishop formally to Dr. Butler, who then conferred the degree. In accepting the honor, the Archbishop said in part:

"If there be any university with whom I would naturally wish to have this connecting link it would be this university. From no one could I have received a degree more acceptably than from you, [Dr. Butler,] not only on account of your place in the public life, but because at this crisis your words have expressed so clearly and so forcibly the ideals for which the allied nations stand."

The gathering then adjourned to St. Paul's chapel, where the Archbishop made an address. The Archbishop's message was to the students and educators of America. He explained what the war had done to great Oxford and Cambridge and reminded the young students of the nation that their time was at hand.

After the ceremonies at Columbia yesterday the Archbishop of York, in commenting on the German offensive, said:

"If the spirit of the nations will stick behind the armies of the Allies they will be victorious, no matter how the present battle goes. Regarding this great battle, I think it is the most encouraging and cheering sign of the spirit of the American Administration that, without waiting for the American Army to win its own victories to itself, the American forces have joined with their French and British comrades to fight side by side and shoulder to shoulder, cheering equally in defeat or victory."

The archbishop, who is a guest at the home of J. P. Morgan, asked to be excused from an expression of opinion on the demand of Lloyd George for conscription in Ireland on the ground that he had not had time to read the Premier's speech and desired to inform himself on the subject.

ACCEPT RESIGNATION OF PACIFIST BISHOP

Episcopal Body Declares Bishop Jones's Usefulness in Utah Has Been Impaired.

The House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church at its concluding session yesterday voted to accept the resignation of Bishop Paul Jones of Utah, whose alleged pacifist utterances several months ago were investigated by a committee of the House. In addition to the nature of his sermons, many of his parishoners objected to his membership in the People's Council, to which many pacifists of objectionable type belong. The effect of yesterday's action is to leave Bishop Jones a Bishop on half pay without a charge.

There was some embarrassment among the deliberators yesterday for fear that their action, because of the terms of the Bishop's resignation, might be interpreted as limiting free speech. To simplify matters, Bishop Jones offered his resignation without reference to any conditions, and the report of the special investigating committee then was accepted. The resolution recommended by the committee and adopted by the House of Bishops read:

"First, the House of Bishops declares its belief that the Government of the United States has obeyed the law of moral necessity in seeking to stop a war of deliberate aggression by the only means that are known to be effective to such an end.

"Second, the House of Bishops believes that any member of this house is entitled to the same freedom of opinion and speech as any other citizen of the United States, but in the exercise of this liberty he should be guided by a deep sense of the responsibility which rests upon one who occupies a representative position.

"Third, the House of Bishops is unwilling to accept the resignation of any Bishop in deference to an excited state of public opinion and therefore declines to adopt the report of the special commission, or to accept the resignation of the Bishop of Utah for the reasons assigned by him in his letter of Dec. 20.

"With full recognition of the right of every member of this House to freedom of speech in political and social matters, subject to the law of the land, nevertheless, in view of Bishop Jones's impaired usefulness in Utah under present conditions, recognized by himself, the House of Bishops accepts the resignation of the Bishop of Utah as now presented."

NIEUW AMSTERDAM SAFE.

ROTTERDAM, April 10.—The Holland-America Line steamer Nieuw Amsterdam, from New York, has arrived off the Hook of Holland.

The Nieuw Amsterdam sailed from New York March 28, with more than 2,000 passengers on board, including Chevalier W. L. F. C. van Rappard, formerly Dutch Minister at Washington, and many masters and members of the crews of Dutch steamships taken over by the United States. Her clearance was the result of an agreement made with the Dutch Government some time previously, and it was understood that the German Admiralty had granted her a safe conduct through the submarine zone.

Mr. Marshall's report, it is said, will be made within a few days. The President will study it along with the committee's majority and minority reports.

THE MINNETONKA SUNK.

Was the Last of the Atlantic Transport Liners Afloat.

The British steamship Minnetonka, formerly in the New York-London service of the Atlantic Transport Line, was sunk in the Mediterranean some time in February by a German submarine, according to a report that reached the Maritime Register yesterday. At the office of the international Mercantile Marine Company, owners of the vessel, it was said that the Minnetonka had been in the service of the British Admiralty, and that no official information of her loss had been received here.

The Minnetonka was built in the yards of Harland and Wolff at Belfast in 1902. She was 600 feet long, 65 beam, and 39 deep. She was of 13,528 gross tonnage.

The Minnetonka was the last of the four passenger ships of the line, aggregating 55,000 gross tons to remain afloat. The others all have been sunk since the war began. The three others were the Minneapolis sunk March 22, 1916; Minnehaha, sunk Sept. 7, 1917, and the Minnewaska, sunk Nov. 20, 1917.

DOCTORS OPPOSE DRUG BILL

The practicing physicians of this city, as represented by the Federation of Medical Economic Leagues and the Association for Medical Defense, have petitioned Governor Whitman for a hearing on the Whitney Drug bill before he takes action on the measure. Among other objections, it is held that this measure is revolutionary, unconstitutional, and dangerous to the welfare of the community, and that it is intended to bring about a lay and political control of purely medical duties at a time when medical men of military age are serving with the colors, while those outside this age are serving at home as volunteers for every form of medical service required of them by the Government, a condition of affairs which might easily lend itself to their exploitation at this time.

Under this proposed law a lay Commissioner of Drugs, with a staff of deputies, would control the practice of medicine as far as it relates to prescribing and dispensing.

JAPAN GETTING MORE GOLD.

Holding at Home and Abroad Increased $3,984,000 in a Month.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Japan's gold specie continues to increase, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Consul General George H. Scidmore at Yokohama. It says that the latest returns, published by the Finance Department of Japan give the total as 1,064,000,000 yen, ($529,872,000) on March 15, 450,000,000 yen ($227,088,000) being held at home and 608,000,000 yen ($302,784,000) abroad.

Compared with the figures for the end of February last, the gold held at home shows a decrease of 1,000,000 yen ($498,000,) but an increase of 9,000,000 yen ($4,482,000) is shown in the gold held abroad, or an increase of 8,000,000 yen ($3,984,000) in the total.

BRITISH IN PALESTINE CAPTURE TWO VILLAGES

LONDON, April 11.—British troops on April 9 advanced their line north of Jerusalem, in Palestine, to a depth of one and a half miles along a front of five miles, and captured two villages, notwithstanding the stubborn resistance of the Turks. The text of the War Office statement telling about it reads:

"Early on the morning of April 9 our troops on the Tulkram-Ramleh Railway advanced their lines to a depth of one and a half miles on a frontage of five miles. We captured the villages of El Kefr and Rafat despite stubborn resistance by the enemy, whose counterattacks were broken up by our artillery and machine-gun fire. Among the prisoners taken were a few Germans.

DR. HIRSCH LOYAL.

Chicagoan Answers Those Who Seek His Resignation from Pulpit.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Trustees of Sinai Temple are seeking to ascertain the identity of members of the congregation who are alleged to be circulating a petition demanding the resignation of Dr. Emil G. Hirsch on the ground that his sympathies are pro-German. Dr. Hirsch said he had heard of the petition.

"I yield to none in my loyalty to the United States," said Dr. Hirsch. "I consider the story the idle gossip of one or two men. I was born in Holland and was educated in Germany. I owe my education to Germany. I speak German. I have been a pacifist, but only in the same sense that President Wilson is a pacifist. I count in every word that President Wilson has written.

"I have subscribed for every war fund that has had Government sanction. Last Sunday I spoke for the Liberty Loan, and our congregation subscribed $31,000.

"I never have been a German in a political sense. Next Sunday I shall make a statement, without prejudice and without partiality, explaining my stand. When I get through there will be no question of my loyalty."

DEMANDS 7,000,000 TROOPS.

Ex-President Taft Wants Nation to Speed War Preparations.

Ex-President William H. Taft, in addressing an audience of about 300 men and women in the Central Congregational Church Men's Club, Brooklyn, last night, urged the United States to "speed up" her preparations for war and immediately to raise an army of from 5,000,000 to 7,000,000 men to aid "the boys over there." He received an ovation when he said, "The United States can furnish more men, more money, and more material than any other country in the world, but, for heaven's sake, let us begin to supply those things now which will be necessary to win the war."

The speaker said that Congress had been urged to change the draft laws so that the United States could begin to raise at least 5,000,000 men, adding:

"We must immediately begin to plan to win the war, even if we have to go down into the valley of the shadow as have our allies. At this time this country is beset with the whispering pro-German. They have centres where they distribute propaganda by which they hope to kill enthusiasm for the war in this country.

"I believe that the mass of men of German percentage in this country are loyal citizens, but I fear there are some of these who are responsible for attempts upon the lives of our soldiers, the destruction of Government and private property, and the poisoning of food in this country. I am in favor of having any of these enemies of our country responsible for any of these outrages lined up before a firing squad."

His Majesty was much interested in details of the extensive work of the American Red Cross and expressed his appreciation of its work in Italy and what it has done toward establishing fraternal sentiments between Italy and America.

The Duke of Aosta also entertained the Davison party at the Headquarters of the Third Army, which he commands, near the Piave front.

To the Loyal Men of New York:

You do not need to wait for the draft to serve your country and your country's glorious cause. You may bear the proud title of volunteer and write your name immediately upon the honor roll of those who are fighting for freedom at the front.

The Twenty-seventh Division of New York Volunteers is ready to go to France, but lacks two thousand five hundred men. While a brave heart beats in a manly breast in this Empire State of ours no volunteer regiment of New York should lack a man. You do not know this need of your country and of your State or the roster of every New York volunteer regiment would have been filled to overflowing long ago.

But you know the need of prompt and patriotic action now. You have heard your country's call. You have had thrown wide open to you the door to duty, the gate to glory. The greatest hour in the whole history of the world is striking.

What are you doing in this hour of opportunity? Are you hesitating? Are you waiting and debating while the golden moments pass—while history is in the making and you not making it? Or are you stepping boldly, bravely, inspiringly forward to do your part, to devote your strong right arm and brave heart and keen American mind to establishing throughout the world ideals of liberty and justice for which your fathers fought?

Are you a soldier in this hour of your country's need? Are you a volunteer? The volunteer regiments of the Twenty-seventh Division of the United States Army are waiting for you, waiting to start for France, waiting to do their splendid duty and win immortal glory. Don't keep them waiting. Enlist now!

Every day you delay is an advantage to Germany. Every day you delay is a hindrance and handicap to your own country. Enlist now, sail now, fight now! Take the battle flags that the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense will give you and carry them to France for honor, for glory and for victory.

Every man under 21 and over 31 is invited to attend the opening of the recruiting tent at the Maine Monument, Columbus Circle, to-morrow, at 12 o'clock.

Members of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense and Officers of the Twenty-seventh Division will be present to arrange for your enlistment.

There will be an outdoor mass meeting. Prominent speakers will address the gathering. New York's famous Police Band of eighty pieces will furnish music.

OBJECTOR'S FAMILY THINK HE WAS SLAIN

RESENTS HINTS OF SUICIDE

Walter Nelles, counsel for the Gellert family, has written to Secretary Baker expressing the belief that Ernest Gellert, a conscientious objector, whose death from a gunshot wound was reported officially at Fort Hancock, N. J., on April 8, was murdered. The letter requests a public investigation into the circumstances surrounding Gellert's death, asks that the lawyer be permitted to take part in examining witnesses, and urges the making public of the minutes of any investigation thus far held.

Nelles in his letter gives his address as 70 Fifth Avenue, a building in which are housed many pacifist organizations, and in which centres much of the pacifist propaganda of this city and the nation. The letter follows:

Seventy, Fifth Avenue, New York,
April 11, 1918.

The Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: As counsel for the family of Ernest Gellert, the conscientious objector who died from a gunshot wound at Fort Hancock, N. J., April 8, 1918, I present these requests:

1. That the investigation into the circumstances preceding and surrounding his death be full, open, and public.

2. That I be permitted to take part in the examination of witnesses and suggest the calling of witnesses.

3. That the minutes of any examination or inquiry already had be submitted to the inspection of counsel for the Gellert family and made public.

No details of the firing of the shot that killed Ernest Gellert have been reported to his family. His relatives and friends believe that he was murdered. This belief rests upon knowledge of his character and temperament, upon the normality of mood reflected in the latest communications received from him before his death, and upon recognition of the intensity of the hatred which many persons feel for such convictions as his at this time when the murder of an honest man is calmly cited in the press as evidence of the need for more drastic sedition laws.

Ernest Gellert was the finest human being whom the war has brought to my notice. His courage, sincerity, and sweetness are doubtless reflected in your department's record of its investigation of the petty hazing to which he was subjected by officers last October, November, and December, as well as in the record of his court-martial for disobedience, held in violation of your order that conscientious objectors be not subjected to punishment for refusal of duty. When I went to see him in connection with his court-martial, soldiers, not conscripts, to whom his point of view seemed merely strange, stopped me on my way through the camp to express sympathy and good-will.

"Fort Hancock, April 8, 1918.

"Hello everybody. If you write to me, please use plain postal card, avoiding any references to my case.

"I am feeling fine.

"Love and best regards to all.

ERNEST."

The following post card to a friend is dated April 8 and postmarked April 9:

"I have heard nothing new regarding service in Peace Commission, but I believe I will soon have definite news. I hope I am accepted. What I base my hopes upon is the fact that I have been told that I have been recommended by the Commander of this post for overseas service. As I believe I have made it quite clear that I would accept no service except in direct interest of peace—a service I would be only too eager to accept—I can see no motive in his recommendation other than that of granting my desire—unless of course my position has been radically misunderstood. In the latter case I should be only too glad of a further opportunity to prove his error. However the case may be, it is entirely up to Washington.

"While it is possible to reach me by phone, please don't have any one call me except in case of emergency. When writing use only plain postal card.

"Best regards to your folks and Mary.

"So long. ERNEST.

"I have carefully read the President's decree regarding Conscientious Objectors some time ago. I could not consistently with my views accept any service he enumerated."

While confirmation or refutation of the suspicion of murder is an important purpose of the investigation requested, I hope, as I know Ernest Gellert would hope, that that purpose will not be regarded as either primary or final. Whatever its immediate cause, Ernest Gellert's death was for steadfastness in truth as he saw it. Every lover of America has a right to be assured that militaristic practices which can turn such steadfastness toward suicidal despair cannot gather strength in the security of either secrecy or inattention.

I am sending copies of this letter to the press, believing that in the conditions which prevail publicity at every stage is a necessary safeguard against suppression or discoloration of truth, and feeling an obligation to the Americanism for which Ernest Gellert died which supersedes considerations of courtesy or of minor policy. Yours very truly, WALTER NELLES.

At 119 Washington Place, which is given in the City Directory as the address of Walter Nelles, it was said last night that he had moved several weeks ago, and that the only address known for him was his office, 70 Fifth Avenue.

At Fort Hancock it was said last night that Gellert's death was under investigation by the Department of the East, and that any information relative to it would have to be got from there. At Governors Island, headquarters of the department, no one could be reached last night who was authorized to discuss the subject.

PRO-STRIKE BILL REJECTED.

Senate Sends Conference Report Back by Vote of 34 to 25.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The conference report on the bill providing severe penalties for destruction of or interference with production of essential war materials, containing the clause giving workmen the right to strike for better wages or working conditions, was rejected today by the Senate, 34 to 25. The roll call on adoption of the conference report follows:

Against—Democrats: Bankhead, Chamberlain, Hitchcock, Kirby, Myers, Pomerene, Reed, Smith of Georgia, Smith of South Carolina, Thomas, Underwood—11; Republicans: Baird, Brandegee, Cummins, Fall, France, Freilnghuysen, Gallinger, Hale, Harding, Jones of Washington, Kellogg, Knox, Lodge, McCumber, New, Page, Penrose, Poindexter, Sherman, Townsend, Wadsworth, Warren, Weeks—23. Total against, 34.

The vote will cause the House to reconsider the bill. The Senate's opposition was directed solely to the clause providing that the bill should not restrict workmen from striking.

Many Senators regarded the vote as a rebuke to workmen who had struck at shipyards and factories engaged on war work. Senator Overman of North Carolina, who had charge of the measure, declared yesterday that should the "Senate defeat the conference report because of the labor clause, the entire legislation would die."

While the Senate was rejecting the provision, President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, speaking before the National Conference of American Lecturers here, was denouncing the proposal to prohibit strikes.

"As a patriotic American citizen," he said, "I serve warning on Congress not to permit the devilry and folly of such a law. It will serve only to make strikers lawbreakers as well. Nothing will do more to create resentment than to make it unlawful for man to stop work."

Mr. Gompers complained that American newspapers were given to unsparing criticism of small strikes, apparently forgetting that millions of organized laboring men were giving their best efforts to the nation. Labor troubles, he said, had been few.

TWO GUARD GENERALS OUT.

Lester and Williams Barred by Physical Disability.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The honorable discharge of Brig. Gens. Roger D. Williams and James W. Lester, National Guard officers, was announced today by the War Department. General Williams is a native of Kentucky, and was serving with Kentucky troops at Camp Shelby, Hattiesburg, Miss. General Lester was with the 27th Division, composed entirely of New York troops.

At the War Department it was said that both discharges were due to physical disability.

CAPT. REDMOND ASKS IRISH DRAFT OPTION

Says Armies Will Be Required to Recruit Battalions if Bill Passes.

DILLON SUSPECTS CENSORS

Tells Commons He Hears News About Ireland Is Cut—Sinn Fein Threatening.

LONDON, April 11.—Irishmen maintain the right to say whether they shall be conscripted or not, Captain William A. Redmond, son of the late John E. Redmond, asserted yesterday in his first speech in the House of Commons since he was elected to the constituency formerly held by his father. The speech was made in the debate on the government manpower bill. The captain was in military uniform and occupied his father's old seat in the House.

In 1914, he said, Ireland was almost ablaze with enthusiasm on the side of the Allies, but the sentiment of the Irish people had since changed toward the war, owing to distrust of the British government and the word of British Ministers.

By the government's present action the Ireland of tomorrow, he added, would be in open hostility to the war. It would require armies in Ireland to recruit battalions, while if the government trusted Ireland, that trust would not be betrayed. Captain Redmond warned the House that if the Government pursued its present policy there would soon be no Irish party in the House of Commons, but there would be a much harder nut to crack.

Replying to a question by John Dillon, the Nationalist leader, regarding the alleged refusal of the Press Bureau to give the correspondents of American newspapers information as to whether their messages had been stopped or altered, Sir Geoge Cave, the Home Secretary, said that these messages were sometimes censored or stopped for sufficient reasons, but were never altered.

Information was constantly given to American correspondents regarding their messages, the Home Secretary added, but the immense number of messages which passed through the bureau rendered it impossible to keep a complete record or to answer every inquiry. He was not aware of the practice in Italy or France, but the amount of work in London must be very much larger than in Paris or Rome.

Mr. Dillon said that his information was that all news about the Irish situation was being cut out. Sir George replied that he did not know about that, but he had given no general instructions regarding messages affecting the Irish question, and no other Minister would give instructions to the Press Bureau.

Absolute calm seems to prevail among the Sinn Fein Party, says a Central News dispatch from Dublin, but it is understood that orders have been given to all sections of the Irish Volunteers regarding action to be taken in the event that Irish conscription is agreed upon. At meetings of many public bodies, the dispatch adds, fiery speeches have been made and strong resolutions passed against the application of the Man-Power bill to Ireland.

DUBLIN, April 11.—Upon invitation of the Lord Mayor, Arthur Griffith, founder of the Sinn Fein organization, and Professor Edward de Valera, one of the leaders of that organization, have consented to meet John Dillon, Chairman of the Nationalist Party, and Joseph Devlin, Irish Nationalist Member of Parliament for Belfast, for a conference on the conscription question. The meeting will take place next week.

BELIEVES MAUDE WAS SLAIN

Woman Writer Says General Died of Cholera After Drinking Coffee.

A suggestion that General Frederick Stanley Maude, commander of the British expedition on the Tigris front, who captured Bagdad, was deliberately murdered by drinking coffee offered to him at an entertainment given in his honor in Bagdad, is contained in an article in the current issue of The Saturday Evening Post by Mrs. Eleanor F. Egan, who was present at the entertainment.

The British official version of Sir Stanley Maude's death was that he drank of a ceremonial cup offered to him as a part of the welcoming festivity by the people of Bagdad rather than refuse and wound the susceptibilities of the people, though he knew the danger he ran from cholera.

According to Mrs. Egan, who wrote that she was General Maude's guest on the occasion, she and the General were served with coffee. The table contained two cups, a pot of coffee, a bowl of sugar, and a jug of milk.

"Before the recollection of that, one must pause to speculate and wonder," Mrs. Egan wrote. "Yet one may speculate and wonder for all time. What can any one ever possibly know? As I write, General Maude lies dead in a desert grave, outside of the old North Gate, and they are saying boldly and insistently in the bazaars tonight that he was murdered.

"He drank the coffee, and he poured into it a large quantity of raw, cold milk. I drank the coffee, too, but without the milk. When it became certain that he could not live the doctors asked what he had taken that night, and I told them. He had cholera in its most virulent form."

When delays cost big money

IN businesses where delays run into huge losses, Pierce-Arrow trucks outnumber all other makes of trucks in use, for their dependability has been demonstrated in these businesses after costly experiments with other equipment.

In the building business, for instance, when the time required for an operation frequently determines who gets the contract, they have made fine records.

The James L. Stuart Company, excavating for the William Penn Hotel, Pittsburgh, used three Pierce-Arrow trucks. They worked 20 hours a day, hauling 54,000 solid yards of material, a round trip of 1.9 miles, averaging 92 miles daily, often making 80 trips. They completed the job in 60 days, saving 20 days on the time estimated by the closest competitive bidder.

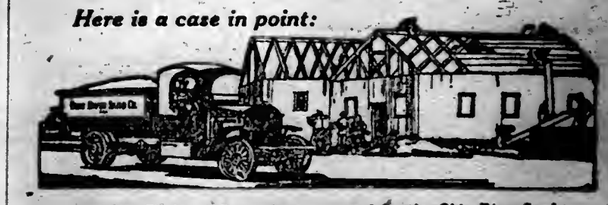
PIERCE-ARROW
Motor Trucks

When rush work was necessary on the various cantonments to house the National Army, Pierce-Arrow trucks were employed to help build nearly every one. In comparison with other equipment, they made a notable showing.

Here is a case in point:



At Camp Taylor, 6 Pierce-Arrows, owned by the Ohio River Sand Company, worked day and night hauling sand and gravel. Every 10 hours they averaged 6 round trips of 19 miles each. No other truck was able to average 5 trips. They carried an aggregate load in less time, with less idle time than any other truck.

We could multiply similar instances without limit—and in situations like yours. Ask us for specific data gathered from 103 different businesses, in which Pierce-Arrows are operating, meeting successfully every emergency, every condition.

FIGHT RESUMED ON OVERMAN BILL

LEWIS DEFENDS MEASURE

Admits Bill Gives Power to Combine Commerce and Other Boards in One Organization.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Restriction of the President's power in reorganizing Government agencies to the military establishment and other war-making branches was advocated and opposed today when the Senate resumed debate on the Overman Reorganization bill.

Senator Smith of Georgia, Democrat, led the attack on the Administration measure, declaring that, while there was no lack of confidence in President Wilson, he should not have authority to disturb the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Reserve Board, Federal Trade Commission, or other agencies of the civil establishment. He said he favored giving the President more power over the military establishment than the bill provides, but by specific designation by Congress.

"We have already given the President tremendously wide power in the conduct of the war," said Mr. Smith. "I know that many people in my own State feel that this bill ought to pass because it has the stamp upon it 'Administration approved,' but that does not deter me from voicing my opposition to it. We want laws that will help us win the war, and this one is not in that category.

"We have had laws in force to permit the drafting of troops. We ought to have been ready to transport them abroad long ago in great numbers. What a pitiable situation it is that General Sharpe said some days ago that he didn't know, and had not been advised, how many troops we were going to send abroad, or how we should proceed to get uniforms for the men that are to go.

"There has been a lack of vision in our war program. Senator Overman said a few days ago that this bill would provide the President with the scissors to cut the red tape. Well, if we have been loaded down with red tape, what we have needed was simply a little executive ability to slash it. We have not needed any new laws. I actually believe that if the President had the full effect of this law explained to him he would not want it."

Senator Smith said that what the Government needed was "more efficient business organization," rather than more laws. He said Congress was partly to blame for legislation disorganizing the Army General Staff and restricting the Chief of Staff's authority. Civilian advisory committees, he said, had been a "recognized folly," and must be dispersed "for the good of the country."

Warns of Popular Impatience.

Senator Lewis of Illinois, Democratic whip, declared Congress should give the President any power he deemed necessary to successfully prosecute the war.

"Any who are against any measure that the President demands as necessary to win the war," he said, "are against the President."

He added that the people wanted the war won and would be impatient with technical objections to legislation which the President regarded essential.

Senator Lewis said he believed the President now had authority to make changes in Government departments without legislation, but the President had often been criticised for exercising alleged dictatorial or illegal powers during the war, and such criticism should be avoided by giving him the specific statutory authority he desired.

If Congress were to pass a law crippling the Commander in Chief of the army and navy in time of war, he could ignore it, and the American people would sustain him, said Senator Lewis, adding: "And there is not a man brave enough to impeach him."

Senator Cummins of Iowa, Republican, interrupted to suggest that under the bill the President could appoint a "deputy" President, transfer all his authority and virtually retire.

Senator Lewis said this was not a fact, but suggested that the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Trade Commission, and Federal Reserve Board could be abolished and their functions consolidated in a Board of Business, Finance, and Transportation.

Senator Reed of Missouri, Democrat, insisted that as the bill had been brought forth "purely as a war measure," it should carry specific limitations.

Red Tape Disastrous.

Senator Ashurst of Arizona, Democrat, pleaded that no aid or comfort be given to the enemy by shackling the American Commander in Chief.

"Had General Foch and Marshal Joffre," he said, "been hampered by red tape, by orders from a War Council, or by a voluble Congress, they would not have won the victory of the Marne, which was to civilization as important as was the victory of Charles the Hammer, when he rolled back the surging tide of the Moslem at Tours."

"Yet," he continued, "this man, who has demonstrated his great capacity for public affairs and has moved with unerring precision in matters of world-wide import, is not to be trusted—so say some Senators—with the power of transferring certain bureau officials and chief clerks in Washington."

THIEF RATHER THAN SOLDIER

"This man stole to escape military service in France," declared District Attorney Harry E. Lewis of Brooklyn yesterday when Walter McLaughlin, clad in the uniform of the United States Army was arraigned before Judge Marcus D. Campbell, charged with stealing a watch from a friend. The District Attorney added that he had received his information from the police.

"It seems hardly possible," said the Judge, "that with so many young men marching forth to defend freedom, one man could be found with spirit so base that he would commit a criminal act so as to be driven in disgrace from the ranks of honor. I will accept a tentative plea of not guilty until further investigation can be made."

It is believed that the Judge will allow McLaughlin to plead guilty to a misdemeanor, suspend sentence, and turn him over to the army authorities at Camp Upton for punishment as a deserter. If a plea of guilty to a felony were accepted it would automatically terminate the prisoner's career in the army, and he would not be liable to military punishment. McLaughlin is 35 years old and lives at 223 Berry Street.

Honors for Dead Sailor.

The body of Bernard Coleman, who was a sailor on a U. S. battleship and was killed on March 22 by falling from a ladder while the vessel was in foreign waters, lay in state yesterday, at the home of his parents, 681 Eagle Avenue, the Bronx. The coffin was draped with an American flag and there was a guard of honor from the Pelham Bay Naval Station. Coleman was a gunner's mate. A solemn requiem mass will be celebrated tomorrow morning in the Church of Sts. Peter and Paul, St. Ann's Avenue and 150th Street.

ARREST NAVY INSPECTOR.

Court Interpreter Found Wearing Uniform of Lieutenant Commander.

Clad in the uniform of a Lieutenant Commander of the United States Navy, Joseph Rollins, 65 years of age, for many years an interpreter in the City Court (Manhattan), was arraigned yesterday afternoon before United States Commissioner Louis R. Eick, in the Federal Building in Brooklyn, charged with impersonating an officer. He waived examination and was held to await the action of the Federal Grand Jury. The prisoner lives at 1,754 Forty-sixth Street, and has two grown children.

Rollins is of Italian birth, and speaks French, Italian and Spanish. He was connected formerly with the Thirteenth Regiment, National Guard, and saw service in the Spanish-American war. The knowledge that he had done military duty served to allay any suspicion in the minds of his friends that he was not entitled to wear the uniform which he seemed to be so proud of.

Yesterday a real Lieutenant Commander passing Borough Hall in his automobile saw the bogus officer walking on the street. He saluted Rollins and the latter returned the greeting in approved style. The age of Rollins attracted the attention of the genuine officer and he stopped his auto and engaged Rollins in conversation. As a result of the talk a Naval Intelligence officer took Rollins into custody and brought him to the office of United States District Attorney Melville J. France. There he met Assistant United States District Attorney Beer, who was greatly amazed to find that his friend and neighbor was an imposter.

To Mr. Beer the prisoner asserted that he bought the uniform and wore it as an inspiration to young men that he met to serve their country in either the Army or navy. He said that he had offered his services to both branches of the service, but had been rejected on account of his age. Investigation showed that Rollins, while dressed in his uniform, frequently made addresses in his home district advocating support of the Liberty Loan and urging young men to enter military service.

WIRELESS MAN ARRAIGNED.

Operator Accused of Having Letter for Woman in Genoa.

Giovanni Alabanda of Genoa, Italy, a wireless operator on the steamship America of the Italian Line, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Samuel M. Hitchcock yesterday, and held in $1,000 bail for the Federal Grand Jury on a charge of violating the Trading with the Enemy act. Alabanda was arrested on April 5 on board the America by Customs Inspector John A. De Sario. He is said to have had in his possession a letter addressed to "Angiolina de Marchi, care Pajancoria," who is said to live in Georia. The letter, as roughly translated by an Italian Deputy Marshal, introduces Alabanda to the woman and instructs her to "give him the highest price for stockings, same as last." It also gives the sailing date of the steamship.

The prisoner stated the letter was given to him by the wireless operator on the Giuseppi Verdi, another steamship of the same line. He said he understood the woman is the other operator's wife. He declared he did not know anything of the contents of the letter. On the theory that the wording of the letter might be a code message, an investigation is being made.

WILL TRAIN STUDENT FORCE.

Wesley Lyon of the State Military Training Commission. Captain King is on leave of absence from the British Army, Canadian Division, in order to undertake the work at the City College. He was wounded in the fighting about Lens.

Here, at a glance, are the actual performances that resulted in a Franklin sales increase last year of 135 percent, against the 12 percent increase of all other fine cars.

Waste is under indictment in this country. The spirit of the times not alone counsels, but compels constructive economy. Applied to motor cars, this spirit has crystallized into the blunt demand: Does your car deliver Service—without waste?

The Franklin car has answered with actual facts—not empty claims; with performances—not promises.

You, like every other alert and vigorous American, have sensed the force of that community spirit which has made conservation the livest issue in the country. And you, like the rest, will heed that spirit.

Therefore, you will put your motoring costs on the strict basis of Efficient Economy—the Economy that decreases neither your activities nor the Nation's resources.

And when you have come to do this, then you will come finally and logically to the Franklin, the most efficient car in America. For in these acid-test times, every buyer is a close buyer—and only facts can sway him.

The facts about the Franklin are here, publicly placed, unchanging and unassailable. Consider these facts—for on your consideration depends your motor car costs for 1918.

THE FRANKLIN CAR of TODAY

Cold Weather Starting Easy!

Positive Ignition.

"Feeble" Battery trouble obviated. In starting, the Franklin owner cuts in the buzzer on his Master Vibrator and gets a fat, hot spark that fires the mixture.

Quick Response to Starter.

Starting device has vigorous action; battery has big reserve. No hesitation in the Franklin when you switch on the starter.

Tire Mileage.

—contains the latest features that mean Franklin Efficiency—intensified. Every one of these features has drawn the concentrated attention of motorists for they are positive steps to a still higher level of motoring perfection.

The chart at the top of this advertisement demonstrates Franklin Economy. But only a ride in the car itself will reveal the ease of handling, safety, convenience, comfort, reliability and easy riding—qualities to which Franklin owners are accustomed.

Therefore, we ask you to ride in the car—and to check us up on every one of them.

The Franklin is designed to meet the big preponderance of motoring requirements—eight types.

Takes Up Cylinder-Wear.

Latest construction automatically takes up cylinder wear, which in average engine, usually means leaks in compression. Franklin retains responsiveness of a well-worked in car, even after considerable running.

Intake Yoke Heater.

Quick warming-up of mixture assured by using exhaust gases. Original with the Franklin; perfected in today's car.

Lessens Repair Bills!

Air Intake Strainer keeps road dust, grit, etc., out of engine internals. A new device that cuts down wear in cylinders, valves, pistons, etc., and lessens your repair bills.

No More Grease Troubles!

No more bothering with messy Grease Cups! New Oil Reservoir and Wick System on today's Franklin prevents this trouble.

ORDERS FIVE HELD FOR PRAGER MURDER

Coroner's Jury Recommends Arrest of Alleged Members of Lynching Mob.

ALL OF ACCUSED ARE MINERS

Swiss Embassy, Representing Germany, Offers to Pay Funeral Expenses of the Victim.

COLLINSVILLE, Ill., April 11.—The Coroner's Jury, which investigated the lynching here last Friday of Robert P. Prager, alleged German sympathizer, at the close of the inquest tonight recommended that five men be held charged with murder in connection with the hanging. The men ordered held are Joseph Riegel, Wesley Beaver, Richard Dukes, Jr., Enid Elmore, and William Brockmeier.

The Coroner's Jury brought in a verdict that Prager was "hanged by a mob," and recommended that the men named by held for the murder. Warrants immediately were prepared by Coroner Lowe.

Wesley Beaver, a saloon porter, was the first man placed under arrest, and the other four were apprehended immediately as no effort was being made, it was reported, to avoid arrest. Beaver testified at the inquest, but was reported to have denied he had any part in the lynching save that he carried a flag two blocks as Prager was being marched to his death.

Such testimony as has been made public has made but slight mention of Dukes, Elmore, and Brockmeier. All are miners. According to a statement made by Mayor Siegel, Dukes was in the crowd that gathered at the City Hall where Prager was hidden. He is said to have asserted he had a brother who died in army service in France. Brockmeier is asserted to have told the Coroner's Jury that he was in the crowd at the City Hall, but because of lameness did not follow the mob when it escorted Prager outside the city limits.

The inquest opened last Monday, and all sessions were held behind closed doors. It was reported yesterday by persons who attended the hearing that Riegel had confessed that he was the leader of the mob which hanged Prager, and to have asserted he could identify other members. Riegel is a miner and an ex-soldier.

HARD WINTER SAVES SOD.

Sod plowed under in the Fall is supposed to be well rotted by Spring and ready to supply plant food for the season's crop, but last year's war gardeners who thought to prepare for extending operations this year by spading over new ground have been sorely disappointed. Instead of soft, friable soil filled with rotted roots, weed stems, and grass blades, they have found upon starting this Spring to turn the sods over again that the clods are just as they were last Fall.

Usually through the freezing and thawing of Winter any sort of sod except bunch grass will have practically disappeared by Spring, but there was no thawing, only freezing, last Winter. The ground was frozen solid before the green grass had hardly wilted, and there was not a thaw till late in March. Even then the thawing was so slow that on April 5 the earth was still solid ice at a depth of fifteen inches. Grass turned under last Fall was found as green as when spaded, and roots perfectly preserved in their cold storage.

This is going to make hard work of planting and cultivating this new ground, and some gardeners are merely taking over the exposed sod and leaving the sod at the bottom to die out or be cut up as the new grass appears through the Summer.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 11.—Governor Lowden has sent to Sheriff Jenkins of Madison County at Edwardsville, Ill., a telegram from Secretary of State Lansing informing him that the Swiss Embassy, representing the interests of the German Imperial Government, "would bear all reasonable expenses" attending the burial of Robert P. Prager, who was lynched by a mob at Collinsville last Friday night. The Governor instructed Sheriff Jenkins to show the telegram to the relatives of Prager.

CIGARS UNITED

Who Discovered RICORO?

"Guess my top-sergeant discovered Ricoro," said Captain Adams of the U. S. Cavalry.

"Army pay is about half what I was used to. A man's got to smoke. So I asked Sergeant Gregg how he managed to keep supplied."

"I smoke Ricoro," he said. "What's that?" I asked.

"It's this!" said Gregg and he handed me a regular Kipling beauty of a Panetela.

"How can you afford to smoke such an expensive cigar on your pay?" said I, after taking a few puffs. Gregg laughed in my face as no non-com should.

"W,-w,-why sir," he said, "that's a Ricoro—only seven cents, on sale at all United Cigar Stores."

Sooner or later you'll discover—

Mr. Frank Nellis....Edward Wynne
Mr. Billy Woods....Albert McWilliams

There were a number of very bright moments in "Fancy Free" last night at the Astor—moments when it seemed that the play might stay with us all Summer. In retrospect they appear to have centred mainly in Marilynn Miller. A charming young person this—very young and most charming. She is the and elfin, with the face of a wildflower, and a neat little upturn nose. For it is known to all wild botanists that the flora of the woods is universally pugged. Quite the most unlikely person, this, to have come out of the Winter Garden.

But the main point is that she dances. She has many of the technical resources of a toe dancer of the ballet of old, but she never for a moment loses the rhythm of all that is eager and free. While she held the stage the audience sat breathless and spellbound. Her gowns were in the simplest good taste and her smile full of the spirit of girlishness unspoiled. It is true that when she spoke and sang..... But the important truth is that she mainly danced and smiled.

Clifton Crawford was another asset. He had the title part, and roamed with a fancy quite unshackled among a bevy of feminine young things that seemed, at first sight, to set a quite new standard in choruses. Second sight is more clairvoyant, but those who are wise will take a leaf from Mr. Crawford's book and shun it. One of his songs made it a fest of sanity to be "crazy about the women," but it was noticeable that he maintained his happy lunacy by remaining a resolute pluralist. There was something delightfully impersonal in his amorous gayety—easy, vernacular, and in excellent taste. The principals in the piece were well mated. And then there were Harry Conor, Marjorie Gateson, Ray Raymond, and Charles Brown—pleasant all, if not particularly distinguished. The lyrics and music by Augustus Barratt were also pleasurable, and in good taste. But as the twitching hour of 11 approached one somehow reached for umbrella and hat.

The truth is that the book offers little of sustaining interest. The lines are bright and fresh enough, but with no great comic force. The plot, as far as there is one, is quite far-fetched and lacking in the inspiration of humoresque fancy. Its chief point of interest was when and how often it would bring Miss Miller dancing on again. So, after all, "Fancy Free" may turn out to be a Spring, but not a Summer, show.

Yet one hopes for the best, for, in its amiable, well-bred manner it takes a very high place among the musical offerings of the season.

NEW RIVETING RECORD.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 11.—Charles Schock and his riveting gang at the Baltimore Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Company's plant have shattered all previous records for driving rivets in a day's work. Schock's record is 2,720 rivets in nine hours, and is vouched for by the Emergency Fleet Corporation's representative at the plant, who has made a report of the performance to Chairman Hurley. There are four men in the gang.

August Eckstein and his gang at the Submarine Boat Corporation yards at the Port Newark terminal drove 1,987 rivets in one day last week and claimed the world's record. The claim was posted at the Baltimore plant with the words, "Do you accept the challenge?" The next day Schock and his gang got busy. He received $35 for the day's work.

COTTON CONFERENCE HERE.

Committees representing Northern cotton manufacturers and buyers and Southern planters and shippers will meet with leading bankers here on May 4 for the purpose of revising terms for the buying of raw cotton, according to an announcement made yesterday by officials of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers. Randall N. Durfee of Fall River, Mass., will be Chairman of the manufacturers' committee, and Gordon McCabe of Charleston, S. C., will head the delegation of planters.

It was also announced that the annual gathering of the Northern and Southern Cotton Manufacturers' Associations would open here on May 1 for a three days' session. The meeting will be in the nature of a "war gathering," an official of the organization said, and among the speakers will be Lord Reading and Secretary McAdoo.

Asks $103,750 from Mary Pickford.

While Mary Pickford was waiting to speak at the Liberty Loan meeting at the Sub-Treasury yesterday an order was served on her requiring her to appear in the Supreme Court on April 29 for examination before trial in a suit brought against her by her former representative and manager, Cora C. Wilkenning. The plaintiff is suing for $103,750, as 10 per cent. of Miss Pickford's alleged earnings in 1916, which the plaintiff says she made possible by inducing the Famous Players Company to engage the movie actress at 50 per cent. of the profits on her films and $10,000 a week drawing account. The plaintiff alleges that Miss Pickford earned only $52,000 the year before she signed the contract in question.

Buys Metal Plant at Plainfield.

Joseph P. Day has sold to the British American Metals Company of 52 Vanderbilt Avenue the plant of the Manhattan Steel and Safe Company, at Plainfield, N. J., including a series of factory buildings on a 10-acre plot with 2,200 feet frontage on the Railroad of New Jersey. The price was $175,000. The plant is to be used for the manufacture of heavy hardware.

CONSECRATE NURSES' FLAG.

The flag of the Shell Shock Division, No. 177, unit of Red Cross nurses, now on Ellis Island, waiting to sail for France, was consecrated at a service held in St. Paul's Chapel yesterday. The flag is the gift of the Phipps Psychiatric Clinic of Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

Unit No. 177 is made up of selected nurses from all parts of the country familiar with the treatment of nervous and mental diseases. Only the forty-six nurses, with six reconstruction aids, attended the service, aside from the casual attendants who drop into the chapel for prayers. The chapel's own silk flag stood at the right of the chancel. The vicar, the Rev. Dr. William Montague Geer, officiated, assisted by the Rev. Thomas J. Crosby, who made the address, and the Rev. George B. Cox.

URGES INSTALLMENT PLAN.

Merchants' Association Renews Effort for Tax Law Amendment.

The Merchants' Association has renewed its attempt to have the Federal Income Tax Law amended so as to permit the payment of income and excess profits taxes in installments. In a letter to Chairman Kitchin, of the Ways and Means Committee, made public yesterday, the Association said:

"In January last we wrote you urging that provision be made for the payment in deferred installments of the income and excess profits taxes due June 15. Mr. McFadden's bill, H. R. 10026, now before your committee, provides for such installment payments. We strongly indorse the principle embodied in Mr. McFadden's bill and believe that either that or the Pomerene Senate bill, which provides for six installment payments, should be adopted.

"It will be a matter of great difficulty for many business men to pay at one time the very heavy amounts which will become due on June 15. It is impossible in the case of an active business at once to convert the profits into cash. It will, therefore, be necessary for very many firms to raise the required funds by borrowing from their banks, and it is highly likely that there will be great stringency in the money market so that the negotiating of such loans will in many cases be a matter of much difficulty."

ELSIE DE WOLFE AT FRONT.

Obliged to Evacuate Ambrine Hospital, She Writes, on March 26.

A letter received by Miss Elisabeth Marbury from Miss Elsie De Wolfe gives a vivid description of the evacuation on March 26 of the Ambrine Hospital at Compiègne where Miss De Wolfe was a nurse. Miss De Wolfe wrote:

"Every one is flying, the refugees are walking on and on with all their pitiful household goods. Bombardment for three days and nights. The General Headquarters have left bag and baggage forty-eight hours ago, in the night. The streets are full of straggling English tommies, all badly wounded, but still able to crawl along. One man with the blood pouring out of a shattered knee I did up in the street as best I could.

"I don't want to leave, but we've received marching orders and must obey. The cellar of this house is full of women and children; a woman old and trembling is at the door imploring me to take her husband, who is bedridden, away 'before they come,' she cries. Alas, I can do nothing. All of our seventeen ambulances are full to overflowing with our hospital equipment and our wounded."

FAIRBANKS NOT PARTED.

Film Actor Says Report Is a Piece of German Propaganda.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., April 11.—Reports emanating from New York that Douglas Fairbanks, the film actor, and his wife had agreed to separate without formal divorce were branded as "the work of German propagandists" and entirely without foundation by Mr. Fairbanks. He received word of the alleged separation agreement when he reached Flint tonight, where he spoke in the Liberty Loan campaign, and took occasion to deny its truth.

"The story is false," he declared. "It is a piece of German propaganda and is on a level with the report spread by them that I was shot. Three times the shooting story has been started since I began work for the Liberty Loan. My wife and I have no differences whatever, and the story is untrue from beginning to end."

The story from New York quoted Mrs. Fairbanks as saying: "We have parted, but still are friends. I took this action to protect my son, Douglas, Jr."

NEW WAR BASE IN BROOKLYN

Government Takes Over Five Blocks of Waterfront.

The United States Government took over, yesterday, the waterfront between Fifty-eighth Street and Sixty-third Street, South Brooklyn, for the establishment of another war base and will expend about $25,000,000 "for an expeditionary depot, providing facilities for storage of supplies connected with the common defense."

The Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York recently completed a careful investigation of the several zones in the Port of New York and several of the important reasons which lead its special committee to favor this tract now taken over by the Government were its proximity to the Bush Terminal, now used by the Quartermaster's Department, the New York Connecting Railroad and the Long Island Railroad.

As a result of this inquiry members of the Chamber visited Washington and urged upon Government officials the advisability of selecting this site, which will permit the construction of a dozen or more 1,400-foot piers.

APPROVED BY CLEMENCEAU.

Premier Now Head of French Heroes Lafayette Fund.

Premier Clemenceau is now the head of the French Heroes Lafayette Memorial Fund, Inc., in France. Announcement of his acceptance came in a cable message to John Moffat, Executive Chairman of the organization in New York. The cable was sent by Mrs. Ralph Sanger of this city, who is now in France in the interest of the fund.

Mrs. Sanger's cable also announced that an arrangement had been made in Paris whereby refugee children of the bombarded regions were now being sheltered and fed. Appeals are being made for emergency funds so that more of these children may be cared for. The Paris committee has cabled assurances that vast numbers of children can be cared for if American funds are furnished. All contributions should be sent to James A. Blair, Jr., Treasurer, 360 Madison Avenue.

SOLDIERS ON STAGE CAPTURE AUDIENCE

Men of 27th Division Make a Success with "You Know Me, Al."

ALL THEIR OWN PRODUCTION

New York never doubted that the soldier lads she sent to the 27th Division could fight. Last night, at the Lexington Theatre, she learned that some of them at least could act and act well enough to do credit to any Broadway theatre. A large audience had been attracted by the lure of the khaki, but for three hours they laughed and applauded because of the merit alone of the men on the stage.

"You Know Me, Al," was a distinct success from the opening number to the final curtain. Best of all it was completely the work of "The New York Division, (27th U. S. A.,) which "presented" the performance. The book was written by Privates W. Anson Hallahan, Hugh Stanislaus Stange, and Stanard Mears; the lyrics were by Lieutenant William A. Halloran, Jr., and the music by Private Burton Hamilton. Sergeant Leon de Costa arranged the interpolated numbers, Trumpeter Stanley Hughes coached the dances, Private Harry Gribble staged the performance, the presentation was managed by Captain Tristram Tupper, and everything was under the direction of Lieutenant Halloran. Even the scenery was painted by soldiers.

Every member of the cast, including Arline Bronson, a society bud of most feminine get-up, and Sally La Bergere, the vampire, was a man of the Twenty-seventh. The two "girls" were Privates Walter Roberts and E. Albert Crawford. The "Female Chorus" was made up of Privates Dan Burns, W. Pauly, H. Plassman, G. Carr, W. M. Bramman, I. R. Waite, J. J. Sullivan, D. Mitchell, R. Hilton, J. McNally, R. M. Heft, R. Sentenne, and Corporal A. V. Streat. There was a male chorus, too, composed of Privates A. A. Jarrett, R. J. Timmins, H. Dougherty, H. M. Cuddy, Le Roy Beers, E. H. Dewtey, A. Cooper, C. Lacey, R. E. Nelson, J. Johannes, H. A. Unger, O. Kuhl, and Sergeant E. H. O'Leary. And the dancers were: Privates S. Scammacc, J. Clooney, C. Fleming, E. Tierney, A. Fitzpatrick, G. Downey, S. Ahearn, and Corporal J. A. Donnelly.

Other members of the cast were:

Al Carlton, alias "Livewire Al," Private Russell Brown; Bill McGraw, alias "Brightlights," Private Sidney Marion; Tom Brush, alias "Reddycash," Private Curt Karpe; Amos Bronson, a retired merchant, Private Harry Gribble; Barrington Booth, an actor, Private Stanley G. Wood; Primrose Tinney Jolson, a black-face comedian, Private Jack Mahoney; a Cabaret Singer, Private Jack Roche; a Dancer, Trumpeter Stanley Hughes; a Vaudevillian, Private Andrew Kennedy; Another Actor, Private J. R. McDonald; And One More, Private H. M. Cuddy; Himself, Private Harvey Brooks; Knoth Sounde, Private W. Pauly; Lotta Noyes, Private Dan Burns.

The orchestra was composed of men selected from the bands of the division, and an Hawaiian orchestra was made up of specially musicians, who are soldiers for the time being. But there is nothing in "You Know Me, Al," of the amateur, college-boy type. All in it had professional experience on the stage before they went to the camp.

The play will remain in New York for ten nights, when, according to present plans, it will return to camp. The organization will be kept together, however, and when the 27th goes "over there," "You Know Me, Al," will be produced behind the trenches. The Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense co-operated with the men of the division in bringing the piece to the city, and last night representatives of the committee sold souvenir programs. Among them were Mrs. Sydney Breese, Mrs. Le Grand Griswold, Mrs. Jay Gould, Mrs. Robert Gerry, Mrs. George Baker, Jr., Mrs. Bishop, Miss Constance Poor, Miss Evelyne Byrd Smith, Miss Vera McNair, and Miss McClellin.

Barnard Plays in Aid of Red Cross.

The Dramatic Association of Barnard College announced yesterday that its Spring plays "Notions" and "Know Ye By These Presents" would be given at the Brinckerhoff Theatre, 119th Street and Broadway, on April 26 and 27 for the benefit of the American Red Cross. The cast of "Notions," the work of Miss Olivia Cauldwell, '18, includes Miss Theresa Mayer, '18; Miss Cauldwell, and the Misses Ruth Amberg, '19, and Katherine Brosnan, '20. The Misses Winthrop Russell, '20; Dorothy Butler, '20; Marian Townsend, '19; Pamela Thomae, '19; Erna Gunther, '19, are in the cast of "Know Ye By These Presents," which was written by Miss Edith Morgan, '18.

'Butterfly' and 'Marta' Sung in Day.

"Madama Butterfly" for the sixth time, "Marta" for the fifth, and both for the last times this season, made a double day of opera at the Metropolitan yesterday, well attended in spite of cold and rain. The special matinée of Puccini's Japanese-American classic enlisted Farrar and Fornia, Althouse and Chalmers, under Papi's direction, while Caruso and Barrientos, Perini and De Luca, led by Bodanzky, pleased a big evening audience with Flotow's melodies in old English scenes.

Anna Shomer Rothenberg Sings.

Anna Shomer Rothenberg, a sister of the playwright, Abraham Shomer, sang in Aeolian Hall last evening for the Palestine Restoration Fund. She prefaced with songs in English and Italian her most interesting numbers, which included Russian airs, such as Rubinstein's "Night" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Hebrew Chant," with actual songs of the Jewish people in many European countries. Alfred Kastner and Walter Golde played a novelty, "Kaddisch," for harp and piano, by Maurice Ravel.

Alice Sjoselius, Soprano, Pleases.

Alice Sjoselius, soprano, gave a first recital in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon, singing with intelligent appreciation some Swedish folksongs and new airs by composers of northern lands. Accompanied at the piano by Richard Hageman, she gave a fresh and playful fancy to American pieces, such as Horsman's "Shepherdess," Bartholomew's "Raining Violets," which drew its proper bouquet from the front rows, and MacDowell's "Long Ago," which might well have had his "Fair Springtime" for encore.

200,000 Testaments to Fighting Men

The New York Bible Society announced yesterday that it was receiving many words of appreciation from officers and privates in both the army and navy because of its large distribution of testaments to the men. Among many communications a letter was recently received at the office of the society, 66 Bible House, from the Ordnance Department at the port of embarkation in this harbor. This letter contained a very strong expression of gratitude because of the presentation of "active service" testaments to the enlisted men. The letter was signed by nearly one hundred men. The society is now distributing the second 100,000 of these testaments.

MUSIC NOTES.

Vera Fonaroff, violinist of the Olive Mead Quartet, will assist in a benefit for the Rand School library today at 7 East Fifteenth Street.

A DAY OF ROUGH WEATHER.

There was rain, hail, and snow yesterday, and once for a very brief time a glimpse of sunshine. The temperature fell to 30 degrees and the east wind piled up the water on the New Jersey side of the Hudson, so that last night Jersey City and Hoboken reported the highest tide in years. The same wind drove the rain and hail with stinging force and most of the accidents on police reports were set down as due to the storm.

In Hoboken last night the tide had made ferry entrances almost impassable and the water was pouring into the Hudson tunnel at such a rate that the pumps had to be set going. At the Lackawanna ferry the water extended 200 yards into the city, and vehicles had to give up use of the boats in the evening.

The old United States transport Meade, which was being towed to an Atlantic port for use as a training ship, broke away from her tug in the gale and a collier was sent to bring her to port.

The ferryboat Huguenot was thrown upon the public dock at New Rochelle yesterday by the gale and high tide. A pile pierced her hull and she was left hanging after the tide went down.

The highest temperature reported yesterday was 37 degrees at 8:20 A. M. and the lowest, 30 at 5:15 A. M. The mercury remained between 33 and 36 degrees all day and last night. The forecast is for rain today and tomorrow with strong northeast to north winds.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO AMERICA.

Sir John Foster Fraser Says We Have Done Splendidly.

"Some idea of the terrific battle waged in the western theatre of war may be got from the fact that each hour during a long period of the recent fighting the British were having as many casualties as the United States has had in France since it entered the war," said Sir John Foster Fraser during an address at the Union League Club in New York last night.

"Today," he added, "all the resources of all the Allies are being pooled. I am confident there is no doubt in the mind of any responsible man in France and Britain that America will send 2,000,000, 5,000,000, and, if need be, 10,000,000 men to aid the common cause. There is now no transport obstacle in the way to America having an army of 1,500,000 men in France before the close of the present year. During the three months I have been in the United States I have noticed a quickening of the war spirit. May I respectfully suggest that you do not waste time mourning over what you call your unpreparedness or in futile recrimination. America has done splendidly, and all the world knows you purpose to do more splendidly."

NEGROES NOT MISTREATED.

Assistant to Secretary of War Denies Stories Widely Circulated.

Emery J. Scott, Special Assistant to the Secretary of War, issued a statement last night setting at rest various rumors regarding the use of negro troops and the treatment accorded them. Mr. Scott characterizes as "untrue and ridiculous" rumors that in France only negro troops will be used as shock troops, that negro troops abroad are abused by their officers, that the Germans have threatened to torture to death any negro captured in battle, and that in Columbia Base Hospital there now are 200 negro soldiers with their eyes gouged out and their arms cut off by Germans, the story going that after the Germans got through with them they were sent back to the American lines and then shipped home.

Mr. Scott says there are no soldiers at the Base Hospital, who have been mutilated by Germans, and calls attention to the frequently manifested policy of Secretary Baker of permitting no discrimination in the army because of race or color, cites the fact that negro troops are engaged in all branches of the service the same as white men, and that there are more than 1,000 commissioned negro officers in the line. Mr. Scott adds that in every reported case of abuse of negroes an investigation has been held and every guilty person has been punished. He also says where local draft boards have shown discrimination against negroes the War Department has ordered the discharge of such boards and, in some instances, has referred the cases to the Department of Justice for prosecution.

REFUSES LUNACY INQUIRY.

Justice Hotchkiss Decides Miss Clarkson Needs No Guardian.

An application for a commission in lunacy for Miss Lavinia Clarkson, 76 years of age, formerly of Potsdam, N. Y., who inherited the estates left by two unmarried sisters and is now said to be worth nearly $1,000,000, was denied yesterday by Justice Hotchkiss. The application was made by Miss Clarkson's niece, Mrs. Emilie V. Moore, of 317 West Eighty-sixth Street, and was based on alleged undue influence over Miss Clarkson by Mrs. Moore's sister, Miss Annie Clarkson.

It was alleged that Miss Clarkson has been induced to give away unduly large sums to charitable and religious organizations. The papers in the case showed that Miss Clarkson has been paying off a donation of $75,000 to the Clarkson College of Technology, and that she has been a regular contributor to the salary of Bishop Coadjutor Nelson of the Protestant Episcopal Church. The Rev. Dr. William T. Manning of Trinity Church and Henry C. Swords, President of the Fulton Trust Company, with several well-known alienists, made affidavits in which they declared their belief in Miss Clarkson's sanity.

Releases Grain for Dutch.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Immediate transportation of two shiploads of grain to Holland was authorized today by the War Trade Board to meet the growing shortage of food in that country. A third steamer will be permitted to proceed to Argentina from a Southern port of the United States to load grain for Holland. The cargoes will amount to 14,000 tons.

L. E. Kirstein Resigns.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Major Gen. Goethals, the acting Quartermaster General of the army, announced today that Louis E. Kirstein had resigned as Administrator of Labor Standards for Army Clothing.

Mr. Kirstein will be succeeded by W. Z. Ripley of Harvard University.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The engagement of "Hedda Gabler" at the Plymouth, originally announced as two weeks, has been extended to three. "A Doll's House," accordingly, will be offered on the night of April 29.

"The Man Who Stayed at Home" will be the program for soldiers and sailors at the Playhouse next Sunday night in place of the usual vaudeville bill. All men in uniform will be admitted free of charge.

The thirteenth anniversary of the opening of the Hippodrome occurs today, and will be celebrated tomorrow by a street parade in aid of the Liberty Loan and war stamp campaigns. In addition, an anniversary program will be given at the Hippodrome Sunday night.

A new bill, consisting of three one-act plays, will be offered at the Greenwich Village Theatre next Thursday. On the program will be Arthur Schnitzler's "The Big Scene," translated by Charles Henry Meltzer; "Ile," by Eugene O'Neill, and "The Maid of France" by Harold Brighouse. "Pan and the Young Shepherd" will be continued until the opening of the new bill.

The Friars will give a dinner at their clubhouse on Sunday, April 28, in honor of William Morris, the theatrical manager.

Frederick E. Saward's Will Upheld.

The jury before Surrogate Cohalan that heard the contest of the will of Frederick E. Saward, editor and owner of The Coal Trade Journal, who died Dec. 24, returned a verdict yesterday upholding the will. The contestants, who were heirs at law of the decedent, alleged that he was not of sound mind for several years before he made his will, which, coupled with the fact that he was blind, made him susceptible to undue influence. Edward J. Berwind, coal operator, was one of the witnesses who believed that Mr. Saward was of sound mind.

NEW YORK, FRIDAY, APRIL 12, 1918.

CITY AND COUNTRY CO-OPERATING.

The Third Liberty Loan is proving the easiest to sell for several reasons, one of the chief being the friendly rivalry between city and country as to which shall do more than its share. Hitherto New York has led other cities. New York now is maintaining its leadership, but less easily, because the cities and even the smaller towns in the country districts are doing better than before, not a little to the relief of New York. It is not an easy task to raise over a billion dollars. It is as hard for New York to do so as it is for smaller cities to find the thousands which give them honor flags.

There is equality of duty in both cases, but the proportion of ability has been larger in the smaller or provincial districts. Few if any of them can show such depletion of banking resources through previous loan subscriptions as can New York. On the other hand, New York cannot hope to rival any of the numerous cities which are earning several stars apiece for their honor flags. The number of the flags and the number of the stars are the new features in this "drive" which show the greater interest in the suburban or even the strictly rural districts, where money gathers in small pools, and usually is devoted to local uses. Each of them which devotes some portion of its means to national and foreign uses broadens its outlook on the world, and feels itself stirred with a new pride.

These little subscriptions exceed the great ones in the total, and carry the country's weight with them, as the big city subscriptions cannot. It is fitting that the bonds to beat the boches should come from where the recruits for the national army come. Then they know that the home money is behind them, and the Kaiser knows the fact as well as they. The size of the subscription is not the measure of the effort, and the small cities and the small subscribers have a right to feel that their effort is appreciated. When 100,000,000 act together they make hard jobs easy.

The best the country has done yet is to interest one in ten in the loans to smash Kaiserism. The war ought to be as interesting as an election, even a Presidential election. Subscriptions from 15,000,000 would be below Presidential election returns, and from 20,000,000 would be little above them. The 20,000,000 subscribers ought to be got, as well as the three billion dollars minimum, with a billion or two more for good measure. The returns are encouraging regarding the totals of both subscribers and subscriptions. All records have been beaten because the little brooks are filling the big stream as never before. There could not be better proof that the country is in the war to win over every obstacle.

"AMERICAN" SOCIALISTS.

The seven Socialist Aldermen who some weeks ago opposed the board's efforts to promote the sale of war savings stamps consented not to oppose the resolution in favor of the Liberty Loan. They even voted for it. The reasons for their present willingness to support a war which they were then opposing were given by their leader, ALGERNON LEE. The reasons are worth sober consideration by Americans who love their country.

They are three. One was the President's "renewed declaration" that he is willing to open peace negotiations whenever Germany shall give over her lust for world domination. That reason may be dismissed. There is nothing in it. If the Socialists were not convinced by the President's earlier declarations, we see no reason why they should be convinced by his "renewed declaration," and we do not believe they were.

The second is the attitude of the Socialists of Great Britain, France, Belgium, and Italy. This reason also may be dismissed. The attitude of the Socialists of the allied countries has been the same from the beginning of the war. The American Socialists have been a shameful exception to the rule that Socialists everywhere have joined manfully in combating the attempt of the German autocracy to extend its sway over the world and crush the liberties of the nations back into a despotism of the Middle Ages. The Russian Socialists were also an exception. The American Socialists have learned nothing new about the attitude of the British, French, Belgian, and Italian Socialists, and we cannot believe their assertion that this attitude has suddenly influenced them when it never did before.

The third reason given by Mr. LEE is the international situation, "especially the aggressive and perfidious "conduct of the German Government "toward the Russian Republic." And that is the real reason. Nothing would have induced these men to take any interest in the United States. Nothing would have induced them to regard her war as their war. Germany might work her will on America and welcome, for America is alien to them; America is a "capitalistic" country, and her life or death is nothing to them. But when Germany laid her hand on the Bolshevist "republic" of Russia, she laid it on what to them is the True Cross, or the Ark of the Covenant. It is well for Americans who love their country to understand this attitude of mind, to ponder it gravely, and never to forget it.

WILL ANYTHING COME OF IT?

It will profit nobody if the report of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs about our failure to produce airplanes for war service is treated merely as a contribution to the files of the document room. The report reveals what the committee very temperately describes as a "gravely disappointing situation." We need not dwell upon the details of the conditions the committee found to exist. The disappointment to the country will not be softened by anything contained in the minority report signed by three Democratic members of the committee. They merely set up in palliation of the shortcomings in airplane production the very great difficulties encountered in the work. In time of war men must be found who can overcome difficulties.

The important thing now is to end the country's disappointment, to win success where the record thus far is largely one of failure. The facts are before Congress, before the Administration. The recommendation of the committee is that "the matter of pro-"duction should be taken out of the "hands of the Signal Corps entirely," that it "should be controlled by one "executive officer appointed by the "President and responsible to him." The recommendation and the report cannot be ignored. The matter is far too serious for any further exhibition of a "certain aloofness in dealing with "persons possessing information based "upon experience" to which the committee report refers as one of the causes of failure. Mistakes have been made, very serious mistakes, that cannot be denied. They should be frankly admitted and promptly corrected. That is the best way out of a pretty bad situation. That way will best satisfy the country, it is the best way to hasten the production of airplanes for use of American soldiers in France.

THE BRITISH RESISTANCE.

The withdrawal of the British from Armentières, when it was "full of gas," may have anticipated the inevitable, for the enemy was gaining ground north and south of that shell-wrecked town. The defenders could hardly be "gassed" out of Armentières, but they could not escape being pinched out of it unless a counter-stroke on a front of fifteen miles threw the enemy back. The holding of Messines Ridge by the British in spite of furious attacks by the Germans in great strength is encouraging, not only because that long but not high hill has figured before in many a hard-fought fight and is coveted for its strategical importance, but because it is one of many commanding slopes that lie in the path of the Germans with their faces to the west. It is evident that they must pay dearly for every mile they gain in that part of the field, after leaving the level country about Comines.

The spectacle of the Germans moving forward and not brought to a standstill does not signify that they are getting a sure hold upon victory. Their advance is very stubbornly contested, and they are paying the price in heavy losses. Yesterday they carried Wytschaete, La Creche, Nieppe, and Hollebeke, only to be thrown back and out by counterattacks. On Wednesday they got into Lestrem, but held it only a short time, being driven back across the River Lawe. Bitter fighting is going on for the village of Ploegsteert, three miles north of Armentières. Everywhere at points of contact the armies are locked in a desperate struggle, and as the Germans make most of the attacks, their infantry must be suffering the greater losses.

In this war, the retreat from Mons excepted, the British on the defensive have finally tired out the offensive; there is, then, no reason for dejection. The storm which the Germans have loosed to win a decisive triumph on a front of almost one hundred miles shows no sign of abatement and tries men's souls cruelly; but it is beating on troops that have a reputation for not knowing when they are worsted and who have often snatched victory from imminent defeat. Behind them the patient and alert FOCH is watching, awaiting the moment when the enemy overreaches himself or falters from exhaustion. So long as the British line does not break, though it may give, confronting the enemy and striking hard at him, there is no cause for alarm. The crisis may be still far off, and when it comes the Generalissimo of the Allies will take the initiative and seek a decision himself.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

Who is to be the next City Superintendent of Schools? The Board of Education will take up the question formally next Monday. Actually, solicitation and canvassing in behalf of candidates have been going on for some time. Even the counting of votes is going on.

The kind of man for that office is not the kind of man most often "mentioned" for it. The adequate holder of it should be of keen, trained intellect, familiar, theoretically and practically, with the history, the systems, the programs, and the facts of education, cultivated, experienced, of tested administrative ability. If he has, in addition, might of character and a long record of educational achievement, a high and various distinction, the concentration of the specialist, the versatility of an accomplished and a various talent; if he happens to be a scholar, a man of affairs and a man of the world, so much more fortunate the community.

Dr. JOHN HUSTON FINLEY, our State Commissioner of Education, is perhaps as fine an example as can be found of the educator that New York ought to have as her Superintendent of Schools.

At any rate, the Board of Education should look beyond the fantastic squabble about Garyism, anti-Garyism, substitute Garyism, beyond parochial candidates. It should seek the ablest man.

IRISH CONSCRIPTION.

There has long been a great sympathy with Ireland in the United States. That old sympathy, so often invoked and played upon by demagogues in Congress eager to exploit it in votes, should not be misunderstood by men in Ireland who count upon American opposition to that conscription to which the Lloyd George Government is committed.

The American attitude toward England and the English has radically changed. One with us in the last stand for freedom, fighting and enduring with a steady courage beyond praise, the English, like the French, the Scotch, the Welsh, the Irish not seduced by Sinn Feinism, the Canadians, the Australians, are our friends, our comrades, our brothers. Moreover, the pro-German and anti-American demonstrations of the Sinn Feiners, their insults to our sailors and our flag, have not made Americans any more partial to Irish slackers in Ireland.

Why should Irishmen in Ireland longer be allowed to shirk their just part in the war of free civilization? They owe service. They must pay it, as the misled malcontents of the Province of Quebec have to pay it, as the men of military age of isolated German communities in Wisconsin, for instance, have to pay it.

What is good enough for the United States is good enough for Ireland. Not here, of all places, will the Irishmen who will not do their duty find favor or support. It is another sort of Irishman that America loves, the Irishman of the British and Dominions armies, the man of Irish birth or descent in our own.

As to conscription in Ireland or the raising of the military age in Great Britain, no adverse argument, if such it can be called, approaches in weakness that of The Manchester Guardian, which says that Germany will have triumphed or been beaten before the conscripts will be ready. Nobody knows how long this continuous battle will last. The longer it goes on, the longer the war goes on, the greater the value of fresh forces. It is the last ounce of resolution, the last superiority of strength, that will win. A few hundred thousand men, four months hence or six months hence, may hold in their hands then or some time the supreme decision.

THE RIGHT TO STRIKE IN WARTIME.

The right to strike and the right to strike in wartime are horses of different colors. Both in war and in peace the right to strike and the right to lock out go together as complementary parts of a whole which should be treated together or not at all. That is particularly true when British labor has set such a patriotic example to American unions, and when American labor and capital have just joined in an amicable arrangement for the adjustment of all questions between them without a strike or a lockout.

The Senate, like the House, has voted both ways on the proposal to make strikes in munition works both lawful and unlawful in the same bill. The difference between the two houses is that the House's vote to unite the contradictory enactments was its second thought, while the Senate's rejection of the proposal comes at the last moment, in the rejection of the conference report. The Senate's second thought is better than that of the House. This paltering with the matter suggests either a humbug or a fraud, on either labor or capital, or the country, which is sending soldiers abroad while laws for their protection are passed and defeated by votes reeking with politics and inconsistency. Such action is amazing within a day or two of the President's proclamation of the treaty between labor and capital.

The Senate's action is to be applauded, because it gives the House opportunity to reconsider its position. Otherwise the country will lose the benefit of a necessary protection of the production of munitions. The bill is limited to times "when the United States is at war," and cannot be considered as prejudicing labor's rights in peace. No one would forbid all strikes in peace. It would seem that no good American would specifically authorize strikes in munition works in war. Yet the House adopted the proposal, 272 to 38, and even the Senate allowed it to go into conference. What sort of lawmakers or Americans are they who think such procedure deserves the support of the people who elect Congressmen?

IMPORTANT IN THE CONDUCT OF THE WAR.

Preference List No. 1 sounds statistical and dry, but it is of vast interest to many people. The industries, concerns, institutions, &c., listed are to get their coal and coke first, because they will contribute so much to winning the war. Winning the war is the absorbing and imperative business of the American people. Twenty-four hours of every day must be devoted to it. The nonessential industries will have to stand aside and give the right of way to the war-winning industries, which cannot function without coal and coke. The Fuel and Railroad Administrations are notified to see that they get their supply. This is the order of the higher War Industries Board. Its Chairman, Mr. BERNARD M. BARUCH, will render a verdict in all matters in controversy, subject to revision by the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, the President of the United States. Preference List No. 1 is distinctly a command of the war authority.

As modern wars, and particularly this all-involving conflict, are fought by whole peoples as well as the armies that fight for them on the field of battle, this list prepared by the Priorities Board, which is subordinate to Chairman BARUCH's body, contains businesses that at first sight seem far removed as useful factors from the munitions plants, but are nevertheless indispensable in the conduct of the war. Thus there are found in the catalogue insecticides and fungicides, fertilizers, soap, twine, laundries, seeds, farm implements, newspapers and periodicals. Public institutions, buildings, and utilities are included. Food containers, hemp, jute and cotton bags, and refrigeration occupy an important place on the list.

The Priorities Board has tried to think of all the essential industries, but has doubtless overlooked sundry of them. They will be added later. The list has an imperfection here and there, perhaps. Producers or wholesalers of seeds, except flower seeds, are to share in the preference. It is true that in warmaking potato seed is of more importance than flower seeds, but an argument might be made for blooms for the hospitals. "Domestic consumers" looks strange in the list, but it stands for the people who fight, work, or buy bonds. They really might stand at the head of it. They must get coal early and often, or the war will not be won. Singularly, automobiles are not on the list; an oversight, perhaps. The making of trucks and service cars is a munitions industry.

There is to follow a list, which will probably be No. 2, of plants and concerns that should have a preference in the transportation of raw materials and supplies used in manufacturing. This is very necessary, for it has been found that the red tape of Government priority orders, to forward things that might wait, has often stalled on side tracks such "must" products as steel plates billed for idle shipyards. After twelve months of America in the war, Preference List No. 1 seems a little overdue. But there has been no superman with infallible vision and unlimited authority to think of everything and order it done.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Their Flag Is Now All Right. How seriously the Russian statesmen of this day take their responsibilities and how thoroughly they appreciate their country's need of wise action to guard what is left of it from utter ruin—both these things are well shown by the fact that the Executive Committee of the All-Russian Soviets, sitting in ancient Moscow, took up this week as its most pressing task the finding of a suitable legend for inscription on the national flag. After the deliberation deserved by a question so momentous, they solemnly determined, first, that the flag should be red, and, second, that it should bear the thrilling words, "Rossiskay Sotzialyiticheskaya Federativaaya Sovietskaya Respublika."

That, now, was work well done! The words doubtless sound as well as they look, and one can well imagine how, when shouted in thunderous unison by great masses of brave Russian soldiers as they marched at double quick away from the firing line, their foes would be filled with fear—fear of not being able to follow fast enough to catch up and finish the business in hand. As interpreted by the obliging correspondent who notified an interested world of the committee's achievement, the words mean "Russian Socialistic Federative Soviet Republic." He is probably right, as he ought to know, and then the words look as if they would mean about what he said they do.

It is a curious and highly significant fact that only one of them is Russian in anything except what might be called embroidery. To have made the new Government's official name any more Russian than the Government itself evidently would have been a sad mistake. It was avoided, and therefore that mistake needs no further consideration, and there is no waste of time more to be reprehended than that which consists in worrying or grieving over what didn't happen.

The committeemen must be praised for seeing that, as their Government differs so much from other Governments, its flag should also differ. Flags with inscriptions have not been unknown in the past, but the capitalistic nations of modern times are not thus equipped, their haughty owners taking it for granted that mere arrangement of colors will make their banners sufficiently distinctive. Bolshevist Russia deigns to explain and describe, it being a new thing under the sun.

His Triumph Gives Him Courage. After that interesting youth, CHARLES FRANCIS PHILLIPS, was turned out of Camp Upton, not because he refused, as he did, to wear his country's uniform, but because, as a convicted criminal, he was held not a fit associate for American soldiers, vehement declarations came from Washington that the authorities at the camp had erred in taking action which showed every pacifist how to escape military service. We were also told that PHILLIPS would have to go back and obey orders or suffer the usual consequences of mutiny in time of war.

The natural supposition was that this reasonable course had been followed, and, as nobody heard that anything had happened to young PHILLIPS, it was generally assumed that he had yielded, with or without grace, to the commands of the high powers, and so the whole affair was forgotten. But it seems that PHILLIPS did not go back to Camp Upton, and that his determination not to do any fighting proved stronger than the Government's more or less officially announced determination that he should or else have unpleasant experiences. Instead, he stayed at home and resumed the activities that led to his original conviction.

It was natural that he should, as the result of those activities had been so pleasing to him and his kind. Trouble now threatens PHILLIPS again, indeed, for an Inspector of the Post Office Department has found out that he has been engaged for some time in organizing resistance to military training and in sending all over the country "literature" of a kind which the Inspector considers seditious. Sample passages from it indicate that the judgment of this guardian of our mails is excellent, but PHILLIPS, remembering his previous triumph, probably views prosecution as a favor and faces the future with confidence that he is in no more danger of compulsion to refrain from doing what he wants to do than he was of compulsion to do what he didn't want to do. As they couldn't, or at any rate didn't, make him enter the army, the chances are that they can't, or at any rate won't, make him stop trying to keep other young men from learning what he in his wisdom considers a dreadful trade and knows to be a dangerous one.

Casualties Still Identified. Now that the War Department has resumed the giving out of the names of our soldiers abroad who are killed in battle, die of disease, or are wounded or captured, a difficult question is raised. Newspapers all over the country subject these lists to careful scrutiny, do their best to identify the men to whom they belong, and, whenever successful in this effort, as they often are, they print the news which the department declines to disclose. The papers have not received the request not to do this, which practically all of them would heed as if it were an order, as they have many other requests from governmental sources, and they will continue their present course till such a request is received.

The result is that most of the "casualties" are identified in the localities where there is a special or personal interest in them, and the only difference between this and immediate and direct disclosure by the War Department is that a lot of useless labor is imposed on the newspapers. There can be no military advantage in that—and no military disadvantage that can be seen outside of the departmental and army circles.

Now and then groundless anxieties or griefs are caused by this method, for names of the commoner sort—and sometimes those not common—may belong to several men in widely separated parts of the country, and hence many identifications are made, all but one of which, of course, are wrong. The situation is one unsatisfactory in every respect, and in one way or another it should be cleared up. Would not the best way be to accompany each name given out by the War Department with that of the town where its owner volunteered or was drafted? Mistakes would then be few enough to be negligible, and no real information would be conveyed to the enemy.

HOME RULE AND DRAFT.

Two Irish Questions Might Be Settled Together.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I rejoice to see that Mr. Lloyd George is about to act on the principle which I advocated in my letter, signed "A Loyal Briton," in your issue of April 5, viz., that of coupling home rule for Ireland with conscription. If the Irish people will not fight for their country and the empire of which it forms a part, they do not deserve home rule or even a vote for Members of Parliament.

Recently the English Premier offered Ireland two alternatives: one was home rule for those parts of Ireland that desired it, the other was a convention to try and arrange home rule for the whole country. The Irish leader chose the latter. On April 5 the convention sent in its report. Whatever terms it agreed on should be accepted by all right-minded men as the only possible present solution of the Irish problem. If the Irish will not accept it they should lose the sympathy of the civilized world.

They have now the choice between this and conscription by force. If they are men with courage, with conscience, they will gladly join the civilized world in throwing in their lot against the most devilish conspiracy to destroy the rights of man that the world has known.

Will not the Irish in America who are acting loyally here advise their brethren across the seas?

MR. SPARGO EXPLAINS.

Socialist Conference Proposed for Those Working for Allies' Victory.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I agree so thoroughly with my good friend W. J. Ghent that I deplore the publication of his letter, which seems to indicate a serious divergence of view. If Mr. Ghent had written to Mr. Stokes or to me before rushing into print he would have found, I think, that on all essentials we are agreed.

The letter, which was addressed by J. G. Phelps Stokes and myself to the National Socialist Party of Great Britain and which Mr. Ghent criticises, was not meant for publication and was only one stage of what we believed might be a prolonged discussion. Urged by the British organization to join in creating a new Socialist international organization, we tentatively suggested that it might be wiser to attempt to control and possess the existing organization through the organization of our forces to that end. (It is all right to declaim that the Socialist International does not exist, but the fact is that there is still a recognized Socialist International, with the International Socialist Bureau as its central authority.)

Not as a final proposal, but tentatively, we suggested that it would be well for all the Socialists sharing our views—i. e., our absolute opposition to the German and Austrian Socialists and our determination to insist upon their condemnation and repudiation—to meet in conference prior to the holding of a regular international Socialist congress, to make plans for achieving our purposes inside the existing international if possible, otherwise outside of it.

To the Socialists of Great Britain, who have avowed their hostility to the German and Austrian Socialists, except the small Liebknecht group, and have consulted with us because we are known to hold very similar views, we proposed a conference of "those from every country who share our views." Mr. Ghent astounds me by asking whether this conference would "include the party Socialists of this country who have so assiduously made themselves the tools of Prussianism"; the minority groups of Germany who, though opposing the German Government, stand for a German peace; "the precious Lenine and Trotzky" and other elements. He must have permitted his zeal to temporarily cloud his discernment. Our proposal was for a conference of those "who share our views"—that is, the views of two definite groups known to all the world to be irreconcilably opposed to all the pro-Kaiser groups named by Mr. Ghent. Our proposal is, in fact, identical with that suggested by Mr. Ghent in the intimation that a conference might be desirable "among those elements who are sincerely and determinedly bent on the defeat of the German military power." Certainly I have never for a moment believed that talk can take the place of military action.

Smaller Merchant Vessels.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I noticed in your issue of the 22d inst. that Mr. Hurley of the Shipping Board purposes building ten steamers of 15,000 tons each. Now, we all know that a large vessel is a better target for a submarine than a small one and that seven or eight of 2,000 tons or so would be far more satisfactory, not only in escaping the subs, but in lessening the loss of life and material if they were torpedoed. What is required during the war is a large number of small, fast vessels. It is certainly a great mistake to put a large number of troops on any one vessel.

The Spies Around Us.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Has it ever struck any of your readers that we are surrounded by spies and the most unscrupulous of their caste? We may be living on the same floor in the most respectable or fashionable apartment houses and in close neighborhood may be living some vicious German who is plotting against the welfare of our beloved country. It is well to advise, especially our young people, not to talk too much anywhere under the present conditions and more especially of the movements of our soldiers and sailors. You never know who is listening. A word to the wicked is sufficient! In France, in every public place, there is a card displayed on which are printed the words "Taisez-vous." If France has her traitors, how many suspicious characters have we? In vulgar phraseology, "taisez-vous" means "shut up."

The Torrens Law.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The bill to amend the Torrens land title registration law, which was drawn under the supervision of the recording officers of the five counties of Greater New York, has passed the Senate and Assembly and is now ready for the Governor's signature. When those amendments become a law the examination of titles will be expedited, the cost thereof lowered, and the court procedure simplified. The real estate interests of the State of New York will be conserved, as it will cheapen the cost of examining titles. Furthermore, it will lower the tax rate in the various counties, as the examination of titles under this act will be done by official examiners of the Register's office and the payment therefor will be credited to the county.

THE AWAKENING.

I saw my country lost in dream, in twilight shadows roaming,
Viewing with dim, bewildered eyes a red star in the gloaming;
It beckoned onward to the West, where scarlet clouds were burning—

The thunders sounded from the verge, but still she went unheeding;
She did not take the straight, stern path, where Belgium's feet were bleeding;
Though bitter cries of anguish tore the peace of wood and hollow,
Though passionate trumpets pierced the wind, she did not hear and follow.

How slow she was to lift her head—to rend the sad world's story!
How slow to tread the bare scarred heights—to find her old-time glory!
True hands were pointing through the gloom, true hearts were burning, breaking
To hear once more her call to arms, to feel her soul's awaking.

The lurid truth has burned the veil, and set her deep eyes gleaming.
With those white hosts that guard the gates, she knows at last her hour,

God grant that she be strong to save, and swift to heaven's leading;
God grant that she may keep the path where valiant feet go bleeding!
Whatever on the mighty quest her spirit must surrender,
God lead her through the straight, rough ways to truth's immortal splendor!

MORE NURSES FOR THE WAR.

Lowering of Requirements Temporarily Urged as the Solution.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The statement attributed to Miss Amy Hilliard in the Sunday TIMES that there is no scarcity of nurses is at variance with the facts, and I am surprised that any one in an official position should make such an assertion.

It is well known that, with one or two exceptions, every hospital in the city is short of nurses, both graduates and pupils. Physicians requiring nurses for private cases have frequently to search the town over without result. There is a real and actual dearth of both pupil and graduate nurses, and a remedy must be found.

There is an unusually strong nurses' association, with headquarters in this city, and, under the slogan of "higher education," this association has been instrumental in raising the preliminary requirements for women desiring to enter training schools beyond practical bounds, so that thousands of capable young women with natural qualifications for nursing are rejected by the Board of Regents, who control the situation at Albany. The material in this class is mostly of excellent quality, and would make efficient nurses, but they are rejected because they are not high school graduates of first or second years.

The remedy is to reduce the Regents' requirements, so that girls with grammar school education may enter the training schools during the period of the war. This would, to a large extent, meet the emergency caused by the calling of thousands of nurses to the military hospital service.

Unless this is done there is a possibility of hospitals following the example of a certain New York hospital, which has ceased to have a registered training school, and issues its diplomas to its graduates. This would be an unfortunate and retrograde movement, whereas a temporary lowering of the standard would not be of ultimate injury to the nursing profession, and the entrance requirements could be restored to their present basis after the war.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The close proximity of the article reporting Mr. Grimshaw's plea for shortening the term of training for nurses and the report of the Sixteenth Annual Convention of the New Jersey State Nurses' Association, with its exceptional brevity and inadequacy of detail, might lead the unobserving public to feel that the New Jersey nurses advocate a shorter course, reducing the so-called theoretical instruction. (THE NEW YORK TIMES, Thursday, April 4.) The New Jersey nurses have just succeeded in defeating a bill introduced into the Legislature of 1918 which would have abolished practically all requirements for entrance into the training schools.

The nurse problem has at least one advantage over the railroad problem. Nursing affairs are still in the hands of the nurses, who through long years of hard, disinterested work have brought the profession to the high position it now occupies. They are, indeed, in New Jersey as in many other States, "in power." The women of ideals and vision have made the nursing profession what it is—not the doctors nor any other group of people. The nurses themselves have made such organizations as the American Red Cross possible—an organization to which the country could turn and find it ready for war on shorter notice than any other group of people when war was declared. The nurses themselves have made possible the great public health movement, which prevents rather than cures sickness. Then why are not the nurses themselves equal to taking care of the nursing situation of today? The Government has not yet asked them for help that could not be provided, nor will it ever, for the nurses are ready in sufficient numbers to give their all, and the survey of the nursing situation in all States has brought out the fact that there are more pupils in the training schools at the present time than ever before in the history of the profession.

There is no law that can prevent any woman from entering a training school which is willing to receive her, where she can be taught the elements of nursing without the "brain stuffing," and graduate, but the law does say who shall practice as a graduate registered nurse, in order to protect the public from those whose knowledge and experience are limited. Physicians do not ask for the "R. N.," so they will tell you; but it is our experience as Superintendent that the nurse who has not qualified as an "R. N." is the one who is invariably refused by these same physicians. Competency is not secured without education. The higher the requirements of the school the more candidates there will be for that school.

Chairman Legislative Committee N. J. S. N. A.
Newark, New Jersey, April 9, 1918.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The American hospital and nurses are doing such splendid patriotic work just now that it seems decidedly ill-humored to give expression to any criticism of them. Still, in the words of the once popular song, "will some one kindly tell me, will some one answer why" it is that in these days, when there is such a shortage of nurses that many people are actually suffering for lack of nursing care, one hospital after the other and one nurses' organization after the other make rules abolishing twenty-four-hour duty? This means that in innumerable cases requiring practically no night care patients are compelled to keep two nurses, even when one nurse is able and willing to stay on duty. And the hospital always seems to be able to get that extra nurse somehow, even though all the hospitals and agencies are reporting "no nurses" to fill desperate outside need. It does seem that for the period of the war those rules might be suspended.

A VICTIM.
Richmond Hill, N. Y., April 6, 1918.

An Outrage in Name of Patriotism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The respectable and influential American newspapers should not allow the conduct of the "patriots" of Collinsville to be forgotten until they are punished to the limit of the laws they have outraged.

Patriotism is born of a higher ideal than cowardice, murder, and hatred of an enemy; it respects our country's institutions, recognizes its laws and keeps them, cherishes its country's fair name as a precious inheritance, and tries to practice the Christianity we profess, even though Germany has forgotten it.

If these creatures of Collinsville in the lynching of Prager were exponents of Americanism, if America were the protagonist of their kind of civilization, we would better surrender the world to German ideals and dedicate a new religion to the worship of the devil with his Imperial Lowness William the Last of Germany as its patron saint.

PROF. FRANCKE'S STAND.

His Statement Criticised as Qualified Loyalty to America.

Kuno Francke's declaration of loyalty to the cause of our country will be acceptable to many fair-minded people, but the thought persists that the expression lacks something in that it seems to indicate mental reservations and might be taken as an example of discretion brought about by adaptation to environment, a most potent factor in the shaping of opinions. It is not malice, but a consideration of his own words which prompts one to speculate on the question as to the road Mr. Francke would travel tomorrow were he in a neutral country instead of Gilbertsville, N. Y.

Mr. Francke must have a poor opinion of American intelligence when, at so late an hour, he speaks for the achievements of the German system of government. We need no more evidence. Our disillusionment is complete, too complete for the element of doubt to enter. The German system of government and the German people stand revealed in their true characters, and neither Government nor people can escape the deep damnation of their acts. In the face of a positive genius for diabolism consistently displayed by Government and people during the last four years, one has to wonder at the temerity of your correspondent in venturing to qualify his loyalty pledge with such prating.

WILLIAM TAYLOR.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I take exception to the subtle statements of Kuno Francke, Hon. Curator of the Germanic Museum of Harvard University. His letter is a series of "althoughs" and "whiles" and "provideds," and the entire tone of his condescending "support" is intolerably irritating.

Let 100 per cent. Americans scrutinize the complacent way in which the Hon. Curator of the Germanic Museum "sadly" accepts the fact that "Germany for the time being is my country's enemy." The Hon. Curator has "now come to believe that the participation of the United States will, &c., &c., provided the unselfish principles of President Wilson are strictly adhered to."

In short, the Hon. Curator reluctantly, conditionally, provisionally, slowly, sadly, discriminately decides that here in our country he will not espouse the cause of the country which is engaged in killing our boys. The whole psychology of the Teuton mind is revealed in this amazingly audacious letter.

A. PARKER NEVIN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read and reread the letter of Professor Kuno Francke, dated April 6, and published in your issue of today, hoping I might find in it an unalloyed loyalty to America; but there is one sentence that disappoints me. It follows: "But I must also recognize that the German system of government has achieved great things in the training of the German people in good citizenship and public service, as well as in raising the level of personal worth and attainment." The German system of government is what we are fighting against. It is a system that has made moral and spiritual degenerates of the German people. The public service is little else than slavery. Where is the personal worth? The attainment is materialistic. The German people have physical strength; so have the beasts of the jungle. They have intellect; so had Machiavelli and Beelzebub. Professor Francke appears to be apologizing for the German Government. A loyal American must necessarily condemn it.

THOSE OF TEUTON BLOOD.

The German Drive a Call to Them to Work for America.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The great drive of the "mad King," planned in cold blood and gloated over in pirate fashion, has opened our eyes more than ever and shown us Americans of Teuton blood more than ever our duty toward America and her allies. No man or woman in view of the stupendous tragedy now enacting—the greatest the world has ever known—has a right to go on with his daily life without doing something, by word or by deed, to help win the war. We must win the war and we must shorten the war. To win it means loyalty from every man and woman; to shorten it means help from every one. Every bit counts. Masses recklessly driven on have won the recent advance for the mad King, though at terrible cost. Let us meet mass with mass, force with greater force, that Teuton arrogance and aristocracy may be crushed.

If we ever were Americans in heart and soul we must be so now more than ever. There can be no middle ground. Citizens of Teuton birth or extraction should speak out or show by their affiliations and activities that they are 100 per cent. American. This, not only for their own sake but also that the world as well as this country may know what every German-American is willing to do to release the world from the grip of the Kaiser. That there is still need to urge our Teuton citizens to active expression of their Americanism is evident from the large anti-American vote in Wisconsin. It is shown also by minor incidents. In an important city of the Middle West a few days ago a wealthy banker of Teuton parentage was "too busy" to take part in a patriotic German-American movement. But he had not been too busy earlier in the war to sell German bonds or to collect money for German propaganda. It is pleasant to hear that the "busy" man is being watched by loyal eyes. But think of a man that owes all he has and is to America being "too busy" to be patriotic!

Let us not lose heart; retribution is bound to come. Let us not give way in despair when reading of more battlefields won by Hindenburg. This success does not weaken the spirit of America or her allies. We are more a unit than ever, more determined that "Kultur" shall not triumph over righteousness. Hindenburg's tremendous drive is heaping the battle plains of the Somme, already one vast graveyard, with thousands more of slain. But to what purpose? The barbarous Huns, who pray to their ancient heathen war Gott, are slowly bleeding their nation to death. Boys of 17 are ordered to fill up depleted ranks.

The day is coming when the mothers of Germany will begin to ask, "Where are our sons? We gave them to [illegible] safety for the Fatherland. Where is our safety now?"

Verily, it is time for all persons of Teuton birth or descent living here to drop their Germanism forever and be known simply as Americans. There is no other way. The Kaiser and his Government must go under, that Germany may live and the world be made free.

No man or woman now can afford to be idle. If we cannot give active service in the army or any other branch of the Government activities, if we [illegible] speak, we can still do something, taking part in every patriotic enterprise, and, just at this time, by buying Liberty bonds and urging others to buy them.

HYLAN PROTESTS MULCTING OF CITY

MAKES APPEAL TO SPEAKER

Measures Already Passed in Senate Boost Salaries, Create New Jobs and Pension Systems.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 11.—Raids on the New York City Treasury brought Mayor Hylan and other city officials to the Capitol today to file a protest, while Senate Leader Brown in open Senate session this afternoon scored the Senate Committee of New York City Affairs for permitting the objectional measures to get on the calendar. Mayor Hylan and the city officials who came with him confined their efforts toward preventing the mulcting of the city to the tune of millions to an earnest plea lodged with Speaker Sweet of the Assembly to kill the bills in the Assembly Committee on Rules. The last hope rests with the Speaker. In the Senate the damage already has been done.

Tammany and Republican Senators from New York City share about equally the responsibility for the mandatory bills to boost salaries, create new jobs, and establish new pension systems. In many instances the bills have been so drafted as to deprive the Mayor of his veto power. In at least one instance, it is charged, a Senator representing a remote rural district has been persuaded to become sponsor for legislation affecting New York City and condemned by city officials.

Pension Funds Threatened.

The multitude of pension bills are particularly objected to, because in drafting them all actuarial safeguards have been overlooked, so that in the end the pension funds would be bankrupted in comparatively short time and the city, as was the case in the matter of the teachers and police pension funds, be compelled to meet the cost of putting them on a sound financial basis again. Altogether it has been estimated, that the City of New York would face added expenditures of approximately [illegible] annually at once as a result of the joint activities of some spokesmen for Tammany Hall and the Republican County organizations in New York City in the Senate.

Mayor Hylan was seconded by President Alfred E. Smith of the Board of Aldermen and Borough Presidents Connolly of Queens, Riegelmann of Brooklyn, and Van Name of Richmond in his plea to Speaker Sweet to aid the city. Mayor Cornelius F. Burns of Troy, Chairman of the Mayors' Conference, also joined in the plea.

Besides protesting against the financial raids, the Mayor asked that the Ottinger West Side Terminal bill, which would take the settlement of the New York Central controversy away from the city authorities, and the Six-cent Fare bill be defeated, and that measures providing for the abolition of the Water Supply Commission, the Court House Board, and the Bronx Parkway Commission and the Foley "Home Rule" bill be passed. These measures are part of the so-called "Hylan program," and with his Municipal Ownership bill, were sidetracked weeks ago. Speaker Sweet said tonight that both the Ottinger bill and the Six-cent Fare bill were dead.

Craig Indorses New Tax Bill.

Controller Craig sent a telegram, which Senate Leader Brown read, in which the enactment of another Boylan bill, indorsed by the Controller, which calls for the listing of personal property for taxation purposes is provided for. That bill provides that on July 1 taxpayers possessed of more than $3,000 of personal property must file a sworn statement with the Municipal Tax Commission, setting forth its value. The Senate leader said he was opposed to this provision. Minority Leader Wagner wanted both bills passed, but failed to substitute the Controller's bill for the bill already passed when afforded an opportunity.

The Senate held an all-day session. The early hours were occupied by a lively debate on the Ottinger bill to repeal the Donnelly and Trust act, after which the bill was defeated by a vote of 21 to 23. The Wagner bill, exempting from the operations of the conspiracy clause in the anti-trust act, labor and agricultural organizations not formed for gain or profit, which was defeated in the Senate yesterday, was reconsidered today and passed by a vote of 27 to 21.

OPPOSES SIX-CENT FARE.

Borough President Dowling Gives No Comfort to I. R. T. Men.

Borough President Frank L. Dowling told a delegation of Interborough Rapid Transit employes yesterday that he was not in favor of increasing street car fares to six cents. The employes had called to ask his support.

"Let the Interborough get back some of the bonuses that it paid to its high-salaried men and rid itself of some of its agreements to pay 10, 15, 18 and 20 per cent. dividends on bloated bonds for surface railroad and other losses before it urges you to come here and ask me as an elected representative of the people to boost the six-cent fare scheme," said President Dowling.

Approves Exemption of Court Jobs.

ALBANY, April 11.—The State Civil Service Commission today approved action of the New York City Municipal Civil Service Commission in restoring to the exempt class ninety-two municipal court clerkships, paying $3,000 a year each. During the closing days of the Mitchel administration these positions were taken from the exempt class and made competitive.

Dinner to Justice Whitaker.

Supreme Court Justice Edward G. Whitaker was the guest of honor last night at a dinner given him by the members of the Manhattan Club, of which he is President. A portrait of the Justice, painted by Noretta McC. Smith, was presented to the club by the members. The speakers were Patrick Francis Murphy, ex-Senator James A. O'Gorman, and Supreme Court Justice Alfred R. Page, who acted as toastmaster. Among those present were William F. McCombs, James Buckley, John Lynn, R. A. C. Smith, John G. Saxe, Morgan J. O'Brien, Nathan Miller, George F. Harriman, Frank I. Cobb, and Edward G. Riggs.

EMERSON HOLDING OUT.

Now Refuses to Sign Petition for a Caucus on Prohibition.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 11.—Advocates of the Hill resolution to ratify the Federal prohibition amendment, who for a couple of days have been at work in an effort to obtain sufficient signatures to a petition to compel the calling of a caucus of Republican Senators and make ratification a party measure, declare that they are lacking only one vote of the eighteen required to have the caucus called. Senators A. P. Brown of Otsego and James W. Yelverton of Schenectady were added to the fifteen that had been obtained last night. After putting the new recruits on record they went to Senator Emerson of Warren, who, they declared, had promised to furnish the eighteenth signature to insure the calling of the caucus, and asked him to make good on his promise. Up to a late hour tonight Senator Emerson had declined to do so.

"I am for ratification," said Senator Emerson. "If they bring me a document demanding the calling of a caucus where we can have real action and not a humble petition for a Republican conference I will sign; otherwise I will not."

Even if the petition is signed up, should be delivered into the hostile hands of Senator Brown by tomorrow it would hardly be early enough to insure action. Under the rules the Senate leader would have twenty-four hours' time to consider the form of the call and the time for the conference, and no one doubts that he would take advantage of this provision. By the time this period had elapsed the hour set for final adjournment of the session would be at hand. The Legislature is scheduled to adjourn sine die at noon on Saturday.

RUSH WAR MEASURES.

Assembly Acts Quickly on Anti-Spy and Anti-Loafer Bills.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 11.—Two war measures, the Robinson anti-loafer bill and Senator Sage's anti-spy bill, went through the Assembly today with flying colors. In the long grind incident to adjournment some time Saturday, fifty bills went through in the Assembly today. Most of them were measures already passed by the Senate and were sent to the Governor immediately.

Socialists objected to the passage of the Robinson bill which would require all ablebodied males between eighteen and fifty to go to work upon call of the Governor for the period of the war.

The Sage bill, which the Governor is expected to sign immediately, makes it a felony to injure maliciously or destroy military property or equipment of the United States, any of its allies or of the State of New York. The provision also applies to articles used in the manufacture of military or naval equipment, buildings and vessels, railroad equipment, factories manufacturing war supplies and the tampering with highways, bridges or machines.

Senator Slater's bill to compel boys between 16 and 19 years to take military training passed the Assembly with the Socialists voting in the negative. The Slater bill is less drastic than one along the same lines introduced by Assemblyman Welsh of Albany, and already passed by the House. The Slater bill will probably be substituted for the Welsh measure, which provided for wearing of a uniform and made corporations employing boys not taking the training liable to a misdemeanor. The Welsh bill would also prohibit boys not in training from working.

Senator Wagner's bill abolishing women's night courts in New York City was passed and is ready for the Governor.

Ex-President Taft will address the Senate and Assembly in joint session at noon tomorrow.

ASSAILS AUTO MEN IN AIRPLANE TANGLE

BLAMES MANUFACTURERS

Declares Aeronautic Department Should Employ the Best Ability Obtainable.

Aroused by comment which he said he believed might put on the United States Signal Corps the entire blame for the failure of the aviation program, Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, who was empowered by President Wilson to inquire into conditions surrounding the construction of war airplanes, said yesterday that the Signal Corps should be a great school for aviation rather than interested in the building of airplanes. He assailed a "certain group of automobile builders," who he said undertook to build airplanes. Mr. Borglum made it plain that in his opinion the airplane program must be entirely removed from this group if the Government is to have "machines and engines in place of promises and delays."

"In editorial comment today inference is drawn from the Senate Military Committee's report that the Signal Corps of the army is chiefly to blame," Mr. Borglum said. "It will be unfortunate and it will be unfair to blame either the Signal Corps as a body or the great manufacturing facilities in America or the aeronautic ability of this country for the failure of our air program. It has not been the niceties of conception nor the finesse of production that has delayed our program. Uninformed people seized this job. Understand that and the rest is easy.

"There is another point that should not be forgotten in this hour of creating public opinion. The Government trusted this great aeronautical department implicitly and their constant publicity and promises deceived the world, together with the Administration. I know that the Administration months ago entered into an investigation, and the delay of the past few months since the investigation has begun should be placed at the door of the same interests which are interfering with new suggestions and program."

Mr. Borglum said that there was never a publicity department that worked with the smoothness of that of the aeronautical department. The object, he declared, was to keep the country satisfied and waiting.

"The Senate has made one recommendation of the greatest importance," he continued, "and that is that the future organization that shall govern or have control of the aeronautical department of our military machine should be absolutely unrelated to the interests that govern the present organization and put in the hands of men informed and disinterested. This department should be informed, international in character, and employ the best ability obtainable."

In reply to a question as to whom he meant when he spoke of "uninformed people who seized the job," he replied:

"A certain group of automobile people who took over airplane building. Airplanes were being built by automobile manufacturers instead of aeronautical people. They thought they could build engines and then build planes and put them all together. Now, you can't build airplanes until you have engines running like sewing machines.

"There were at least twenty admirable foreign engines that we could and should have had months ago. The Administration is not to blame for this situation. The President is the one man who has been pushing this thing months before the Senate took the matter up. The Signal Corps should be made the great aviation school, and it should not build airplanes."

URGES AN AID FOR WILSON.

General Business Manager for the Government Suggested.

The creation of a Department of Administration at Washington, to be composed of a staff of practically trained business men, to assist President Wilson in the questions of business details and for the further purpose of co-ordinating the work of the various departments and for the development of war efficiency to the highest degree, was recommended by the National Civil Service Reform League at its annual meeting last night at the City Club. The plan for a "business assistant" to the President, which was drawn and approved by the council of the league some weeks ago, was outlined by President Richard Henry Dana of Boston as follows:

"This department would be headed by a Secretary who, acting under the President, should be general manager of the great national corporation of the United States of America. The President should have such an aid, a Cabinet officer without portfolio, to relieve him of the purely administrative duties that have been imposed on him."

President Dana was re-elected. New officers elected to the Board of Vice Presidents were: George Burnham, Jr., Philadelphia; George McAneny, New York; Lucius B. Swift, Indianapolis, and Frederick C. Winkler, Milwaukee. Arthur R. Kimball of Waterbury, Conn., was elected Chairman of the council.

MRS. HARRISON SUES.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 11.—Suit for divorce was filed here today by Mrs. Francis Burton Harrison, wife of the former Governor General of the Philippines and former Congressman from New York City. Judge R. Campbell of Ely, Nev., acted as attorney in filing the suit, in which it is announced cruelty will be alleged as grounds for divorce.

Mrs. Harrison came here yesterday, and went to Hotel del Coronado, where she lived part of last Winter, in which period she is said to have acquired a residence in this State. It is said that an attorney from New York will appear in behalf of Mrs. Harrison when the case comes on the calendar.

The suit was filed just before the closing of the San Diego County Court House today.

Find Stolen Jewelry.

Jewelry valued at $11,000, believed to be the proceeds of a series of house robberies in Nassau County, was found, according to the police, yesterday, part of it in pawn shops and the rest in the home at 924 East 181st Street of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Meyer. Sheriff Lucius Greene arrested Meyer last Saturday as he was leaving the home of James A. Greene, at Woodmere, L. I.

Mrs. Meyer was arrested yesterday at her home, and the search there, the police said, led to the discovery of part of the jewelry, and a tour of the pawn shops discovered the rest of it.

CALLS WAR BOYCOTT AMERICAN WEAPON

Germany, Even if Victorious, Would Know We Could Wield It, Says Sydenham.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 11.—Lord Sydenham, whose advocacy of the employment of economic force against Germany has been detailed in dispatches to THE NEW YORK TIMES, was much interested in the article on the same subject by Walter Wellman recently published in THE NEW YORK TIMES. He said today:

"The article is very good, but Mr. Wellman does not make his meaning perfectly clear. He says: 'The world now holds this power over the future, but does not use it,' and he seems to hint that we could end the war without going on with the use of barbaric weapons. The power he refers to is the control of the seas by a naval league of nations. This power cannot be used now.'

"Supposing the Germans forced the British Army back to the sea, took Paris and overran France, France would be forced to a peace which, like that imposed on Russia, would contain every economic condition which Germany desired for the future. Italy would be treated in the same way. If we could be fed, of course we could hold on, whatever happened, but U-boats in numbers based on Channel ports and multitudinous airplanes two hours from London might make our life almost impossible.

"That is where the essential difference of the position of America lies. No German victory could materially affect America. Her army in France might be lost, but her home territory would be secure. That is why the threat I spoke about might have a tremendous effect on Germany. The Germans would know that America would in any case be able to carry it out, and, as America is not bound to make peace on the same terms as the Allies and is free to make any terms she chooses, her position is one of peculiar strength and is peculiarly dangerous to Germany."

A. J. Spender, editor of The Westminster Gazette, is one of those who believe the economic weapon is one of the means the Allies should employ against Germany, even if it could have no immediate effect on the present crisis. He believes it would help to encourage and unite the Allies and must have an effect on German resolution.

"But I do not believe," he said, "that it will be of any avail against the militarist rulers of the Central Powers. They simply cannot understand commercial necessities and think only in military terms. I have reason to believe that the commercial and industrial magnates of Germany thoroughly understand the immense power in the hands of the Allies through their command of the seas and their control of a large proportion of the raw materials of the world. They are full of apprehension as to the future of German commerce and industry if the Allies agree to boycott them, but they are powerless to influence their Government. They have made the strongest representations to the Kaiser and to Ludendorff, but without effect. The German militarist party has no conception of the possibilities of sea power, and so long as it declines to listen to its own commercial leaders action by the Allies along this line will be equally ineffectual. It is the German Government, not the German people, that we must influence if we are to accomplish anything at the present moment."

Mr. Spender was doubtful of the expediency of threatening to make the length of exclusion of Germany from commercial comity depend on the length of German resistance. He thought it impossible for any Government to pledge itself now to a definite course and action in the future, considering how rapidly and completely its own condition might change. Germany would realize that definite, detailed threats were futile, and the effect of such action would be only weakened.

He would, however, have a brief joint statement from the Allies issued at the earliest possible moment adopting the principle of commercial non-intercourse until Germany squared herself with the Allies' idea of what a civilized State should be. He was convinced that this could never be absent from the calculations of the German commercial and industrial classes; it would be a stubborn fact they would have to take into account, and although it would not at the moment budge the militarist leaders an inch, it would put a relentless pressure on the commercial magnates in favor of reform and would drive them to renewed efforts to change the character of the Government under which they live.

GETS STEEL IN FRANCE.

Pershing Obtaining 750,000 Tons of Products There and in England.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Testimony of Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board and J. Leonard Replogle, Director of Steel Supplies for the War Industries Board, given before the Senate Commerce Committee several days ago in executive session, was made public today and disclosed that General Pershing has obtained 750,000 tons of steel products from the French and British Governments to meet urgent needs in France, with an agreement to replace the tonnage in plates, projectiles and other forms from the United States. American mills now are working to capacity, the witnesses said, to meet the demands of the allied countries and the requirements of the United States.

Mr. Replogle told the committee he did not believe it practical for the Government to arrange to send steel to fabricating plants as far west as Omaha, Neb., when the fabricated material must be shipped back to the East to be used in ship construction. Other testimony had indicated a belief that this would be practicable.

BUSINESS LEADERS HEAR SHIP PLEAS

BEDFORD DEFENDS WILSON

Says War Work Is Being Well Done—Warns of Conserving Gasoline.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Ships and gasoline were the chief themes which the Chamber of Commerce of the United States discussed today in its group sessions here.

Lord Reading, British Ambassador to the United States, dwelt on the need of a "bridge across the Atlantic" in a speech at the Auditorium Theatre at night.

The Ambassador also said that Germany would fail to smash through the western front as France and Britain, aided by American troops, would hold the western gate against the Kaiser.

"Germany's one chance," he said, "is to continue its attacks, but the Allies have no fear or doubt of beating them back. America, perhaps, does not realize how vital was the action of President Wilson in allowing American troops to be brigaded with the French and British.

"The whole importance of an attack of this kind is that it should succeed completely. If it does not, the cost of the attack is infinitely greater than is warranted by the success, even counting the success to the utmost, as we know it."

A warning that automobile owners should not use a gallon of gasoline except for some useful end was sounded by A. C. Bedford, Chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company. He pointed out that since the beginning of 1916 the number of automobiles and motor trucks in America had doubled, until they now totaled approximately 5,000,000. In terms of oil, this means the use of about 50,000,000 barrels of gasoline. Exports to the Allies last year came to 8,000,000 barrels.

Reduced to its elements by Mr. Bedford, the problem is: The demand for gasoline this year will be about 60,000,000 barrels. The production last year was between 50,000,000 and 55,000,000 barrels.

Mr. Bedford said the outlook was encouraging, but the development of motor truck transportation was being rapidly pushed by the Government.

"Let me repeat," said Mr. Bedford, "because I feel very deeply the seriousness of it, every consumer of gasoline must endeavor to purge himself of his chance of reproach because of any unnecessary use or waste of gasoline, remembering there is still great demand for our own and our allies' war needs."

Rebukes Administration Critics.

At the end of his address Mr. Bedford in emphatic terms rebuked critics of President Wilson's administration. He said that alarmists and detractors had spread wild stories, but that the facts were that everywhere in Washington the war activities were organized on a plane of high efficiency, and that the "business battalion" which President Wilson had gathered about him was meeting every problem silently but successfully.

"I am not a defender of the men who are handling the work of the Government," he said. "I hold no brief for the Administration. But I would be lacking in frankness if, after my own experience at Washington, I withheld a tribute to these men; these tried and proved generals of our industrial armies, who have grappled with the Government's problems, and who are silently, quietly, and, I say here and now, successfully working them out.

"I think you will admit that I, like yourselves, have had opportunity to study problems of production and administration, to analyze the qualities in men and organizations which develop successful undertakings, and I feel that you will accept unreservedly my testimony to the high efficiency of what might be called President Wilson's 'business battalion.'

"President Wilson, in drafting the best experience of the business world, has not inquired as to the political affiliations of any business man whose services were required. They, in turn, recognize in him, not the leader of a party, but the leader of the American people, and as a result of their close contact with the Government they have gained knowledge of the soundness of the President's policies."

Australia Calls for Ships.

"Hurry up with the ships," was the cry from Crawford Vaughan, former Premier of South Australia, who is in America, speaking at the invitation of the United States Government. "If the output of 1918 amounts to 3,000,000 gross tons, America will have done well. That will be equal to fifteen times the production of 1915. Help an hour too late is worse than useless; we must turn every energy to building the bridge of ships now."

A declaration that America may produce 4,000,000 dead weight tons of merchant shipping in 1918 was made by George J. Baldwin, Chairman of the Board of the American International Shipbuilding Corporation, which conducts the Hog Island plant.

"On June 30, 1914," he said, "we estimated a total of 49,000,000 gross tons of merchant shipping then existing in the world. By Jan. 1, 1918, this had decreased to 44,000,000 tons, and, after deducting enemy tonnage interned, neutral tonnage tied up, and tonnage in military use, the available tonnage for commerce was reduced to 29,999,999, or about 59 per cent. of the original total.

"At the present time it seems possible to produce in the United States during 1918 about 4,000,000 deadweight tons of merchant ships, and approximately an equal amount in all the other countries combined, with a very material increase in American production for 1919 and subsequent years."

Tells of German Man Power.

Lieut. Col. I. Thord-Gray, late commander of the Eleventh Northumberland Fusiliers, now a military speaker for the Emergency Fleet Corporation, spoke on the military man-power problem.

"The Germans have a great mine of man power still unexhausted and more available for delivery at a given point at the front than the Allies' armies," he said. "That is why they are able to make surprise attacks, such as the one in the north recently.

"The enemy will be stopped there, as before, and I expect his final attack will be made south of Verdun. We are now killing about 100,000 of the enemy a month, and in order to win the war we must kill about 4,000,000."

To give an idea of the casualties to date, Colonel Gray said that if the killed, permanently disabled, and prisoners were placed shoulder to shoulder, the line would stretch from New York to San Francisco and back, and there would be 2,000,000 to spare.

MINORS ASKED FOR SALARY GUARANTEE

INTERNATIONAL TO SUFFER

New Organization May Be Unable to Put Up $10,000 Surety Planned Now.

The National Commission is seriously considering a plan to place all the minor leagues under bonds to protect the ball players in the event of the organizations suspending before the season is finished. There were so many complaints to the commission from minor league players last season that much of its time during the last Winter was taken up with these cases. As the minor leagues are uncertain about the coming season, it was predicted by baseball men yesterday that if the commission insists on clubs putting up a bond, the result will be a general suspension of minor league ball throughout the country.

The fact that the commission is considering asking a bond of $10,000 from all Class AA clubs will have an important bearing on the new International League, which is scheduled to meet here for organization today. There is much doubt about starting the season any way, and if a $10,000 security is demanded by the commission, it is fairly certain that it will mean the suspension of the league. The league as it plans to organize includes Toronto, Rochester, Baltimore, Jersey City, Syracuse, Binghamton, Buffalo, and Newark. With a bond of $10,000 demanded from each of these clubs to insure the salaries of their players for the coming season it is a question whether they would attempt to start the season on May 1 as they now plan to do.

Last season the Buffalo Club went bankrupt, and the cases of the players, who have not yet received all their last year's salaries, are now in the hands of the commission, while these players were all declared free agents several weeks ago. The National Commission does not want a repetition of the Buffalo affair during the coming season, and for this reason deems it advisable to protect the players from the start and save a lot of trouble in the future.

The new International League club owners took in Syracuse and Binghamton of the old New York State League on the supposition that Sunday baseball would be permitted next season by the passage of the baseball measure now before the Legislature. As this bill has only a slight chance of becoming a law it would not be surprising if the new International League decided not to attempt to operate. The new President of the organization, John H. Farrell, will strongly advise the club owners to start the season if for no other reason than to protect the territory from invasion by other leagues.

The entry of Newark into the new organization is problematical because James H. Price, who was the head of the old Newark Club, has withdrawn. There is an incumbrance of $9,000 on the old Newark organization due to the Brooklyn Club, and if new owners take up the Newark franchise, they will also probably have to assume this responsibility.

The National Commission proposes that all minor leagues operating under the protection of the National Agreement file bonds of graded amounts. It is planned to have a $10,000 bond from Class AA clubs, $7,500 bonds from Class A clubs, and so on down the scale, so that all the minor league players will be fully protected. The minor league game, however, at best is such a gamble that it is not believed that the operators of the bush organizations will care to put up guarantees.

Wesleyan to Meet Trinity Again.

YANKS DUE HOME TODAY.

Scheduled to Play Dodgers, but Game May Be Abandoned.

The first exhibition game of the season is slated for Ebbets Field this afternoon at 3:30, when the Yankees and Dodgers will give the fans a chance to see what the clubs are going to look like. When this game was arranged, way back last Winter, there was every reason to believe that on April 12 there would be some indication of Spring weather in these parts. The two ball clubs which have been training in the sunny South approached the city today after encountering some weather which was reminiscent of Jan. 1.

If there is a decided change in the weather before this afternoon the clubs will play, but it is not likely that they will expose their high-salaried arms to the raging elements and spoil all the good that has been derived at the spring training camps.

The Yankees have shown up well thus far in their exhibition games against the Boston Braves, and it looks as if the club was going to be a big improvement under the management of Miller Huggins. The lineup which has been tried out in the South, consisting of Gilhooley, Miller, Pratt, Pipp, Baker, Bodie, and Peckinpaugh, composes a bunch of heavy hitters which should place the Yanks well up in the American League race. They have been hitting the ball hard, an encouraging symptom which Yankee clubs of the past have not always shown.

While the Dodgers got away to a bad start at Hot Springs against the Boston Red Sox, there has been great improvement in the playing of the club since Manager Robinson gave the infield a shaking up. With Ray Schmand, a recruit first baseman, playing at second base, the infield has been on its toes and has won some impressive victories from the Red Sox, which ranks among the best clubs of the American League.

GIANTS HAVE IDLE DAY.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 11.—The Giants and Cleveland were unable to play today on account of cold weather. This is the first taste of winter the teams have encountered since they left Texas. The Giants went out to the Park and had a short fielding practice. Mallee complained of a sore throat and did not wear a uniform but expects to be in harness tomorrow. The men leave tonight for Chattanooga and on Saturday will reach Lexington, Ky. after this game the team will hurry home for the season opening.

Interscholastic Meet to be Held There April 24.

The events will be governed by the rules of the Public Schools Athletic League.

The races are 50-yard swim, 220-yard swim, fancy diving contest from a five-foot board, 100-yard swim, 200-yard relay swim, teams of four boys, each boy swimming fifty yards, and plunge for distance. Entries will close April 20 with Matthew P. Halpin, Chairman of the New York A. C. Athletic Committee.

COCHRAN GETS LEAD IN BALKLINE MATCH

Balkline billiard play of the highest order marked the opening games of the 1,800-point match between Welker Cochran and Young Jake Schaefer at Maurice Daly's Seventh Avenue Academy yesterday. In the afternoon Schaefer, who has not been seen in a tournament or match game in this city in some four years, vanquished the skillful Cochran by a score of 300 to 107, but in the evening game was himself forced to play the part of the loser, when Cochran, with a wealth of sparkling play, overcame the disadvantage of the afternoon and won by 493 to 216. This placed Cochran in the lead by a total count of 800 to 516.

How well the men were playing is indicated by the averages which each established. In the afternoon Schaefer set a mark of 42 6-7, and in the evening for nearly 500 points Cochran averaged 44 9-11. The grand averages for the day's play tell the story, Cochran having a mark of 32 16-17 and Schaefer, 23 12-18. Where averages are so high there must of necessity be many high runs. The best cluster of the day was knit together by Schaefer in the afternoon game when he finished his string with an uncompleted 167. This continuation of this run for 9 at the start of the evening game made the run actually 176.

This series of counts by the son of the Wizard reflected an inheritance of the billiard skill for which his father was famous. To many of those who had seen the Wizard in action in former years there was a striking resemblance in the style of play. During this high run Schaefer demonstrated a resourceful quality of play that surmounted difficulties of position with apparent ease. He made masse shots confidently, and when nursing the ivories along the lines his touch was delicate but sure. In all there was a touch of brilliancy that aroused the applause of the spectators.

Apparently the afternoon game spurred Cochran to greater efforts, and he was rewarded with a bit of playing that even eclipsed the standard that had been set by Schaefer in the afternoon. With a lead of almost 200 to overcome, Cochran started out with determination, and when he began to get into his stride the points fell to his masterful play rapidly. Three times during the evening encounter he stepped along runs of more than a hundred. The first time that he passed the century mark was in the middle game, when he clustered 104. The inning befors the last he clicked off 147 carroms, and finished out his string in the next inning with a count of 120. Such play as this was more than Schaefer could withstand, even though he was mounting into high clusters here and there. His best endeavor brought forth a run of 141.

The match will be continued this afternoon and tonight.

The scores:

Afternoon Game.

Schaefer—75 0 6 14 39 0 147. Total—300. Average—42 6-7. High runs—147 and 75.

Evening Game.

Schaefer—9 2 1 0 141 5 1 14 2 31 10. Total—216. Average—19 7-11. High runs—141, 31.

FROWNS ON COSTLY PRIZES.

The United States National Lawn Tennis Association has approved the use of certificates as trophies in all sanctioned tournaments this season. With the restoration of championships this question has been brought up by clubs which are planning their tennis events.

Julian S. Myrick, Vice President of the National Association, was authorized at the last meeting of the Executive Committee, to prepare a suitable design for such a certificate. "Something similar to the certificates used last Summer in the patriotic tournaments for the benefit of the Red Cross, will be employed this year," says Mr. Myrick.

"Many players have approved this idea, saying that they value the certificates more highly than the usual trophies awarded for winning tournaments. The reason is obvious, for they typify the unusual circumstances under which these events were played, and in years to come they will hold an increasing interest.

"Clubs are not obliged to give certificates if they prefer to give other prizes, for the Executive Committee decided that the matter should be left in the hands of the local tournament committees. However, in view of the fact that the use of inexpensive certificates will leave much more money available for the War Department Fund on Training Camp Activities, it is believed that most clubs and competitors will prefer the certificates."

The use of Liberty Bonds, War Savings Stamps or other negotiable securities as prizes in tournaments sanctioned by the National Association has been disapproved.

BOXING CHAMPION VICTOR.

Charles Pilkington, Union Settlement A. C., New York State amateur boxing champion at 125 pounds, won a well-earned victory in the 130-pound class of the New York Athletic Club's tournament last night. Pilkington was opposed by William Schultz, Boys' Club, in his preliminary encounter, and after an interesting contest the judges decided in favor of the champion.

Schultz furnished a surprise in the first two rounds with his willingness to mix with the titleholder. The Boys' Club boxer's efforts caused him to tire in the third round, however, and Pilkington, jabbing cleverly and effectively, rolled up an advantage in points.

Many knockouts were registered in the four classes in which bouts were held. The finals will be held tomorrow night.

The summaries:

120-Pound Class.—J. M. Reiser, Fordham Club, defeated J. Troop, unattached, three rounds, referee's decision, (judges disagreed;) K. A. Handebode, Morningside A. C., defeated G. Monser, unattached, three rounds, referee's decision.

BOXING BILL IS PASSED.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 11.—Amateur boxing gained a legalized status, distinctive from prize fighting, today when the Senate passed a bill introduced by Senator Lawson of Brooklyn, 31 to 16. The bill gives the right to charge admission to four-round amateur bouts of three-minute rounds, with five-ounce gloves, if the exhibitions are conducted under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union or the Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

The bill was defeated in the Senate last night by a 28-to-16 vote, but Democrats not present at that session voted for the measure today upon reconsideration. It is believed the bill will pass the Assembly.

FINAL PINEHURST TOURNEY.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 11.—A best selected holes tourney brought the Tin Whistles regular season to a close today at Pinehurst. Forty-nine players took part. The contest was won by Tom Morrison of the Oakmont Club, who played six holes going out and six coming in, in 44 with the aid of a handicap of 7, and who incidentally made the best gross round of the day. Judge Sanford, 41, Siseia of Apawamis, handicap 18, was second with 45.

CHAJES LOSES TO JANOWSKI

French Champion Evens Score in Chess Match.

By winning the twelfth game in the match at the Manhattan Cross Club yesterday, D. Janowski, the French champion, equaled the score of Oscar Chajes, New York State champion, who up to yesterday had been leading him from the start. Janowski again resorted to the Sicilian defense, and forthirty moves the contest was fairly even. After the adjournment Chajes gradually lost ground, and Janowski scored the game after forty-five moves had been recorded. The score to date: Chajes, 3; Janowski, 3; drawn, 6.

To Run Relay Title Race Here.

The junior national A. A. U. medley relay championship will be decided as part of the program of the indoor athletic meet of the Thirteenth Regiment Armory A. A., Brooklyn, April 25. Originally this title race was to have been decided with the annual championship meet of the Middle Atlantic Association in Philadelphia, but the depletion in the ranks of members of this association caused an abandonment of the annual title games. The race will be run over one and seven-eighths miles, with four-men teams. The individuals will run 440, 220, 880 yards and one mile.

SWEENEY ENTRANTS VICTORS AT BOWIE

BOWIE, Md., April 11.—Beaten in his last out over a seven-furlong muddy route, J. F. Sweeney's six-year-old gelding Egmont was hardly fancied to make a showing in the mile race, which was the seventh on the card here, today. However, Egmont showed a burst of speed in the last furlong which overhauled Progressive and Napoleon, the favorites, and nipped Progressive at the end by a nose. Egmont paid 15 to 1 in the betting, and scored his third victory in four starts.

Sweeney's Dolina gave the stable a double victory for the day by winning the fourth race, which was the Liberty Bond purse, with the winners being paid in bonds. Dolina, in tight, at 98 pounds, scored impressively.

Plestina May Get Mat Bout.

Harry Pollok announced last night that he was prepared to promote a wrestling match between Marin Plestina, a Chicago grappler, and either Ed (Strangler) Lewis, Joe Stecher, Wladek Zbyszko, or Earl Caddock. Plestina has been clamoring for a match against either of the four wrestlers mentioned, but since his arrival his manager has gone unheeded. In his announcement last night Pollok stated that Plestina was ready to post a binding forfeit for a match.

WILL HOLD DOG SHOW.

Ladies' Kennel Club Decides to Conduct Annual Exhibit.

Any doubts that have existed as to whether the Ladies' Kennel Club of America would hold its annual dog show this year were dispelled yesterday, when at a meeting of the organization it was unanimously decided to conduct the exhibition as usual. The show for many years past has been held on the fair grounds at Mineola, but the Government's action in requisitioning the fair grounds for an aviation field has compelled the officials of this club to look elsewhere for a site. It was thought that Belmont Park would be decided upon, but this site also has been taken over by the Government. No definite location was decided upon at yesterday's meeting, but it was announced that the club officials were negotiating for a place within easy distance of Mineola for the annual show. Miss Lucilla Alger, newly elected president, presided at the meeting.

Friech Wins at Angle Game.

In the play for the Metropolitan three-cushion billiard championship of the Amateur Billiard Association yesterday Harry Friech of Thum's Academy defeated J. Pearson of the Washington Heights Academy by a score of 40 to 23 in a contest at the Washington Heights room. The contest went to ninety-nine innings.

Columbia Postpones Tennis Match.

The tennis match between Columbia and Fordham, scheduled for yesterday afternoon on the Columbia courts, was postponed because of the weather. Should the courts be in condition to permit play on Saturday, the match will take place then.

SWIFT & CO. PENALTY MADE MORE DRASTIC

Must Carry Sign in Their Windows Saying They Are Forbidden to Deal in Eggs.

AN EXAMPLE TO OTHERS

In making public an interpretation of the Federal Food Board's recommendations regarding Swift & Co., ordered to suspend all egg dealings in New York for thirty days from midnight of April 10, and to donate $3,000 in Liberty bonds to the American Red Cross, it became known yesterday that it was the board's intention to let the Swift case serve as an example to all egg and produce merchants under the board's jurisdiction.

Swift & Co., probably the largest wholesale dealers in eggs in this city, through its New York branch, was found guilty of selling eggs at 51 cents a dozen at a time when the maximum price set by the Federal Food Board was 48½ cents. The recommendations of the local food board were sustained on Tuesday at a review of the case before the Bureau of Enforcement of the United States Food Administration at Washington. The following memorandum of an understanding between the Federal Food Board and the company was given out yesterday after a conference between Alan Fox, head of the Bureau of Licenses, and officials of Swift & Co.:

1. Swift's branches located outside of New York City will not during the period of suspension sell or deliver eggs to parties located in New York. It is the intention of the order of the Government that the New York City business in eggs of Swift & Co. is to be suspended for the period named and that said New York City business is not to be carried on indirectly through the instrumentality of branches outside of the city.

Must Divert Consignment.

2. Swift & Co. represent that they have some twelve cars of eggs now rolling to New York. They are directed to divert these cars and not bring them into New York. If any car slips through to New York, Swift & Co. will immediately notify the Federal Food Board of the arrival of this car and will either ship the car out of New York or else place the eggs in temporary storage during the period of suspension.

3. Swift & Co. have now on hand about 800 cases of eggs prepared for the trade of which the major part are good eggs and the balance undergrade eggs. They are either to put these eggs in storage or else ship them out of the city for disposal elsewhere.

4. Swift & Co. have now on hand in New York City several thousand cases of case count eggs. They will be permitted either to store these eggs or in ship them out of the city as the case may be. They are not permitted to bring any further eggs into the city during the period of suspension to be placed in cold storage here.

5. Swift & Co. will be permitted to deliver during the balance of the present week from their stock on hand eggs heretofore sold.

6. Swift & Co. are not permitted to make deliveries to hospitals from their own stock on their contract of March 25, 1918, between themselves and the City of New York. In case they desire to have eggs delivered as per this contract they must secure such deliveries to be made through a subcontract.

7. Swift & Co. are directed to keep conspicuously in the window of each one of their stores which deals in eggs in the City of New York during the period of suspension a sign three and one-half feet wide and two and one-half feet high, reading as follows:

"Swift & Co., by direction of the U. S. Food Administration, is hereby forbidden to buy, sell or otherwise deal in eggs in the City of New York from April 10 to May 10.

By Order of Federal Food Board of New York."

At 32 Tenth Avenue, the main office of Swift & Co., a sign was displayed early yesterday in one of the inner offices, but not where it could be seen by passersby. Later in the days this sign came down.

Orders the Signs.

H. G. Clark, manager of the Privilege Department of the company, said that the Food Board's orders would be fulfilled to the letter; that he did not know until 6 o'clock on Wednesday night that the sign would be required of the company. Signs were then being made by a sign painter in Jersey City, Mr. Clark said.

"Eggs on the way to this city," he added, "will be sent to interior points or stopped at Jersey City. We will handle our country houses from here, the board having granted us that privilege. The small sign which was put up this morning was merely for the information of our employes, and we had no intention of letting it stand as the board's requirement."

The egg business of the "country houses" referred to by Mr. Clark, or branches of Swift & Co. in upper New York State, would be governed by Section 5 of the memorandum, an official of the Food Board said, during the present week, but afterward no eggs could be delivered in other parts of the State from New York City, though the company would be permitted to direct its up-State business from this end.

Charles P. Robinson, Deputy Attorney General of New York State and counsel of the Federal Food Board, has asked United States District Attorney Caffey for indictments in the cases of several wholesale produce dealers said to be doing business without a license from the Food Administration. Two hundred or more complaints against bakers for violation of the 80-20 wheat substitute order are ready for hearing by the Federal Food Board, it was said, and it was probable that by tomorrow the number of complaints would have reached 1,000.

HOOVER ASKS CURB ON WIRE HOUSES

Minor, as Well as Major, Speculation in Grain Condemned by Administrator.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Herbert C. Hoover, the Food Administrator, today asked the recognized exchanges dealing in grains to use their power to end harmful activities of so-called private wire houses. The activities of some of these houses recently, Mr. Hoover said, had been "akin to bucket shop speculation."

The new rules applying to grain exchanges went into effect today. Corn and oats are the principal cereals affected.

Mr. Hoover's message to the exchanges follows:

"In opening the market in corn and oats for trading in June and July futures, without the restrictions of price previously imposed by the exchange but with the restrictions provided against speculation by the new rules adopted by the board, I trust that all members of the exchange realize that this is the greatest test that has yet been applied as to whether it is possible to conduct the legitimate and proper function of the grain exchanges in the fixing of contracts for future delivery, without this very valuable service of the exchanges becoming a tool for speculative manipulation against the interests of the general public.

"It seems to me, also, that, in addition to the restrictions imposed on large trading on speculation, the exchanges should set their faces rigidly against the stimulation of minor speculation through the operation of private wire houses. The majority of the exchange members have long recognized that this type of business in the public mind is akin to bucket shop stock speculation. I am confident that the plan made by the exchanges in good faith to limit these objectives will be accomplished, and, if they can be accomplished on the voluntary basis, without the interference of Federal authority, there will have been established the foundation of a wider confidence through the whole country in exchange trading.

"The success of the exchanges in solving the problem of the elimination of vicious manipulation of the nation's foodstuffs, while preserving the economic value of exchanges, has not only a positively necessary importance during the disturbed conditions of war, but is of permanent value to the trade and the country, and the success or failure of the voluntary plan toward these ends rests absolutely upon the officials of the exchanges themselves.

"HERBERT HOOVER."

ARMY CONQUERS TYPHOID.

Dysentery at Camps Is Also Removed as a Menace.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Official figures obtained nt the office of the Surgeon General show that there have been but eight deaths from typhoid fever in army camps in the United States since Sept. 21, 1917. Dysentery has been stamped out for the first time since wars began. There has not been a single death from this cause and there are no cases now under observation.

The records show that but a single suspected case of typhoid under observation at present. The sick and death rates from this disease are so small as to be considered negligible.

Reports by the Surgeon General's office show that during the Spanish-American war the death rate from typhoid was 8.79 per thousand. If that rate were effective today the American armies, on the basis of 1,500,000 men in the service, would have lost from 13,000 to 15,000 men because of the ravages of this disease alone.

A campaign now being conducted to prevent the outbreak of dysentery in the camps during the Summer, and the officials are confident that it can be held in check. It is believed also that the danger of a large number of deaths from typhoid has been definitely averted as a result of the advanced methods adopted.

Reports from abroad indicate that typhoid as well as dysentery has been stamped out of the overseas army as a result of the system of inoculation and the other sanitary precautions taken.

AMSTER EXPLAINS INQUIRY TO DOCTORS

BUREAUS UNDER ATTACK

Women's Municipal League Fears City Will Return to 'Antiquated Method of Health Administration.'

Dr. J. Lewis Amster, the Health Commissioner, at the request of the Public Health Committee of the Academy of Medicine, last night explained to the committee the objects of the investigation of the Health Department now being conducted by the Municipal Civil Service Commissioner and Commissioner of Accounts David Hirschfield. The meeting of the Academy of Medicine last night was in the nature of a conference. Dr. Amster said that the investigation was to determine whether the directors of the seven bureaus of the Health Department held their places legally under the charter and whether these departments were under proper authority of law.

No action was taken by the Public Health Committee last night, according to Dr. Lewinski-Corwin, who made a statement after the meeting. He said that the Academy of Medicine would await the outcome of the investigation. Dr. Lewinski-Corwin said that body had always been interested in co-operating with the Health Department.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission and the Corporation Counsel, acting on the evidence presented at the hearings being held before James A. MacBride, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission, will determine whether in their opinion the seven bureaus of the Health Department have legal basis for existence. It is reported that in the event of their deciding that the bureaus exist illegally, the Mayor will order the Health Commission to abolish them and divide the work among the Assistant Sanitary Superintendents of the five boroughs.

Among those present at the meeting last night were Dr. Walter B. James, President of the Academy of Medicine; Dr. Charles L. Dana, Chairman of the Public Health Committee; Dr. James Alexander Miller, Dr. Herbert B. Wilcox, and Dr. Frederic Sondern.

A protest against what several speakers termed "dismembering the Health Department," was made yesterday at the annual meeting of the Women's Municipal League at the Hotel McAlpin, and a statement was issued after the meeting which said that "unless public opinion rises in indignant protest the city will lose the services of trained experts," and New York City, in abolishing the bureaus, "will return to the antiquated method of health administration which has been repudiated by every progressive city in the country."

The statement, continuing, said that most of the bureaus were not established under Mayor Mitchel and that they were not Mitchel "fads and frills," but that they were organized under Commissioner Lederle, under the administrations of Mayors Gaynor and McClellan.

"Dr. Josephine Baker has been in the department seventeen years, having assumed her present position as head of the Department of Child Hygiene in 1908, under Commissioner Darlington," the statement said, "while Dr. William H. Park has been with the Health Department twenty-four years, Dr. Robert J. Wilson twenty-two years, and Dr. Harris eleven years." Continuing the statement said:

"Mr. Hylan's claim that these bureau heads and the creation of these bureaus is illegal is utterly false. While the Charter of 1898 did not specifically provide for any bureaus other than the Sanitary Bureau and the Bureau of Records, it certainly did not forbid the creation of other bureaus. Furthermore, no facts have been brought out that would show that the several bureau chiefs did not secure their present positions without going through the necessary civil service promotion examinations."

The investigation yesterday consisted of an examination of the work of the Bureau of Public Health Education, under Dr. Charles F. Bolduan and the Bureau of Laboratories, under Dr. William H. Park. It is expected that when the investigation is resumed at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the office of Chairman MacBride, Dr. Lucius P. Brown, of the Bureau of Food and Drugs, and Dr. Josephine Baker of the Department of Child Hygiene will be witnesses.

ARMY DIRECTS VICE FIGHT.

Washington Sends Officers to Aid Community Camp Men.

Designated as a special operative of the National Comission on Training Camp Activities, Captain T. N. Pfeiffer will come here from Washington in a few days and will open an office for use as headquarters of the investigation of the vice situation and the illegal traffic in liquor to soldiers and sailors. Coincident with Captain Pfeiffer's investigation, the New York War Camp Community Service is planning to furnish men in the service with a series of daily attractions, in order to occupy the time of men off on leave, the policy being, it was said, "elimination by substitution."

Since the War Camp Community Service was started, about seven months ago, five hotel clubs have been organized for the men, dancing and boxing exhibitions have been held, vaudeville shows have been arranged, and other entertainments have been provided for the purpose of interesting uniformed men in the city. These activities will be augmented to include many additional activities, morning, afternoon and evening.

The War Camp Community Service now plans to communicate personally with every soldier on furlough in the city. In this connection, Henry Butterworth, Assistant Director of the organization, said yesterday:

"We are negotiating for some arrangement with the major league ball clubs to take care of the uniformed men at a lesser admission fee than the regular charge; we will try to get the old Washington Park in Brooklyn for baseball for the men and for semi-professional baseball, and for other forms of athletic competition we will make arrangements with the Summer theatricals and movies, through our own department of theatrical entertainments and with the co-operation of the Stage Women's War Relief, to entertain a great number of men in this way on their way to the front."

Prison Sentence for Provision Dealer

In the United States District Court in Brooklyn yesterday Judge Edwin Garvin sentenced John Fitter, a provision dealer, of 120 Bridge Street, who was convicted of delivering short-weight supplies to the City Park Naval Barracks, to serve one year and nine months in the penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., and to pay a fine of $5,000. Moses Prager, Henry Witthohn, and Joseph Katz, drivers, employed by Fitter and convicted with him as accomplices, were sentenced to thirty days in jail. Counsel for the men served notice of an appeal in the case and the prisoners were released on bail. Yeoman George C. Goodman and Chief Commissary Steward Edward Will, who pleaded guilty to their part in the conspiracy, were sentenced to serve six months and one month, respectively.
